RUTH REBELS AGAINST BRIAN'S PLAN OF SEEKING CHEAPER QUARTERS

CHAPTER XVII.

It was Wednesday. Brian had said they would start out to hunt cheaper quarters on Sunday. Ruth turned hot, then cold, as she thought of living in a meaner place than the one she had made as attractive as possible; and which even yet, was an eye-sore to her artistic nature.

She looked at her hands.

"Only back a week, and look at them!" she muttered, holding them up to her gaze. "They look like a scrubwoman's hands already."

Then she returned to her work, to the homely duties she so dispised, her thoughts wandered to the old home in the south. The most trivial things took on wonderous attractions. The scented bath, prepared by mammy Rachel, the flowers on her breakfast tray, the cup of tea served in the late afternoon, all seemed luxuries by contrast with her present condition; but luxuries she no longer could do without.

"I'll do it!" she exclaimed as she put away the last dish. Then she turned pale at her temerity.

"Why shouldn't I?" she continued her soliloquy. "Other women do things. I'm sure it's no more degrading than washing pots and pans in a kitchen; even if it is your own kitchen." If what her aunt had told her were true, and she had no doubt it was, her work was as good as any. Of course she wouldn't expect a professional's pay—not until she had proved her ability. But even if she worked for very little to start with, she could use that little to hire a maid, and keep the home.

Brian shouldn't find fault, if I want to help him," she soothed her conscience, as she recalled his dislike to a woman doing anything outside of the home. Many times she had heard him express his opinion and never had disagreed with him. For one reason, she had always heard her aunt talk the same way. Then having been brought up in the way she had been, she had unconsciously absorbed the same ideas herself—to a certain extent But youth is more pliable, especially feminine youth, and Ruth reasoned that if it was au fait for other women to be faddists, and use that to excuse their breaking into business, it was also perfectly proper to go into business because you hated to wash dishes and scrub floors.

But how was she to go at it?

She looked through the advertisements in the papers; but there seemed to be a peculiar lack of decorators wanted. Suppose, after all, she could find no one to employ her? The thought fixed her determination not to talk of her plan to Brian until it had materialized.

"He would laugh at me,—perhaps," she said to herself.

That night Brian complained of his dinner. Ruth knew she had not taken as much pains as usual; her mind was upon other things. The steak was overdone, the potatoes soggy.

"It seems to me when you don't have anything else to do, you might cook the meals so a man could eat them," he said impatiently. Things had been discouraging at the office. He was tired and hungry, and the badly cooked, unappetizing dinner added the last straw to his discomfort.

"If I had something else to do, he wouldn't expect me to cook." Ruth thought, but said nothing At another time, his impatience would have made her weep but now her mind was taken up with other things. She was sorry, of course, that Brian didn't enjoy his dinner; but she never would be a good housekeeper. He might as well understand it. Perhaps it might make him more willing she should try to earn money, and hire some one who could cook and please him.

"Try the coffee, Brian. That's good, I know."

Coffee and bread and butter arn't very substantial for a man's dinner, especially if he's tired and hungry," he replied in a milder tone as she carried his plate of steak and potatoes away almost untouched.

"I know, dear. But you see I wasn't raised to be a cook," she replied, laughing at him.

"No! if the time you have spent fussing with paints and paper, changing over rooms and putting on bow windows, had been spent learning to cook, we might have been more comfortable."

"Why should I spend my time in the kitchen? Aunt had cooks enough."

"You might possibly have learned something."

"Oh, no! you don't understand the niggers, Brian They don't respect white people who do their work."

"Oh, well, never mind. I feel better now; I didn't mean to be cross. This coffee is dandy."

"Yes aunt said I made delicious coffee."

The dinner over, Brian retired behind his paper; and Ruth, after she had cleared away, looked over her wardrobe trying to decide which dress and hat she better wear when she started out on the morrow. She had made up her mind. She would go to the interior decorating shops and try to get a position. But she would say nothing to Brian until she was obliged to.

And Brian, when he finished his paper, was so sorry that he had been cross about the dinner, that he proposed they go somewhere and spend the remainder of Mrs. Clayborn's check for a rarebit.

AVOID HARSH PILLS! DOCTORS CONDEMN THEM

Most Pills unfortunately are harsh and drastic; they cause inflammation and great discomfort. Rather like nature is the way a pill should act, mildly but effectively. Science has established nothing more satisfactory as a family pill than the old reliable pills of Dr. Hamilton's, which for forty years have had a premier place in America. Dr. Hamilton's Pills are very mild and can be effectively used by the aged, by children, and indeed by men and women of all ages. No stomach or bowel medicine is more reliable. No remedy for indigestion, headache or biliousness is so effective, so mild, so certain to quickly cure as a 25c. box of Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

Children Love Cascarets—10c

Candy cathartic is harmless to tender stomach, liver and bowels

Your child is bilious, constipated and sick. Its little tongue is coated, breath is bad and stomach sour. Get a 10-cent box of Cascarets and straighten the youngster right up. Children love this harmless candy cathartic and it cleanses the little liver and thirty feet of bowels without griping. Cascarets contain no calomel and can be depended upon to move the sour bile and poison right out of the bowels. Best family cathartic because it never cramps or sickens like other things.

A CURIOUS HISTORY.

The Life of Sir William Cavendish, With a Comment by Pepys.

Sir William Cavendish, known in English history as the first Duke of Newcastle, was commander of King Charles I.'s first royal army in his contest with Cromwell. Sir William's second wife, the Duchess Margaret, wrote a life of her husband, in which she depicted him as a "most illustrious prince" and in every respect the pink of perfection.

The work was supposed to be entirely authentic and truthful, for Sir William himself assisted in its preparation. It was published early in 1667, and many complimentary copies were sent out, including one to the officials of St. John's college, Cambridge university. In acknowledging its receipt they wrote:

"Your excellency's book will not only survive our university, but hold date even with time itself, and incontinently this age by reading your book will lose its barbarity and rudeness, being made tame by the elegance of your style and manner."

But old Samuel Pepys was not quite so favorably impressed. In his celebrated "Diary," under date of March 18, 1667, he made this entry: "Staid at home reading the ridiculous history of my Lord Newcastle, wrote by his wife, which shows her to be a mad, conceited, ridiculous woman and he an asse to suffer her to write what she writes to him and of him."—Exchange.

Women Praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for Health Restored.

In almost every neighborhood in America are women who have tried this standard remedy for female ills and know its worth.

Athol, Mass.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me a world of good I suffered from a weakness and a great deal of pain every month and nothing brought me any relief until I tried this famous medicine. I am a different woman since I took it and want others who suffer to know about it."—Mrs. ARTHUR LAWSON, 559 Cottage St., Athol, Mass.

San Francisco, Cal.—"I was in a very weak nervous condition, having suffered terribly from a female trouble for over five years. I had taken all kinds of medicine and had many different doctors and they all said I would have to be operated on, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured me entirely and now I am a strong well woman."—Mrs. H. ROSSKAMP, 1447 Davisadero St., San Francisco, Cal.

WINDING THE CLOCK.

Follow This System and You May Get More Accurate Time.

You cannot secure the best services from a good watch or clock unless you know how to wind them so as to cause the least wear and irregularity in their delicate machinery.

A watch should be wound at the same time every day. If allowed to run down or even almost do so and then wound up until it will not wind any further it cannot do as perfect work as a watch that is not allowed to run to its full capacity or wound up until it is as tight as it can be made.

If a watch is wound both morning and evening at about the same hour and the key is given only enough turns to wind it a little less than half what it could be wound the watch will run more evenly, wear much longer and keep more accurate time than if it is wound up right once a day.

A watch spring will last longer if it is wound when there is the least extreme of temperature, and morning and evening are, of course, the best in that respect.

It is more or less dangerous to wind a watch during a heavy electric storm, and it is best to avoid winding while on an electric car.

An eight day clock should be wound twice a week at as regular periods as possible to secure the best results. Never allow the clock to run down, and if possible do not wind it until it is tight.

Learn by experience just how many turns of the key it takes to wind the clock to run eight days and then when half of the week is gone wind the clock by giving the key just half as many turns as it would require to wind it all the way. More accurate time will be had and it will avoid placing any of the parts in a strain, which is frequently the cause of good clocks giving out in some particular before they have served half as long as they should.

A little attention to this advice will lengthen the life of any watch or clock and make it a better timepiece.

The Thriftiest Parson.

A supreme example of thrift was the Rev. Robert Walker—the "Wonderful Walker." For the greater part of his life Walker was curate of Leatherwaite, Cumberland, commencing there with a stipend of £5 per annum. His wife brought him a fortune of £40, and on the interest of this and his £5 annually Walker reared a family of eight. When after twenty years his stipend was raised to £17 10s. a year he contrived to save. And not only did the family "live well, though plainly," but, as he declared with justifiable pride, his children never lacked any of the necessaries of life and were given an education to fit them for any rank of society, the boys, indeed, going to one of the universities.—London Standard.

Sand Swept Asia.

In the arid lands of central Asia the air is reported as often laden with fine detritus, which drifts like snow around conspicuous objects and tends to bury them in a dust drift. Even when there is no apparent wind the air is described as thick with fine dust, and a yellow sediment covers everything. In Khotan this dust sometimes so obscures the sun that at midday one cannot see to read the print without a lamp.

Where Scotland Joins England.

The width of the island of Great Britain at the point of contact between England and Scotland is about sixty miles. The river Tweed divides the two countries for a few miles at the east, and the Cheviot hills serve as a boundary for the greater part of the rest of the distance.

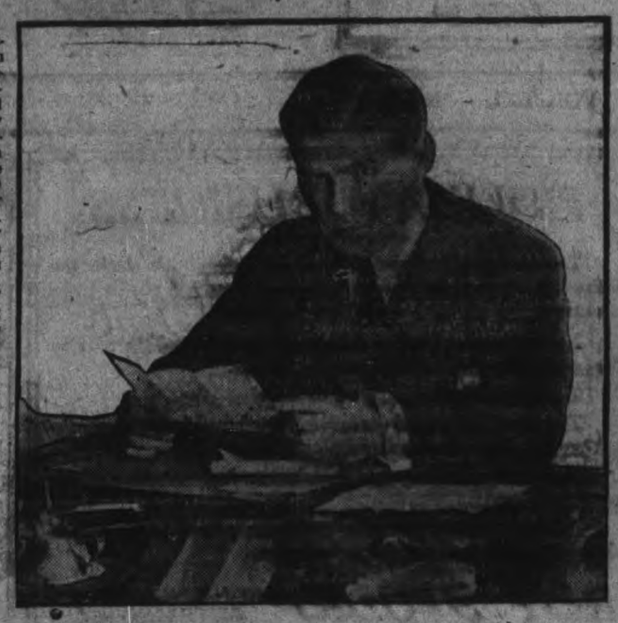
Quite So.

"Here somebody says that electric currents can be made to take the place of food in sustaining life."

"What a shocking theory!"

I count life just the stuff to try the soul's strength on.—Browning.

The New President of the C.P.R.



MR. E. W. BEATTY.

THE Presidency of so vast a system as that of the Canadian Pacific Railway is no easy position to fill—so varied are the interests and covering so large and manifold a territory. The railway itself has eighty thousand employees and more mileage even than any of the great systems of the United States—no less than 18,600 miles of track being operated or controlled from Montreal. The C. P. R. Telegraphs comprise over 100,000 miles of wire with no less than 15,000 offices where messages may be received. The C. P. R hotels, involving an investment of over $25,000,000 and representing eighteen caravanserais from the small station hotel to the huge edifices at Quebec, Winnipeg, Calgary, Banff, Lake Louise, Vancouve, and Victoria—the Vancouver Hotel, for instance, having establishment of 650 rooms—involve great responsibility. Then there are the lands in Western Canada with the $17,000,000 irrigation scheme west of Calgary and the extensive colonization programme of ready-made farms and the like. The mining and smelting interests of the C. P. R. in British Columbia are also considerable, involving not only a large investment of capital but also relations with a labor element which has been somewhat difficult to manage. Then again there are the great Angus Shops at Montreal, with other large shops also at Winnipeg and Calgary, where so much of the rolling stock and equipment is built and repaired.

Subsidiary to the railway company itself are the Canadian Pacific Ocean Services, representing one of the largest passenger fleets of the world, amounting to almost 400,000 tons, and providing one of the most vital links between Europe and the Orient.

As a common carrier the railway serves all the large interests of Canada—agricultural, industrial and commercial—and is naturally in close touch with the big financial institutions, several of which are represented on the Board of Directors. The opinion of the President on financial questions carries enormous weight in England, which naturally takes most interest in such American financial movements as affect the component parts of the British Empire.

Owing to its economic position the Canadian Pacific is naturally of great interest to the political leaders at Ottawa, and no economic legislation is likely to be brought forward by any Government without obtaining at least an expression of opinion from the Canadian Pacific President. In this respect it is known that the leaders at Ottawa have the greatest respect for the capable judgment of Mr. E. W. Beatty, who, in spite of his comparative youth, has proved in many cases his mature and sound economic judgment.

No finer description could be given to the new President of the C. P. R. than the tribute paid by Lord Shaughnessy, in the official statement regarding his successor:—"One who has shown notable administrative ability, and who enjoys to a marked degree the confidence not only of the political and business leaders of Canada, but also of the employees of the Canadian Pacific Railway itself."

Among the many public expressions that of the Toronto Globe is interesting, and follows:—"Railway history has many chapters of personal romance, but it has few parallels to the career of Mr. E. W. Beatty, who at the age of forty-one, becomes the head of the greatest transportation system in the world. Even in this classic continent of opportunity his advance has been sensational. Mr. Beatty is the first Canadian-born president of the C. P. R., a sign that Canada has no longer any need of looking beyond her borders for railway talent of the highest class."

Mr. Beatty was born in Thorold, Ontario, forty-one years ago, of Canadian parents—his father being Henry Beatty, a prominent steamship owner. He graduated from Toronto University, studied law, and entered the C. P. R. service in 1901, in the legal department. He was appointed vice-president in 1914, and director in 1916.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

"Too Old"

By VICTOR REDCLIFFE

"You see the big entrance to the factory. Beyond, a great broad stairway leading to the offices. After that the draughting rooms. Then building after building, pattern lofts, machine rooms, molding floors. Well, thirty years, boy and man, I've gone up those stairs, kept going till I mounted higher and higher, and became superintendent, then—follow me a bit, and I'll show you the other side of the picture."

Thus Gabriel Purcell, sturdy old disciplinarian of fifty. He did not look it, he did not feel it. His voice was clear as a clarion note, his eye was full of fire and power. Just a wee stoop of the shoulders threw the stalwart figure out of direct plumb line, and the silvering hair was touched with the first frost of time and winter.

He carried a magnificent gold-headed cane under his arm, disdaining its use as a support and only taking it with him for company because it was the cherished gift of some cheap shovel men in the factory, who loved him and his just, helpful way as if he had been an own father to them. Gabriel Purcell led his companion, an old-time friend, making a brief visit to the town, around the great stone wall inclosing the plant, and then swung his cane to where a long steep chute ran from the upper floor of the tin specialty shops to the barren rear yard. Down it was now pouring the scraps, refuse, waste of the factory.

"The dump head—see it, Farleigh?" questioned the old man bitterly. "That's me—in at the front, rushed through, worked out and thrown on the dump head!"

At that same hour Thomas Wynne, head of the great Wynne company, sat facing his attorney in his private office.

"The fact is, Wynne, isn't it that Purcell is Osterized," submitted the latter.

"Don't use the word jauntily, Randall," returned the founder, "but that about covers it. You don't know how it jars on me to face the merest imputation of injustice regarding Purcell. He has been my right hand since I started in here with a little twenty by forty shed of a shop, and has helped build the business up to its present up-to-date proportions. You know how fifteen years ago my wife inherited a large estate and supplied one hundred and fifty thousand dollars capital to expand the enterprise. Well, recently a younger brother of hers, what you may call a mechanical theorist and ultra-system man, got the idea in his head that he could come in here and double up profits in a year."

"But what interest has he in the business?"

"None, except through the courtesy of my wife and some relatives who are also stockholders. Of course I can't gainsay her. Her estate owns considerable of the company stock. She helped build me up. I can't afford to quibble with her. I had to supercede Purcell. My brother-in-law is now in charge of the mechanical departments. Younger men, stricter rules, more business, higher profits, his aim. We shall see how it works out." Mr. Wynne sighed.

"We shall, indeed," muttered the lawyer cynically.

"Yes, that isn't all, Randall," resumed the manufacturer. "I am approaching a delicate subject. You know that Purcell has a son who is the pride of his soul and the apple of his eye, Arnold Purcell."

"Yes," nodded the lawyer, and it was palpably apparent that the mention aroused pleasant sentiments. "A fine young man, an exceptional one, they say. Capable, ambitious, high grade. I hear that he has won quite some eminence as an advanced sanitary engineer."

"Very well, by some strange freak of destiny he and my daughter, Elsinore, met at a social function in the city. Plainly, they are in love with each other. I am no aristocrat, I sprung from nothing, as did Gabriel Purcell. My wife, however, as you know, draws the line at social distinctions, or rather those of wealth. She has flatly told young Purcell that Elsinore must never marry a man who has not as large a fortune as her own."

"And Arnold Purcell?"

"Asks time to make good the condition."

"Great for him! He'll make it," declared the lawyer with confidence.

"The young man has not advised his father or others of his love affairs," said Wynne. "He and Elsinore seem to have settled down to sensible, dignified patience and mutual fidelity. He does not intrude himself upon her company. He is pursuing the even tenor of his way, and she is content. It is the father I worry about. I want you to go and see him, and here is the memoranda of what I want to do for him."

Mr. Randall departed with his instructions. He found Purcell at his home. The latter had been a widower for many years and lived in a comfortable, but small house at the edge of the town. It overlooked a deep pit nearly a quarter of a mile in extent, to which a spur of the railroad ran. For ten years a soft limestone quarry had been mined here to supply slag mixture for the big blast furnaces. The entire property belonged to Purcell, but was of little apparent value. He greeted Mr. Randall civilly.

"I've come from your best friend," spoke the lawyer. "He wants you to accept a pension, a free and clear town residence, an automobile and—"

Gabriel Purcell burst out into a hearty laugh. He held in his hand a letter he had just received from his son. He was strangely changed from the wandering misanthrope of the early morning.

"Stop right there, Mr. Randall," he said heartily. "I understand Mr Wynne and he understands me. The new experiment is forced on him, and no hard feelings. It won't go through. Remember what I say, that before a year is out I'll be back and the old system resumed. And say," and the old man's eyes glowed, "I'll be able to help him out if he finds he's cramped for capital."

The lawyer eyed Purcell as though he was getting rid of his senses.

"Oh, I'm not talking wild," chuckled the old man. He waved the letter in his hand towards the old quarry pit. "I own that, you know."

"That hole in the ground, you mean?"

"Exactly, and it's going to be a gold mine."

"I can't make out Purcell," reported the lawyer to Mr. Wynne. "He talks millions. He's got some dream of wealth and he seems happy as a lark. He says he'll be back in a year."

"I honestly hope it," groaned Mr Wynne. "Already some of the modern efficiency tactics of the new superintendent have set the older working gangs by the ears, and they are quitting by the score."

Mr. Wynne put himself out of the way to meet Purcell whenever he could. He was surprised, pleased and gratified to note the glad, sincere welcome of the discarded faithful old fellow worker. Purcell was more than friendly, he was cheerful, loquacious and referred constantly to his "vacation," and blinked jocularly at the founder and referred to "the good old times coming back all new."

Then came a period of care and trouble for the plant. A good many of the old expert workmen sought new fields of labor. The new superintendent took a large contract at a loss in rushing a special order they forfeited the trade of one of their oldest and most substantial clients.

M. Enwhile, something that puzzled the townspeople was going on at the old quarry. Near the edge of the big pit new tracks were laid, a large weighing scale put in, derricks erected, and scoops, elevating and lowering machinery. Purcell bustled about the busiest, cheeriest being ever was, and his son Arnold made frequent inspection visits to the old home at the quarry pit.

One day, like a thunderclap, came the news that the big plant was shut down pending a reorganization. The new superintendent had resigned. Some outside stockholders had become alarmed at the reports of fast shrinking profits, and had thrown their holdings on the market at a ruinous decline.

That very morning a train of 50 gondola dump cars gracefully wound round from the main railroad tracks and half encircled the quarry pit. Each car was weighed, the contents dumped and the train returned to the city. Ashes, building debris, all the daily accumulated rubbish and waste of a great city was represented in this first dumping into that useless, valueless, almost fathomless quarry pit.

Thomas Wynne looked up from his desk in the office of the deserted plant as Gabriel Purcell entered. The founder's face was worn and drawn.

"Is it as bad as they say?" questioned Purcell.

"Worse. Outside of my wife's capital I have no resources. I must have two hundred thousand dollars to get back where we were before this ghastly experiment was made, or go into bankruptcy."

"Good!" cried Purcell animatedly. "I'll provide the deficit amount for a like amount of stock."

"You?" cried Wynne incredulously.

"Myself and my son, yes. You see, old friend, the quarry pit. Arnold is the head expert in recovery and disposal work for the city. We are only 12 miles away, and the nearest available dumping pit. They have been carrying the refuse out into the lake, but the barge rates have become prohibitive. In fact, we have a ten years' contract for disposing of the rubbish at forty cents a cubic yard. Fifty cars a day and all profit, but the weighing. Figure it up, and don't wonder that we are able to anticipate a million in payment any time we want it."

"And you propose—"

"To go back to my old job and run the plant on the old safe, sensible basis. Old friend," suggested Purcell, with twinkling eyes, "did it happen to occur to you that in Osterizing the plant you forgot that you were ten years older than myself?"

And then when affairs had been readjusted and Arnold Purcell qualified fully as a meet suitor for pretty, patient Elsinore, and the old cheerful hum of industry cheered the contented workmen at the plant, Thomas Wynne and Gabriel Purcell, again in the right groove, felt as though they had stepped back into the magic enthusiasm of their earlier years.

GOT RID OF BRONCHITIS.

"I am pleased to say that Dr. Chase's Mr. W. H. Walker, Calmar, Alta., writes: Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has done much good to myself, wife and children. My eldest girl, seven years old, had bronchitis and the doctor who attended her did not seem to do much good. We got Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine for her and she soon got well. We always keep this medicine in the house now ready for use and find that it soon cures coughs and colds."

WHY DO TOPS SPIN?

Even Scientists Would Like To Know More About It.

Few boys ever stop to think why their tops spin. Neither do the grown-ups who pause to watch the top-spinning which is so universally popular every spring.

Yet engineers, astronomers, physicists and inventors would all like to know more than they do about spinning tops. A great many matters of the utmost importance to the human race depend on finding out all we can about this subject.

The earth on which we live is a top. So are Mars, the North Star, the sun itself, and all the other celestial bodies. It is even suspected that atoms and electrons are spinning tops. The dirigible torpedo is a top, the monorail car is a top, the bullet sped by a gun is a top.

A new form of compass, called the "top" or gyroscopic compass gives direction without being affected by the iron of a battleship or the rolling and pitching of the steamer.

All speed machinery has "top" action, which must be reckoned with. Rotary engines, turbines, Diesel engines and all machines which drive fly wheels and propellers have the spinning top behavior.

Submarines, aeroplanes and dirigible balloons would be more stable and less dangerous, if we could only solve the mystery of a spinning top's action.

The gyroscope is a toy top within a tin rim. It is made of a heavy rimmed metal fly wheel mounted in a frame. Friction is reduced to a minimum by the spindle rotating on ball bearings. Thus a great velocity is possible. Engineers and inventors learned from boys to spin this gyroscopic top. They are always hoping for a clear understanding of the spin.

The gyroscopic action of the paddle wheels of a steamer exerts a steadying effect upon the vessel at the expense of her steering qualities. The effect of this is to cause the steamer to run away to starboard when acted upon by a cross sea. This makes her turn to starboard when the sea would be expected to send her the other way.

On the other hand, when a paddle steamer is steered to port she heels over to starboard because of the top-spinning action of her paddles. This causes the wheel on the starboard side to become more deeply immersed in the sea than the port one, and the steering is exaggerated.

The top-spinning action of the fly wheel of an automobile is interesting, too. The axis of an automobile fly wheel runs backward and forward and the flywheel crosswise. If you stand behind an auto you see the wheel revolving as do the hands of a clock. If a man or a woman in a car tries to turn the auto toward the left the flywheel tries to spin its way upward. In consequence a "couple" as it is called, acts on the car and throws the weight of the machine on the back wheels.

When an automobile turns to the right the weight is thrown on the front wheels because of this top-spinning action of the flywheel. Many accidents to motor cars are due to interference with this top-spinning action when turning a corner sharply or at great speed.

Turning a motor boat, a ship's head and an aeroplane, as well as the rolling and pitching of great vessels all bring about unlooked-for catastrophes by virtue of this mysterious top-spinning.

Man and His Tailor.

A man can be measured to the best advantage, tailors say, away from a glass. Standing before a mirror he is almost certain to throw out his chest. If he does not habitually carry it so, and take an attitude that he would like to have rather than the one he commonly holds, whereas the tailor wants him, as the portrait painter wants his subject—in his natural pose and manner. With the man in that attitude the tailor can bring his art to bear, if that is required, in the overcoming of any physical defect and produce clothes that will give the best attainable effect upon the figure as they will be actually worn.

Was Ruskin Conceited?

In one of Ruskin's lectures, though I cannot quote it exactly, he says in effect this, and it is said with great earnestness: "Because I have done harm to no one and good to all, because I have loved truth and hated falsehood, because I have regarded the happiness of others more than my own, you can trust what I say to you, and you will be glad in later years that you have trusted me."

I have heard it quoted as an example of Ruskin's great conceit, but to me it has never seemed to be that. It has seemed to me, rather, a just and not a vain measuring of his powers.—Anne Bryan McCall

THAT SON-IN-LAW OF PA'S—Pa Puts Cedric On "War" Diet — By Wellington

A STRONG C.P.R. TEAM

FOR the vigorous programme which Lord Shaughnessy recently hinted as planned by the Canadian Pacific for the period after the war, the Board of Directors have selected to assist Mr. E. W. Beatty, the new President, a team of Vice-Presidents well known for their driving force and executive ability, and particularly strong in the operating field. Grant Hall, who is Vice-President with jurisdiction over all lines, has been aptly described as a "big man physically with a heart as big as his body." "Grant," as he is known by the rank and file of the railway, is a favorite with everyone from the trackwalker up. He is a disciplinarian, but he is a just disciplinarian, and it is a matter of common knowledge that no matter in what position he may have occupied, since he rose from the ranks in the old Grand Trunk shops, and showed his ability in the old C. P. R. shops at Hochelaga, he has always made it a point to investigate any complaint made to him by a man under his control.

Westerners will tell of the time when he was in charge at Revelstoke some dozen years ago, and when he worked night and day for a week in the mountains to lift one of the worst snow blockades in the history of the transcontinental railway. It is matter of record on the Revelstoke division that "Grant" could get more work out of a body of men than any other half dozen men, and it is largely because he knows how to take off his own coat (if they do such things in snow blockades) and do his own share of the work."

Grant Hall was born at Montreal, November 27th 1863, and was educated at Bishop's College and School, Lennoxville, Quebec. He joined the C. P. R. in 1887 as locomotive foreman and from 1893 to 1898 was general locomotive foreman on the Intercolonial Railway at Moncton, New Brunswick. In September, 1898, he returned to the Canadian Pacific Railway, where he was consecutively general foreman, first at the McAdam and later at the Winnipeg shops; master mechanic of the British Columbia division; assistant superintendent of motive power, eastern lines, and superintendent of motor power and car department, western lines; from November, 1911 to December, 1914, assistant general manager, western lines; when he was appointed Vice-President and General Manager.

A. D. MacTier, who is now Vice-President in charge of lines east of Fort Arthur, like his former chief, David McNicoll, was born in Scotland and proud of his birth. He came to Canada when a young man and entered the service of the C. P. R. as stenographer in the Baggage Department in 1887, becoming assistant to the Superintendent of Sleeping and Dining Cars in 1889. From 1891 to 1896 he was in the Car Service, Stores and Fuel Departments, and from 1896 to 1899 was General Baggage Agent. From 1899 to 1907 he held the position of General Fuel Agent, when he was appointed assistant to the Vice-President. In December, 1912, he was appointed General Manager, Eastern Lines.

Mr. MacTier is very popular with the men on the road, whose interests he has always made his first concern. He has always insisted on giving proper credit for meritorious service. This is the first time that a special Vice-President has been appointed to look after Eastern Lines and it is a tribute to Mr. MacTier's special ability that he should have been chosen by the Directors to fill it.

D. C. Coleman, the new Vice-President of lines west of Port Arthur, has had a remarkably rapid rise to such a responsible position but has earned it, for he is known in railway circles as a man of exceptional ability. Born at Carleton Place, Ontario, in 1879, Mr. Coleman joined the C. P. R. as a clerk in the assistant Engineer's Office at Fort William in 1899. Rising rapidly he was appointed Superintendent at Nelson, B.C., in 1907, and in 1908 was Superintendent of Car Service, Western Lines. In April, 1912, he was appointed General Superintendent of the Manitoba Division at Winnipeg. In 1913 he became General Superintendent at Calgary and in 1915 Assistant General Manager Western Lines, Winnipeg.

BEDOUIN WOMEN.

They Know Little or Nothing of the World Beyond Arabia.

Time seemed to turn back twenty centuries when I stepped off the Tigris river steamer at Bagdad. Old Testament men in turbans, sandals and quaint flowing robes ("abbas") crowded about, calling each other "Yusif" and "Musa"—Joseph and Moses. From the river's edge veiled women walked away, gracefully upright, carrying on their shoulders tall jars of water—the same style of jars no doubt that held the water when it turned to wine. Sheep are slain to seal a cow, and the blood covenant is common.

With their own shapely hands Arab women still wash the feet of honored guests; upon their own heads they heap handfuls of dust when they mourn for their dead children, and should a Bedouin woman sin her brother may cut her throat, and the tribe will applaud his awful act of righteous wrath.

Arab women live, love, slave and die knowing little of their Christian sisters in the western world.

Few Arab women I met had ever even heard of America. One or two, whose husbands sold wool and dates to Bagdad traders, knew there was such a place as "Amerique," but they believed it merely a part of that far away land called London, whence came their bright calico and the cheap guns used by the sheiks in tribal wars. Even the men can tell the women little of the world beyond the desert's rim.

For all the average Arab woman knows of America, she might as well live on Mars. My serving maid, Nejlah (the star), asked me if I came to Bagdad from Amerique by railway train. Once on this ancient plain, however, lived wise women—the consorts of kings—whose names and fame come down to us through the centuries.—National Geographic Magazine.

CALL OF THE SEA.

Land Is Existence, but the Oceans Are Life and Civilization.

From the dawn of time, humanity has dreamed of the sea. Land is existence, but water is life. The open sea is the open mind. The oceans are civilization.

Watch the movements of the progressive races. It is from land to water, from water to wider water. First there are the rivers, like the Euphrates and the Nile, and the civilizations upon their banks are vastly superior to the civilizations of the interiors. But once the seas are discovered and mastered the civilizations of the rivers sink into second place, and nations like Greece and Rome wake into life. Then the oceans. And once the oceans are conquered, you have France and Germany and England.

Suppose back there in the long ago a naked sword had been laid across the mouths of the Euphrates and the Nile. And suppose humanity, having discovered an overland route to the southern peninsulas of Europe, had found barring their further march another sword across the strait of Gibraltar. And suppose that thereafter all overland routes to the ocean had been blocked, say, with long lines of cannon. If the democracy of Greece never arose on the Euphrates and the strong type of the independent Roman never developed on the Nile, or if, in the second case, that sane, stable constitutional government that is the pride of England never bloomed in Greece and the splendid educational system that is the pride of Germany never flourished in Rome, upon which lands would the blame lie—upon those on the inside or upon those on the outside, upon those that found the sword across their path or upon those that laid it there?—From "The World Storm—and Beyond," by Edwin Davies Schoonmaker.

Her Thoughtfulness.

"George, dear," said Mrs. Dorekins who had come downstairs in time to pour the coffee, "I'm going to walk to the car with you this morning. Aren't you glad?"

"Very glad, indeed, lovey. It's so nice of you to think of me and get up early for the purpose of making it unnecessary to walk those dismal three blocks alone. How much do you want?"—Exchange.

Dr. Johnson's Homeliness.

Samuel Johnson was himself—and this is a quality rarely found in "plain" men—under no illusion as to his personal appearance. Dr. Burney tells us that on one occasion while Miss Burney was examining his portrait he peeped over her shoulder and, with a ludicrous half laugh, exclaimed: "Ah, ha, Sam Johnson! I see thee—and an ugly dog thou art!"—London Times.

Looking Backward.

Germany's secret police are supplied with "police eyeglasses." These have tiny concave mirrors on the side next the face, which may be extended sideways or folded back so as not to show and give the wearer, if he has normal sight, an inkling of what is going on directly behind him.

AN EVENING WITH DUMAS.

It Was a Cosmopolitan Crowd That Flocked to His Shrine.

Dumas sat like some bronze of a Buddhist temple, while his guests stood or moved about, conversing with him or among themselves, writes Francis Grierson in the Century, describing an evening with the great novelist. A famous comedian from the Gymnase exchanged jokes with a tragedian from the Theatre Francais, a witty journalist was conversing with a gifted singer from the Theatre Lyric, an artist with flowing hair and a huge pince nez was begging a professional beauty to give him a series of sittings for her portrait, a novelist on the qui vive for copy seemed to see, hear and appropriate everything and everybody all at once.

A young poetess and an aged dramatist were discussing the latest plays. A Russian countess, tall, slender, insinuating, clad all in black, made me think of a character I had seen in a fantastic pantomime. She glided about mysteriously and, stopping at Dumas' chair, placed her long, thin hand on his shoulder for some moments, like a ghostly visitor with a fatal message, and then glided away. Austrians, Italians, Germans, mingled their accent with the accent of the true Parisian. But Dumas was more than a Parisian; he was a cosmopolitan at a time when there were no cosmopolitan Frenchmen, and he gave me the impression of a man who had seen life in every aspect.

He might as well have said in so many words: "My mind is made up. Do not give yourself the trouble to tell me what is going on in England or America or in the country of the Grand Turk or among the nabobs of India. I know as much as they know. You see me sitting here contented enough as things are. All these charming women of talent are my friends" (as a matter of fact, there was not an old woman in the room). "A man is not the author of books like 'Monte Cristo' without some recompense."

No one would have taken him for a celebrated author. He had the air of a man who had done nothing all his life but invent, taste and prepare luxurious dishes at a restaurant patronized by wealthy gourmets.

NUNOBIKI WATERFALLS.

Bewitching Night Scene at a Popular Japanese Resort.

A sight in the summer life of Japan not easily forgotten is procured in a night visit to the Nunobiki waterfall, just outside Kobe on the northeast. There are two falls, the lower or female fall of forty-three feet and the upper or male fall of eighty feet, the water gushing in each case out of the hill above and falling down the gorge to a whirling pool below. It is reached by an easy, winding climb up the cliffs of the "Million Fireflies"—tiny electric bulbs in thousands among the trees—and the thousands and thousands of gayly clad women and children visitors shepherded by the more somber clad men give the traveler two distinctly delightful sensations before reaching the illuminated falls themselves.

The tiny lights come and go among the trees in a bewitching way. The single light, says the Kobe Chronicle, which illuminates the higher fall will perhaps appeal to many rather than the colored lights thrown on the lower fall, and the lamp rays giving the fountain the hues of the rainbow may be regarded as artificial. Nevertheless the general effect is attractive.

To any one who knows China it is impossible not to draw a comparison favorable to the Japanese in viewing the crowd. Entrance to the gorge is perfectly free, yet thousands flocking there every evening are neatly dressed in summer garments, every one clean and respectable, while the conduct of the great crowd is orderly and marked by a sense of quiet enjoyment. Such a scene would be almost impossible in China, and until the idea of personal cleanliness can be introduced among the swarming millions of that country we are afraid the Japanese will continue to look down upon their neighbors as inferior.

The Heat of Australia.

Australia is the hottest country on record. I have ridden for miles astride the equator, but I have never found heat to compare with this. Out in the country in the dry times there appears to be little more than a sheet of brown paper between you and the lower regions, and the people facetiously say that they have to feed their hens on cracked ice to keep them from laying boiled eggs.—Sydney Telegraph.

Her Hard Task.

"That's a beautiful girl you have in your store," said the man acquaintance. "I've seen her in the window several days as I passed."

"She isn't an employee," the milliner answered wearily. "She's a woman trying to decide on a new hat."

Weather Note.

"Looks like rain for our outing tomorrow."

"Just our luck! How would it do to telephone the weather bureau?"

"No good. But you might make an appeal to the clearing house."

Those Funny Stories.

A well known trouble with conversation is that you can't talk to some men half a minute without reminding them of a funny story that isn't very funny.

Inquisitive.

Edgar, aged six, was recently sent to school for the first time, and upon his return home he asked, "Papa, who taught Adam the alphabet?"

His Qualities.

"What makes you think Dauber will succeed as a painter?"

"He has the soul of an artist and the perseverance of a book agent."

Lose Your Fat, Keep Your Health

Superfluous flesh is not healthy, neither is it healthy to diet or exercise too much for its removal. The simplest method known for reducing the overfat body two, three or four pounds a week is the Marmola Method, tried and endorsed by thousands. Marmola Prescription Tablets, containing exact doses of the famous prescription, are sold by druggists at 75 cents for a large case, or if you prefer you can obtain them by sending direct to the Marmola Company, 864 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich. They are harmless and leave no wrinkles or flabbiness. They are popular because effective and convenient.

Next Door Neighbors

By Alvah Jordan Garth

"Quite some business luck today," reported John Hardy, real estate agent, to his wife.

"How is that, dear?"

"I rented both of the Albemarle bungalows. Just think of it! Vacant for a year and both leased on the same day."

"Who are the new tenants?"

"Mrs. Lucia Morris, a young widow, and Prof. Albion White."

"Why, how romantic!"

"Not on the professor's part. He is a young man, but a most abstracted being. Why! when he took out his checkbook he had entirely forgotten the amount agreed on. Valuable abstraction, though, for they say he writes a scientific book a year that brings him in a royal fortune. When he is at that work he is absolutely absorbed. Mrs. Morris has a modest income. She says if the place suits her she may purchase it, provided she can dispose of some property she owns."

The bungalows were exactly alike, a hedge separated them and each was surrounded by a pretty garden. Into his bungalow, with a hired man and a cook, Professor White moved. Later, with a maid, Mrs. Morris established herself in her new domicile.

A week later the last snow of spring covered the walks. The professor hailed an opportunity for exercise, took a broom and started in, his mind drifting outside of his occupation, and he kept on and on, his muscles moving mechanically, his mind a thousand miles away.

"Oh, Mrs. Morris," called out the maid to her mistress. "Will you just look at our neighbor. He has cleaned all of his own sidewalk and ours, and he is keeping on, bent on sweeping the whole street. His cook says he's just that way half of the time."

"I declare!" spoke the widow, half pityingly, half admiringly, for the professor had a face and manner that caused a woman to look twice at him. "It's dreadfully bold of me, perhaps, but I must really stop him."

She threw a scarf over her head and came upon the diligent snow sweeper, 50 feet cleared away on the next block. She touched the professor's arm.

"Won't you forgive me?" said Mrs. Morris, sweetly, "but you can scarcely extend your kindly work for the entire street."

"Well! Well!" observed the professor. "I started out to clear our block only. I am an absent-minded being, Mrs. Morris, and thank you for checking my rash spurt of industry."

"They tell me you know everything but is wise and beautiful, professor," spoke the widow.

"That's quite an exaggeration."

"I think you could give me heaps and heaps of splendid advice as to laying out my garden."

"Oh, that's excellent," said he brightening up marvelously. "Why, we might combine a flower scheme to cover both places harmoniously."

The result was that the professor spent the pleasantest evening of his life, becoming quite enraptured over the mutual garden plan. Then his publishers called him to the city, and when he got back spring was well on its way.

He was lingering near the hedge the next morning when he caught the echo of voices. Mrs. Morris was speaking: "It's true you are my half-brother," she was saying, "but you received more than two-thirds of my father's estate, have squandered it shamefully, disgraced the family and have already cajoled me out of large sums on the promise of reformation. I am now so closely driven for money that I can barely pull through."

"But I am promised a splendid position if I can get two hundred dollars to take me to Panama. Help me, just this once."

"I cannot trust you."

The professor went around to the street? He approached the slinking, slouching man who left the Morris bungalow.

"Young man," he said, "I very much respect the lady you have just left, and if you are in earnest as to turning over a new leaf I will personally risk the investment of that two hundred dollars," which he did, forgot it, fell into one of his fits of abstraction, and at dusk returning home made a natural mistake. The bungalows were precisely alike. Unwittingly he turned into that of his fair neighbor.

Suddenly a vivid scream, a burst of flame, and Mrs. Morris tottered into the hall, and he sprang forward caught her fainting form in his arms. He bore her from the house, which was consumed within the hour. Mrs. Morris and her maid found refuge in the White bungalow.

"I am suddenly called away on business," he told the widow, later. "You are to make this your home unrestrictedly until I return."

A week later he made a further remark: "Would you consider a proposition, dear lady, to have me purchase all the land here, remove the hedge and all of us get along with one house?"

And six months after the wedding there came other good news. To the amazement of Mrs. White, the half-brother sent back the borrowed money to her generous husband and a gaudy Brazilian parrot, which the bride particularly cherished, for it learned to repeat the name she loved most on earth—"Albion."

FOR BABY'S TENDER SKIN.

A child's skin is tender as well as beautiful and eczema may be caused by chafing of clothing, the use of poor soap, exposure to cold or sudden change of temperature. Probably no treatment for eczema has ever proven so successful as Dr. Chase's Ointment, and this applies particularly to baby eczema. This ointment is delightfully soothing, stops the itching and consequently prevents scratching. Gradually the sores are healed up, and the skin is left soft and velvety.

Mechanical Riddles.

Engineers say that among the things that will never be settled are the following: Whether a long screwdriver is better than a short one of the same family; whether water wheels run faster at night than they do in the daytime; the best way to harden steel; which side of the belt should run next the pulley, and the right way to lace belts.—London Express.

THE EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S HOUSE DRESS.

Easy to make and easier to iron is this trim house dress, No. 8853. The waist has its closing quite far over at the left side, forming a square neck, which is very youthful looking. A pretty collar of white lawn edged with a narrow ruffle finishes the neck. The comfortably short sleeves are finished with turned back cuffs to match the collar. The six-gored skirt fits the figure well, and there are two large pockets stitched at either side of the front panel. The pockets and the belt are also of lawn, while percale, chambray or gingham may be chosen for the dress.

The lady's house dress pattern No. 8853 is cut in six sizes—36 to 46 inches bust measure. Width at lower edge of skirt is 2 yards. The 36 inch size requires 4 yards 36 inch material, with ⅝ yard 36 inch contrasting goods.

The Patterns Are Guaranteed to Give Excellent Satisfaction

This Pattern Can Be Obtained From the Examiner Office on Payment of 15 Cents.

Huns and Bad Weather Fail to Hamper Progress of the Allied Forces

On Sunday It Drizzled Continuously on the Belgian Front—Allies Approaching Ghent.

OFFICIAL DESPATCHES

(Special to The Examiner.)

PARIS, Oct. 21.—The Allied forces, while pushing further into central Belgium on the north, are fighting their way forward on the south toward the Belgian border south of Valenciennes. Sunday the Allied troops had to fight the elements as well as the Germans. It drizzled continuously and soldiers were soaked and blinded by rain while airplanes were of little use. With spirits undampened, the Allied troops continued their efforts and in Flanders they got a little nearer to the important city of Ghent, and are approaching very close to the west bank of the Scheldt River. On the right of the front in Belgium the British fifth army has to all intents and purposes taken Tournai, an important railroad junction. Further south the British third army has crossed the Selle and is headed towards Mons by way of Quesnoy and north of the Mormal forest, while General Rawlinson's fourth army has reached the Sambre-Oise Canal and is advancing around the southern end of the Mormal forest up the Valley of the Sambre towards Maubeugo. The net result of the efforts of the fourth and fifth British armies was that the pivot on which the German retreat across Belgium swings was badly shaken. The British also captured a dozen or so of villages. On the British right General Debeney is out-flanking Guise and is marching towards Hirson for the purpose of reaching the enemy line in the rear.

With the Canadians.

(By J. F. Blivesay.)

WITH CANADIAN FORCES, Oct. 21.—After capturing a series of villages on our right flank, including Lourches, a Western Ontario battalion yesterday entered Denain. The line was then established east of Escaudin, and to the east of Wandignies-hamage.

PARIS, Oct. 21.—Raiding operations in Lorraine and Alsace resulted in the capture of prisoners, the French War Office announced to-day.

British Official.

LONDON, Oct. 21. — More than three thousand prisoners were taken by the British north of Le Cateau yesterday, Field Marshal Haig reported to-day.

Huns Pushed Back.

LONDON, Oct. 21.—The Germans have been pushed back over the Lys River at three places and the Allies are driving close to Ghent and Tournai, Field Marshal Haig reported today in a special statement on the Flanders offensive. His report made it evident that the attempt of the Germans to make a stand on the line of the Lys River has been overwhelmed.

Liberty Loan Was Over-Subscribed

Total Will Run Several Millions Over Objective.

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—Secretary McAdoo to-day is counting noses—as well as dollars—on the fourth Liberty loan. He has sent a wire to all Federal reserve banks to submit as quickly as possible estimates on the number of individuals who subscribed as the approximate total subscriptions for each district.

It was estimated to-day that around 18,000,000 Americans invested in this greatest loan of the war and that the total would run some millions over the minimum $6,000,000,000 asked.

Public Places Open in Boston

Spanish Influenza Under Control in That City.

BOSTON, Oct. 21.— Normal conditions were resumed here to-day, when schools, motion picture houses, saloons, soda fountains and other places of public assembly were allowed to re-open by the health officials, after being closed for nearly three weeks because of the epidemic of influenza, which caused nearly 4,000 deaths in Boston. A considerable number of deaths are still being reported daily, but health officials believe the disease is under control.

REFRAIN FROM BURNING LEAVES

Dr. C. H. Amys Medical Officer of Health, desires the public to refrain from burning leaves only on bright sunny days and when there is a good breeze. When the air is heavy and dull the smoke does not rise, and as many people are sleeping with their windows open, the smoke to them is very objectionable.

Information is Wanted

Medical Officer of Health Anxious to Know Effect of Diphtheria Anti-Toxin in Regard to Influenza.

Dr. Auys, Medical Officer of Health, would like to know for purposes of observation, how many cases of influenza, if any, have developed among those who in the past year have been treated with diphtheria anti-toxin. If there are any such cases will those who know of them please report to the Examiner Office or to Dr. Amys.

BATTLE FOR FAST WANING DYNASTY

Germany is Not Done Fighting Says Swiss Publisher.

(Special to Examiner.)

DETROIT, Mich., October 21. — Germany is not done fighting, and the real defensive battle for a fast-waning dynasty will be waged on the Rhine lines, according to Dr. Jean E. David, editor of Gazette de Lausanne, visiting Detroit to-day with five other Swiss publishers.

Dr. Divid said that while the German government knew it was beaten, and has known it since the fall of 1915, the German people did not.

SETTING THE CLOCKS BACK IN PETERBORO

Big Ben Will be Stopped for One Hour.

Peterborough watch mechanics ridicule the many quaint ideas that have been advanced in many quarters by persistent paragraphers who are associating all kinds of difficulty in what local jewellers describe as a very simple operation, namely, setting the clock back one hour on Oct. 27th to conform to standard time. Most of the striking clocks manufactured to-day are so arranged that the hands can be manipulated backwards or forwards and the clock will strike accordingly. Clocks that are not arranged this way can easily be set to strike the correct time. Watches are made so that the hands can be moved in either direction.

Mr. C. S. McClelland, official custodian of "Big Ben" in the market hall tower, has arranged to stop the clock for one hour on the evening of the change. The official hour for making the change is set for two o'clock Sunday morning, October 27th. Mr. McClelland will set Big Ben a couple of hours earlier so as not to interfere with his beauty sleep.

HUNS DENY ALL CHARGES

German Government Thought the Armistice Would be Agreeable to Both Sides.

GERMAN REPLY

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Oct. 21.—According to a wireless message from Berlin to-day, the German reply to President Wilson says, in accepting the proposal for evacuation, the German Government assumed that the armistice would be agreed upon by both sides. The reply protests against the reproach for illegalities and inhumanities, and denied that on sinking ships German submarines purposely destroyed lifeboats or passengers.

A Three O'clock Despatch.

LONDON, Oct. 21. —(3 o'clock.) — Germany has ordered its submarines to cease torpedoing passenger boats, according to the reply note sent to President Wilson, and picked up by wireless to-day. The note says Germany hopes the United States will approve of no demand which would be irreconcilable with the honour of the German people, or close the way to the peace of justice. Germany protests against Wilson accusing her of inhuman acts, such as destroying lifeboats, and demands that the facts be cleared by a neutral commission. The German government suggests to President Wilson that an opportunity be brought about for fixing the details of evacuation of occupied territories.

LE CATEAU WAS CANADIAN BAG

Place Was First Occupied by Dominion Infantry Brigade

LARGE HAUL OF HUNS

(By J. F. B. Livesay.)

(Special Correspondent of the Canadian Press.)

With the Canadian Corps in France, Oct. 19.—(Via London, Oct. 20.)—It was known that at the time the Canadian infantry were fighting for the possession of Cambrai a Canadian infantry brigade attached to an English cavalry division was sailing off into the blue farther south, and it now transpires, through an official French source, that it was the Canadian brigade which effected the capture of Le Cateau, together with two field guns, 132 machine guns and 500 prisoners.

The attack was made from Montigny, due west of Le Cateau, the cavalry working through a series of villages where heavy opposition was encountered, and it was during this advance that the Colonel (Colonel Van Straubenzee probably) of a Canadian dragoon regiment was killed. Le Cateau itself was strongly defended by machine-gun posts, as our captures show, and was only stormed after the brigade had paid heavily in casualties. The city was found intact, although since it has been subjected to enemy shell fire. The civilian population was rescued in passing through the village, and the peasants in their passion of joy mobbed our horsemen, kissing troopers and officers ,and were only extricated from the units with considerable difficulty.

Although Le Cateau was not systematically destroyed, there were individual acts of vandalism. Perhaps the whole war has not produced so vile an act as the incident here related, which is vouched for by French official investigators. In Montigny a German officer lived 18 months with a French family. He was a pleasant fellow, taking meals with the family and playing the piano. One evening he failed to turn up for dinner and they waited some time, but at midnight went to bed. At three o'clock in the morning the house was blown up by a mine. Every one of a large family was killed with the exception of an eight-months-old child. The family consisted of the old people, women and children.

THE WEATHER

Another heavy rainfall occurred on Saturday night and at intervals Sunday, the total going to over an inch (1.03). Heavy rains have been unusually common this year. This last rain has brought down the leaves of the trees, and most of them are now practically denuded. The trees are bare of their foliage one week earlier this autumn than last, although we have had no heavy frosts as yet, 25 deg. being the lowest.—W. P.

2,000,000 AMERICANS HAVE GONE OVERSEAS

(Special to The Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, D.C., Oct. 21. — The German reply to President Wilson's last peace note will be here soon. The State Department received information of this to-day through a reliable official source.

The Swiss Legation had not communicated any information to the Department as to its receipt, but the news came reliably through other channels.

The Red Cross Campaign Opens On Tuesday

Increasing Need for Red Cross Supplies—Objective Will Exceed $30,000.

The Red Cross Campaign will exceed thirty thousand dollars for Peterboro, and the committee in charge of the campaign expresses confidence in the result. The need for funds is greater than it has ever been and is the natural outcome of the prolonged offensive of the Allies. One has only to read the reports covering the operations of the Red Cross Society on the Western Front to find out how the money is expended. Only a few short months ago the Allies were standing with their backs against the wall, stemming the rush that threatened to engulf Paris and the Channel Ports. To-day the situation is changed and while we are less fearful of the outcome of the struggle, we should not fail to recognize the fact that the need for Red Cross supplies is ever increasing, and will continue until the Allies reach Berlin or the Huns capitulate. Give in the same spirit as the boys fight, and give ungrudgingly.

WAR SUMMARY

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—The Associated Press this morning issued the following summary:

In spite of the efforts of the Germans to check the advance of the Allies in Belgium, British, French and Belgians continue their sweeping march from Tournai to the Dutch frontier. Official reports show that they have reached points within ten miles of Ghent.. The Belgians are along the Deynze-Eecloo Canal, which runs northward from the Lys River to Zeebrugge, and have taken a number of important points near that waterway.. Further south, the French have crossed the Lys and have established bridgeheads at various points. Along the Lys the British second army has moved swiftly toward the Scheldt River and are at Pecq, on the west bank of the river. In this sector of the battle line the Allies are moving toward the southeast and it seems they will be able to reach Ghent with their main forces in a very short time. The Germans have flooded some of the country, but this has failed to interfere with the progress of the Allies.

British and American troops are fighting their way ahead along a ten-mile front east of Le-Cateau. During the past day they have advanced a mile on this line and appear to have reached a point from which they seriously threatens to railroad running through Avesnes and Berlaimont. The bad weather that has prevailed in France during the past few days has not checked the advance of the French along the Oise and Serre rivers, where successes are reported. On the southern side of the Lys salient, the French have cut a deep notch into the German lines by reaching the heights to the west of Grandlup.

REV. FATHER KINGSLEY DIED IN LINDSAY

Rev. Basil Kingsley, D.D., died at Lindsay on Saturday evening after a brief illness of pneumonia, and was buried this morning. The deceased had been assistant to Rev. Father O'Leary at Bracebridge and had gone to his home in Lindsay about a week ago for a short vacation. He caught a cold which rapidly developed into influenza and pneumonia. For three days his temperature stood at 105. Rev. Dr. Kingsley received his degree in Theology at Rome, where he was ordained, and returned to Peterborough diocese about a year ago. Bishop O'Brien went to Lindsay to-day to participate in the obsequies.

Germany's Northern Flank Threatened by the Allies

The Enemy's Vast Turning Movement Backward Continues at Full Swing To-day—Huns Are Putting Up Stiff Resistance Before Metz.

(By William Phillip Simms)
(United Press Despatch)

PARIS, Oct. 21.—The Germans vast turning movement backward continues at full swing to-day. Six armies under Prince Rupprecht Gen. Von Doehman and the Imperial Crown Prince pivoting on Metz, are falling back from Belgium and France. The enemy line is swinging like a great gate The retreat becoming more rapid in proportion to the distance from the hinge. Thus the Huns are fighting like madmen before Metz. Whereas their resistance in Flanders is slight. King Albert may enter Brussels within a fortnight. The fourth and sixth German armies of Von Arnim and Von Quast are hard pressed. They face the alternatives of scrambling back across the Dutch line surrendering to the Belgians or precitately fleeing southward toward Leige. Neither army appears to be in position to put up a strong defence.

HOPES TO DELAY ALLIES

The enemy doubtless hopes to delay the pursuing allies first on the line of the Lys and secondly on the line Escaup, while the Meuse line was strengthened but the demoralized Boches can scarcely be expected to show much fight now until they get behind the Meuse. In the meantime Foch is threatening to wreck Hindenberg's plans at several points on the line. Cavalary is pushing on towards Ghent and Auden Arde, threatening Germany's northern flank. British Americans and French are menacing the enemy centre, while the French and Americans in the Meuse region threaten the very hinge of the whole movement. An endurance contest is therefore in progess between the Germanic army and the Germanic civilians.

The armies are racing for Liege the Meuse, Metz, Strassburg and the Rhine on which line they hope to make stand before the civilians demand a show down from their rulers and force an unconditional surrender It is the most forlorn of forlorn hopes But it is the only chance that the Kaiser has of saving even a dinky remnant of his throne and his crown.

According to opinion here his chances are precisely the same as these of the proverbial snow ball in the place of eternal punishment.

Peterboro Casualties

Pte. J. H. Williams Killed in Action —Other Casualties.

Mrs. J. H. Williams, 585 Patterson street, has received official word from Ottawa that her husband, Pte. J. H. Williams, of the Machine Gun Corps, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, was killed in action on Oct. 2. Pte. Williams was one of the best known noncoms. in the 93rd Battalion, having been quarter-master-sergeant of A Company. After going to England with the 93rd he reverted to the ranks to go to France with the Machine Gun Corps. He was gassed some time ago, but on his recovery returned to the front. He had been an enthusiastic member of the 57th Regiment, Peterborough Rangers, as a sergeant in C Company, succeeding the late Sergt.-Major Fred Howarth as colour-sergeant of that company. He was a member of the 93rd Battalion soccer team, and was popular with all ranks in the battalion.

PTE. JOSEPH REID.

Mrs. Joseph Galvin, 579 Roger street, received word that her brother, Pte. Joseph Reid, Mounted Service, was admitted to No. 3, West General Hospital, Cardiff, October 12, suffering from gun-shot wounds.

PTE. E. R. HATTON.

Mr. G. W. Hatton, County Crown Attorney, has been officially notified that his son, Private Edwin Robert Hatton, of the Royal Canadian Dragoons, was admitted to No. 16 General Hospital at Letreport on October 10th, with gun-shot wounds in the arms. Private Hatton enlisted with the Canadian permanent cavalry force and has seen more than two years' service.

CAPT. STERNDALE MURPHY.

Captain Sterndale Murphy, of the 208th Irish Fusiliers, Toronto, was reported yesterday killed in action on October 14th. Captain Murphy was the husband of Miss Mona O'Shea, daughter of Mrs. James O'Shea, of North Monaghan. He was 32 years old and the son of the late Dr. John B. Murphy, of the Hospital for the Insane, Brockville. He was educated at St. Michael's College, Toronto and Queen's University, Kingston. Captain Murphy enlisted with the 208th Irish Fusiliers, but reverted in rank to get to France. He is survived by his mother, his widow, a brother overseas, and two sisters, both of whom are V.A.D. nurses in England. The deep sympathy of her many Peterborough friends will be extended to Mrs. Murphy in her bereavement. Two of her brothers are also at the front.

HAS BEEN GASSED.

Mr. J. A. Fredenburg, 302 Aylmer street, was notified this morning that his son, Pte. Joseph E. Fredenburg, has been gassed and admitted to No. 6 Field Ambulance Depot on October 12.

Pte. Fredenburg went overseas last February and was a member of the 1st Eastern Depot Battalion.

GUNNER McCRACKEN.

Gunner W. McCracken, C.F.A., of Warsaw, is officially reported to have died.

FATAL AUTO ACCIDENT.

PORT COLBORNE, Ont., Oct. 20.—Leonard Foster, aged 20 years, son of Douglas Foster of Humberstone, was killed last night in Welland, when an automobile he was driving turned turtle. The other occupants of the car were slightly injured.

Yanks Have Worst Line

Had Made Previous Arrangements to Evacuate France.

(United Press.)
(By Frank J. Taylor.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, Oct. 21.—German prisoners state that Germany made arrangements to evacuate France before the peace note was sent to President Wilson. These prisoners remarked "that the Americans have the worst blood letting sector of the entire line. Every foot of ground is to be disputed until the German retirement, from the sea region is completed." The line is quiet to-day.

LOTS OF CAPTURED GUNS FOR PEOPLE OF PARIS

PARIS, Oct. 20.—A steady downpour of rain marred the opening fetes to-day to celebrate the recent allied victories, but the heavy skies did not prevent crowds of Parisians from coming out to view the captured guns, airplanes and other material. The crowds were allowed to handle the machinery, in accordance with Premier Clemenceau's wish, expressed as follows:

"Let everybody see them. Let them touch them. Let them carry them off. I have plenty more in stock."

More than 1,500 captured cannon lined the thoroughfare from the Alexander III. bridge to the Place de la Concorde. The place is filled with Gothas and other airplanes. Captured German tanks face the entrance to the Tuileries Gardens.

BIG DEFICITS IN RUSSIA.

Budget Shows a Large Falling Off in Receipts in Every Department.

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 19. — A portion of the Russian budget published in Petrograd, shows that the expenditure on public services and the postal and telegraph services in the year 1918, was estimated at 916,000,000 roubles. The receipts were estimated at 337,000,000 roubles.

The expenditure in the same department before the war totalled 80,000,000 roubles, while the receipts were 120,000,000 roubles.

The Budget shows similar deficits in other departments. The Putiloff factory absorbed 92,000,000 roubles.

MISSED THE MATTRESS.

MONTREAL, Oct 21. — One man was seriously injured and two others received minor injuries as a result of a fire at Traversy, Ltd., sash and door manufacturers of this city yesterday afternoon. The plant was destroyed, causing damage estimated at around $100,000. Alex. Tetreault, the badly injured man, jumped from a third story window in an attempt to drop on to a mattress held out for him. He missed it and was taken to Notre Dame Hospital with a fractured spine.

CELEBRATED DELIVERANCE

Countryside for Miles Has Been Singed and Scorched by the Red Heat of War.

SYSTEMATIC BURGLARY

(By Associated Press.)

With the British Army in France, Sunday, October 20. — Roubaix and Turcoing to-day celebrated their delivery from the enemy, and it was like a Christmas, New Year's Eve, and a Fourth of July all rolled into one. Tears of joy intermingled with shouts of laughter while the population sang and danced and waved flags.

The cities went completely wild with emotional joy. There were kisses, hugs and handshakes for every British soldier. On their windows, house wives had pasted pictures of French and British military celebrities torn from magazines.

There was good reason for Roubanx and Turcoing to celebrate the end of four long years of hardship, privation and oppression.

Houses Sacked.

Swashbuckling Germans had gone, leaving in their wake as much ruin as they could do. Nearly every home in the city had been sacked and the things that could not be carried away were destroyed. The Germans were piqued at being forced to leave the towns and they went to extreme lengths to defile, destroy and steal. Roubaix and Turcoing were systematically burglarized, Roubaix suffering the most. For miles around Roubaix and Turcoing the country side has been singed and scorched by the red heat of war. Broken cannon, rusted rifles, pieces of shell, barbed wire and bayonets and other equipment of soldiers, are scattered all about. Trees are leafless, and many of them have been chewed to pieces by flying shells and bullets.

Re-opening of the Schools

M. O. H. Will Give Due Notice Through the Press.

The M. O. H. will give due notice through the press when the schools will re-open. He advises teachers and others not to leave the city to go to places where a more virulent type of the disease exists.

Attention is also directed to the necessity for Volunteer Nurses in the city. Volunteers are to send their names to the City Clerk.

TORONTO NURSE DIED IN BOSTON FROM "FLU"

TORONTO, Oct. 21.—Nurse Kathleen S. Tucker, one of the little band of Canadian nurses who responded to the appeal for nursing aid sent out by influenza afflicted Boston three weeks ago, died in Hale Hospital, Boston, on Tuesday, a victim of the disease she had volunteered to fight. Her body is being brought home to Toronto for burial.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

MONDAY, OCTOBER 21ST, 1918.

A PLEDGE TO OUR SOLDIERS

Canadians should look upon the coming Victory Loan as affording an opportunity to the people of the Dominion to show their gratitude to the Canadian army for its matchless record of valourous victory and to pledge themselves before friend and foe that Canada as a whole stands behind that gallant army, ready to invest the last dollar that glorious victory may come to the allied cause. The Kaiser and his junker associates will watch with breathless anxiety the progress of the Victory Loan, hoping to see it fail. For the battle front is not the only place where victory can be won or lost; there is the home front as well and defeat there in the shape of a Victory Loan failure would encourage the enemy and prolong his resistance.

There must be no defeat at home. Every Canadian must rally to the call of his country and see to it that such an avalanche of money is poured into the coffers of Canada that the whole world will see that the people of this country are pledged to the support of their fighting men and are in the war to the end. It will not be pleasant news for the Kaiser but how it will rejoice the gallant hearts of the men with the maple leaf on their collars who are in the van guard of the avenging host that is driving the enemy out of France and Belgium!

THE RED CROSS CALL.

This is no time for slackening up war efforts. Canada's home front must be maintained and because the end of the war has been brought appreciably nearer by reason of the victories of the past few months there is no justification for any one to claim that subscriptions to patriotic funds or to the Victory Loan are no longer necessary. On the other hand donations to all such objects should be increased so that the full impetus of Canada's war-making may be thrown into the fight at the moment when it is needed most.

This week the annual campaign of the Pererborough branch of the Red Cross Society is being held. The objective is $30,000 and Peterborough cannot afford to give anything less than that amount. At this time when our boys at the front, after glorious victories in front of Amiens and Arras, and at Cambrai, are now pursuing the beaten foe, recovering town after town from the enemy's clutches, the call of the Red Cross Society cannot be allowed to fall upon deaf ears. Now more than ever should the purse strings of Peterborough be loosened and the gratitude of those at home for the never-to-be-forgotten exploits of the Canadians in France expressed by a record contribution to the Red Cross Society. Imagine the feelings of the men who have done such wonderful things at the front if the cables were to convey the news that the people at home had grown weary of the war, were tired of giving and had failed to measure up to the mark of endurance and sacrifice set by those who are risking all to win victory for the cause of liberty overseas. Let there be no falling off at home—there is no slackening in Canada's army over there.

THE SOCIAL RESULTS OF SEPARATION ALLOWANCES.

It is now announced that the Government intend to take over the administration and provision of money for the Patriotic Fund at the end of the current year. This step has long been overdue and should have been undertaken at an early stage of the war. We trust that the Government will not be niggardly in making the increases in the scale of separation allowances which will be necessary to replace the monies now disbursed by the Patriotic Fund. In Canada there has been no investigation of the social effects of separation allowances, and it would be interesting to ascertain the opinions of prominent social workers as to their results. There has been such an investigation in England. Some members of the Liverpool Women's Industrial Council made a careful and detailed inquiry into the physical and moral effects of separation allowances on the characters and homes of the recipients. They took the evidence of medical officers of health, police authorities, school-masters, settlement workers, district nurses, pawnbrokers, housing officials, and a variety of other individuals.

It was generally agreed that the recipients of separation allowances, who probably had never before handled such comparatively large and regular funds, had on the whole spent their money wisely and used the money to fulfill their family obligations. According to the evidence secured there was a steady decrease in Liverpool of drunkenness among women, they resorted less to pawnbrokers, and money lenders, and there was greater comfort in the homes of the poorer people, particularly among the casual labour population. Better housing conditions and other factors may have contributed to this improvement, but it was also noticeable that the improvement in financial status created a demand for better housing conditions. The universal evidence of school teachers was that children had been better cared for and looked healthier than in pre-war days. Under one section of the inquiry 118 homes of soldiers were investigated and it was found that 84 had improved, 9 had deteriorated, and 25 had remained the same. In an investigation of the state of children it was found that about 88 per cent. had improved and 10 per cent. deteriorated. The contention of the investigators is that the regular and more adequate income and the greater economic independence of women has brought better material and physical conditions in the home, and their sense of responsibility is increased rather than decreased despite the harrowing anxiety of their loved ones in the trenches. The removal of sordid anxieties and uncertainties has liberated the soul and given scope for greater dignity and happiness. Among the very poorest classes the continual fight against the odds of life, which drove multitude to drink and despair, has lost a large measure of its hopelessness and now that better days have dawned, they are inclined to put forth their very best.

We believe that a similar report could be made upon the effect of separation allowances in Canada, and hold firmly that the morale and temper of the working class homes from which the bulk of our army comes has never been better, even although they have suffered from the exploits of our profiteering gentry to an extent that is unknown in Britain. The real value of their funds available probably shows less improvement than in the mother land. But the fact remains that many families have known a regularity and certainty of sustenance which they never previously enjoyed. We trust that the Government will keep in mind this aspect of the situation in making their new plans and provide on a generous scale. But apart from this there lies before us a larger question. When hostilities cease will the State abandon the responsibilities she has now undertaken and shut her eyes to the needs of the men returning to their families? We are constantly being told that the most pressing need of Canada is increase of population and the conservation of the race. Healthy children cannot be hoped for or expected from underfed mothers, nor can we expect mothers to bring up their children well, if they are continually worried by monetary anxieties. But unless the problem of demobilization is faced with greater skill and courage than is now being shown, there will be recurring monetary anxieties in many a Canadian home once the separation allowance is withdrawn. In this new experiment of separation allowances the state has taken the step of recognizing the claims of mothers and their children. Might we not hope that the principle which is now being universally introduced may become established, and that something may be evolved out of the present system which shall be applied with success to the normal times of peace? — The Veteran.

SABRES OUT IN BERLIN

Socialists Sing Marseillaise Near PALACE

Amsterdam Oct. 18.—A demonstration by the German independent Socialists in Unter-den Linden. Berlin, to-day is reported by the Cologne Volks Zeitung. The crowd sang the Marseillaise. The police, adds the newspaper, prevented the demonstrators from reaching the Imperial Palace. There was a clash, in which some of the crowd were slightly injured by the police sabres.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Give as they fight

There are fifty Peterboro and district boys who are prisoners of war in Germany. Won't you help the Red Cross to look after them?

The war is not over yet. Helping the Red Cross will bring peace nearer.

There are two calls that cannot be neglected—the Victory Loan and the Red Cross appeal.

"If ye break faith with us who died
We shall not sleep though poppies grow
In Flanders fields."

Remember these sublime words when you are asked to subscribe to the Red Cross.

War is Making Our Boys Healthier

By FRANK J. TAYLOR,
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, Oct. 2. (By Mail.)—Whether he used to be frail or strong, the doughboy is becoming one of the huskiest chaps on this side the line. War agrees with the American boy, judging from the solid, healthy looking specimens you see trudging up and down the lines and holding them.

It is a series of surprises you have with the American army, continually meeting some husky, whom you hardly recognize because back in the States he was "that frail little William Jones." Under Uncle Sam's care he has grown shoulders of a football player, and he marches on a pair of legs twice as stout as they used to be, and you couldn't call him William if you had to—his only name is Bill, now that he has joined the heavyweight class.

Despite the fears of the family for the boy, it has done him good to join up in Uncle Sam's army. His present healthful condition is due to a number of causes, not the least of which is the physical training he has undergone to enable him to stand hardship. The chap that couldn't take gymnasium at high school because he had a weak heart has become a doughboy who thinks nothing of marching all night with a pack on his back and then standing guard next day. He could go on patrol the next night if they needed him.

PLENTY OF EXERCISE

outdoor work almost continually and being tired enough at the end of the day to drop down and sleep anywhere, has been just the thing to enure the boy to hardships. He is out not only in summer when it is pleasant, but in rain and wind, and his life has made him hard and rugged, and a far better man physically than when he came to France. Jogging up and down roads on an artillery caisson, of handling a huge truck, has given the former drug clerk muscles like those of the blacksmith's apprentice.

The kind of food he has had to eat has been encouraging too. Good solid "chow," like beef, beans, potatoes and bread, make man-power, and they have lots of it in the American army. It is served up at regular intervals, and it builds muscles in the soldier's arms and legs and makes him have broader, better filled-out shoulders. They have dessert, too, in this man's army, but instead of the pies and cakes of peace days, it is rice pudding, or canned fruit, or something that the soldier needs.

Then the boy keeps pretty good hants with the army here in France, except for his night hours, which he becomes accustomed to, and which he makes up with sleep in the daylight hours when the Germans could see him if he worked. The means of going even on mild "leave" are not at the doughboy's disposal in the army, and anyway, he is too busy beating the Germans to think about anything but his work, a situation which is healthful to his state of mind, as well as his body. He is learning good living and clean habits in the army.

Then there are those army doctors who are continually watching to nip anything in the bud that might break down health of the men. A good football team in training never averaged higher in medical attention than Uncle Sam's fighters. Inspection takes place ever so often, and is careful. The men, knowing they are entitled to treatment freely, report sooner for attention. Dentists are par more popular than they used to be, as well as doctors.

HOSPITALS ARE GOOD

Even the chaps who are sent back to hospitals gain by the deal despite the popular belief. By far the larger number of men in hospitals have merely temporary disabilities. The army hospitals run on one basis that of making a man better for service than he was before. Of course, there are men who must go back home after their hospital sojourns, but with the exception of a few cases, they, too leave hospital in healthier condition than they were in when they joined the army.

The reason is this. Every means of science is used freely to find out what ails the doughboy who enters the hospital, and before he leaves, every means known to cure him has been tried. There is no question of costs or whether or not he wants to take the treatment. He gets it—which is important, sasy physicians, since an enormous amount of disability in civilians is allowed to increase, because of antipathy of many people to medical treatment.

The soldier who arrives at a hospital is practically certain to get an X-ray examination all over, unless his trouble is a mere scratch and he is all right otherwise. Ir anything ails him, the medical menfind it out, and they go right after he ailmen at once. Thus the soldier who came in to get his appendix removed, may have his lungs treated, his teeth fixed, and his deaf ear operated upon and made perfect. He is a decidedly better human being for his hospital experience.

Food Board Flashes

Canadian girls who have worked on farms this year have established a record of which anyone might well be proud. Not only those who have gone out from the cities but girls who have been born and bred on the farms have made valiant efforts to cope with the conditions they encountered.

The story is told of one girl, a genuine daughter of the farm, who ploughed and put in 5 acres of oats, 5 acres of barley and 2 3-4 acres of wheat with no assistance other than that given by her sister for ten days in spring. She ploughed, harrowed and rolled, while her uncle did the drilling. The same girl helped to bring in 30 loads of hay and to stook all the harvest. She also planted corn and hoed potatoes, turnips, mangles and beans. Throughout the season only two and a half day's hired help was secured, thanks to the industry and courage of the two sisters.

A regular potato knife enables one to peel vegetables with great speed, yet the paring will always be of the same thinness.

TO FARMERS

The Government has sent out an appeal to the Canadian people to buy at home. Why? Because when we buy abroad more than we sell we have to pay a premium on the excess, in addition to the price of the goods. This is known as an adverse rate of exchange. We have bought four hundred million dollars' worth more from the United States than we have sold to it. The rate of exchange is 2 per cent. against us. In other words, we are paying 2 per cent. on four hundred millions of dollars, or eight million dollars, which means that if we owe a great deal of money for goods bought we have to pay extra for the privilege. If we keep this up Canada will bleed to death. Please inquire into this matter at once.

BREEDING SHETLAND PONIES IN CANADA

Edith of Transy and her foal, and a foal she is nursing besides.

Youthful visitors—the two children on the left belong to Mr. Percy Cowans, of Montreal, who takes an active interest in the Victory Loan Campaign.

IT was in 1912 that Mr. T. B. Macaulay, President of the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada, first imported Shetland ponies to Canada, but long before this date he had made a careful and very close study of the breeding of these ponies. It was, therefore, very natural that during Mr. Macaulay's visit to the north of Scotland he looked for and secured the best possible pedigreed ponies. On his beautiful estate, which is situated on the Heights at Hudson, Quebec, near Montreal, there are today some of the most famous pure bred Shetland ponies in existence. The Canadian Pacific Railway passes through part of the estate and passengers to Point Fortune and Ottawa have very often wondered to whom the little jet black ponies belong.

Mount Victoria Pony Stud Farm at Hudson Heights welcomes visitors. It is a sight well worth seeing. Ponies of all types can be seen—from the tiny twelve or eighteen inch foal to the father of the herd, Silver Star of Transy, champion of all Scotland, who stands but thirty-six inches in height. Possessed of a long mane and tail Star looks the part. He is jet black and although ten years old is in prime condition. Then there is Edith of Transy, another prize winner, and a fine type of genuine Shetland pony.

Another pony that all visitors see is old Dorothea. She is just thirty years old, but you can't tell her age by just looking at her, for she looks just as well as the three year olds. She is one of the most famous Shetlands in the world, with a concentration of the best blood in Shetland

Champion Silver Star of Transy, the head of the herd.

—Prince of Thule, the strain which Dr. Douglas, author of "The Shetland Pony," says is the source of the best riding blood in the breed. Dorothea is believed to be the only Shetland pony living to-day which is practically pure bred to Prince of Thule on both sides.

The ponies in the herd are black, chestnut and white, and black and white. Ponies suited especially for the use of children are bred, while experiments are being conducted to produce a new breed of pony by crossing pedigreed Shetland mares with a prize winning Hackney pony stallion. This is calculated to bring out a pony with all the gentle characteristics of the Shetland and all the fine action of the Hackney pony.

Besides ponies and all the stock that is found in a prosperous farm there is a herd of elk on the slopes of Hudson Heights. These run loose winter and summer and add to the attractions of one of the beauty spots near Montreal.

SOMETHING ABOUT SUBSTITUTES

ORIGINALS HAVE OFTEN BEEN IMPROVED ON BY SUBSTITUTES

Chemist Describes Number of Synthetic Substances Which Have More Commercial Uses Than Expected When First Evolved—Food Laws Protect Public.

In these days of substitutes and emergencies and camouflages, we don't expect to get the real thing when we buy an article. We take it for graned that the war needs real thing and we must get along with something "just as good.". And the chemist is the man usually held responsible for the subtle art of substitution, says J. J Willaman, a member of the American Chemical Society. Hence it is a relief to know that there are on our markets some substances which chemists have produced, but which are not substitutes or make-believes at all; they are the real articles although artificially made.

"Look at the bottle of vanilla in your kitchen," says Mr. Willaman, "likely as not it says, Pure vanillin flavor.' Perhaps it says it is 'vanillin and coumarin.' It is all the same to you, however; it is vanilla in the pudding sauce, and it is vanilla in the ice cream. If your small boy asks you what is vanilla, you say: "It is the extract of the vanilla bean; my mother used to buy the pods and make her own flavoring'

"Now a chemist found out what the actual flavoring substance of the vanilla bean is. Then he found out how to produce it in the laboratory. Then he found out how to make it on a large scale and cheaply in a factory. And then the commerce in vanilla beans began to die out. Today, very little of our vanilla flavoring ever saw a bean. You can't tell the difference? No, of course not. Bear in mind that artificial vanillin is not a new substance; it is not a substitute; it is absolutely the same compound that nature made. The chemist may call it methyl-protocatechnic aldehyde but that doesn't spoil the taste of it for us.

"Coumarin is the substance which gives the characteristic odor to new-mown hay. In concentrated form it resembles vanilla although it is not vanilla. This is a substitute.

"Similar stories of the achievements of chemists in duplicating the substances of nature could be told concerning oil of wintergreen, indigo, oil of bitter almonds and even rubber It took fifteen years for one man to learn how to make indigo, and it took twenty years more to put it on a factory basis. But now, by starting with naphthalene (the substance of moth balls) we can synthesize enough indigo to almost put out of business the indigo growers of India. Also by a simple process of combining wood alcohol and salicylic acid, we can produce oil of wintergreen much more easily than we can collect and distil the plants.

"There is a thrilling romance to be woven about these and other triumphs. We begin to think a chemist's life must be full of thrills, and that the future will give us many of the wonders of nature straight from the stills and kettles of the chemical factories. We enthuse over the idea of eating or smelling or seeing something that men can make more cheaply than nature. Then along comes the pure food law and coldly says you must state on the package what it is.' And when you see on the package, 'Natural oil of bitter almonds' and on another, 'Artificial oil of bitter almonds' we are almost led to believe that there is something wrong with the latter, and we wish that the law hadn't taken the glamor off the achievements of the chemists."

THE ALLIES INFLICT HEAVY PUNISHMENT ON GERMANY

Three O'clock Despatches Contains Details of To-day's Fighting—Heavy Fighting at Some Points.

LONDON, Oct. 21, (Monday afternoon). — The British, French and Americans continue to deal heavy punishment to the retiring German forces and give them no opportunity to make a stand anywhere along the line. South of the Scheldt the British have straightened the line between Denain and Le Cateau and are within three or four miles of the Valenciennes railway line. The allies have also straightened out their line between the Oise and the Serre, and the French are engaged in heavy fighting in strongly fortified Hunding. In the region east of Courtrai, the second British army to-day was advancing on a line of three and four miles along the Scheldt River. They had gained this line by a great bound forward on Sunday.

NO INFANTRY FIGHTING.

PARIS, Oct 21. — There was no infantry fighting of moment on the French front last night. The official statement from the war office to-day only reports artillery activity between Serre and the Aisne. In Alsace and Lorraine, the French captured prisoners.

The Allied troops have crossed the Schellt river at several points in the region of Audenarde, fifteen miles to the southwest of Ghent. Audenarde has been encircled, and its fall is expected momentarily. German resistance is reported to be weakening on this sector of the front.

The French troops on the allied centre in Belgium have gained a bridgehead across the Lys canal at Nevele, seven miles west of Ghent.

The French also have gained a bridgehead over the Lys River at Grammene. The Germans are attempting to hold the line from Eede to the River Lys at Petegem, north of Grammene.

German positions were of great natural strength and were strongly held and there was heavy fighting throughout the day. The weather was unfavorable and the river was in flood, but the British forced a passage of the river early in the fighting, supported by the tanks.

GLEANINGS FROM BATTLE FRONTS

LONDON, Oct. 21.—Continued progress in the reconquest of lost Balkan territory was reported by the Serbian War Office in its Sunday communique, received here to-day. The towns of Zayetchai and Trstenik have been entered. Bolyevatz was captured.

ARRIVED IN BRUGES.

LONDON, Oct. 21.—King Albert of the Belgians has arrived in Bruges, according to a despatch from Sluis, Holland to-day. American and British colonial troops, with heavy artillery, have been observed in that neighbourhood, it was stated.

DEMAND PLEBISCITES.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 21.—Denmark, it is reported, has sent a note to Germany demanding a plebiscite in Schleswig Holstein to determine whether these provinces shall continue their allegiance to Germany or return to Denmark. A popular vote on the question is provided for in the treaty of 1874, the note said, but the Germans have never carried it out.

CLOSING IN.

MRS. LACEY AMY HONOURED BY THE KING.

Mrs. Lacey Amy has been honoured by King George VII. for her extensive war work. Mrs. Amy is Welfare Superintendent over 4,700 munition workers and the decoration is in recognition of these services. The investiture was at Buckingham Palace in the rose-coloured drawing-room. The King, who pinned the medal on, wore his naval uniform. The medal is a very pretty one, in the shape of a cross and a huge bow of royal purple ribbon, and enclosed in a handsome case.

Mrs. Lacey Amy is a niece of Mrs. Sherk and Miss Powell, 223 Dublin Street. She is the wife of Mr. Lacey Amy, the well-known war correspondent, whose articles appear daily in various papers throughout the country.

FRENCH AVIATOR DEAD.

Leon Morane, Noted Flyer and Airplane Builder, Passes Away.

PARIS, Oct. 20.—Leon Morane, the French aviator and airplane builder, is dead.

In 1910 Leon Morane earned the reputation of being the leading French aviator. In July of that year he established a new record for speed and in September ascended 8,471 feet, at that time the greatest height ever attained by an aviator. He was injured in October, 1910, and afterwards gave his entire attention to the building of airplanes.

"Conny" Murphy is Dangerously Ill

TORONTO, Oct. 21.—It is just doubtful whether Conny Murphy, the good outfielder of the Wellingtons, will recover from pneumonia. Conny, who was stricken with the influenza, which has now developed into pneumonia, took a hemmorhage yesterday, and was in a very critical condition last night. He is probably one of the best known ball players in Toronto, and has been a popular player among City Amateur League fans for a number of years. He played for a couple of seasons with Hamilton in the Canadian League.

Tom Sayers Was Small, But Clever

WITH EXCEPTION OF BURNS, HE WAS SMALLEST MAN TO WIN HEAVYWEIGHT TITLE

With the exception of Tommy Burns who stood five feet seven, Tom Sayers was the smallest man who ever held the world's heavyweight championship title. Sayers was born in England 87 years ago this month, and won his spurs by beating a number of good men before he challenged Bill Perry, the Tipton Slasher, who was then champion, 1857. Sayers was 5 feet 8 inches in height, but weighed only a little over 150 pounds when he tackled the big six-foot Perry, who tipped the beam over 200. Facing each other, a comparison between the men was almost ludicrous. Perry had a punch like the kick of a mule, and when his little adversary advanced with an insolent smile on his face, the Slasher immediately tried to wipe it off and end the bout with a single blow. He rushed the little fellow his arms wocking like flails, but Sayers was not there. Instead, the Slasher got a stiff one on the nose that drew blood.

This maddened the giant, and transformed him into the likeness of an angry bull. He forgot the little ring wisdom he had ever known, and rushed about blindly, but the nimble Sayers easily evaded his charges, and constantly landed blows on the champion's face. Round after round Sayers danced about, adding fuel to the flames that consumed the champion by jeering remarks. One round lasted thirty minutes before the Slasher got to Sayers and knocked him down. Three times this happened during the bout, but Ssyers escaped the full force of the devasting blows, and wriggled away when Perry sought to follow up his advantage

FRED WHITCROFT

Who with Tom Phillips, Frank Patrick and other Stars of a few years ago will play patriotic hockey this winter.

The end came in the ninth, when the Slasher, exhausted by the long chase after the elusive Sayers went down before the many blows that the little fellow sent to his unprotected face. In those days a round lasted until one or the other went down, and if he did not get up in half a minute the bout was over. Perry was unable to rise while the fatal half-minute ticked off, and Sayers became world's champion.

The next big battle in which Sayers took part was with Heenan, an Irish-American. The Hibernian was having all the better of it when the police interfered to save the Briton. Incensed at his treament, Heenan started a "rough house," knocking out Sayer's seconds, bowled over a few policemen throttled Sayers, took a crack at a number of spectators, sent the referee to dreamland, and then hastily took himself off. The referee, when he recovered, gave the decision to Sayers, who remained the undefeated champion until his voluntary retirement in 1860.

"FLU" SWEEPS PERSIA.

About 40,000 at Kasbin Victims of Epidemic.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—Supplementing advices announced by the State Department on October 4 that Spanish influenza was raging in Teheran, Persia, the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief received information to-day that more than half of the population of 40,000 at Kasbin ninety miles north-west of Teheran, have been incapacitated by the epidemic.

The British military authorities have requested the American Commission for Relief in Persia, sent by the committee and headed by Dr. Harry Pratt Judson of Chicago, to establish headquarters in Mesopotamia at Bakuba between Kermanshah and Bagdad.

At Bakuba from 30,000 to 70,000 refugees are being maintained, and Dr. Judson plans to co-operate with the British authorities there before proceeding to Teheran.

THE FLU ENDS CAREER OF CHUCK JACKMAN

Well-Known Baseball Player Dies From Pneumonia—Caught Al Atkinson.

TORONTO, Oct. 18.—The "flu" has carried off another well-known Toronto sporting figure, Harry ("Chuck") Jackman, for some years owner of the Hotel Widmer. He died at 1.30 this morning from pneumonia. Jackman in his younger days was captain and manager of the famous Athletic baseball team, champions of these parts. One season, when illness and injuries took all the catchers away from the Toronto pro. team, at that time managed by Cushman, Jackman donned mask and pad and caught for the team for a month. That was in the days when Al Atkinson was the pitching "ace" of the Toronto club. Jackman lived at 29 Lockwood road. He was a bachelor and a son of Capt. Jackman, who built a schooner here and sailed her to South Africa and back. He was 48 years old.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—In Syria the Turks are not offering any opposition to the British advancing toward Aleppo. It is reported that a force of 12,000 Turkish soldiers is being concentrated at Aleppo under General Liman Von Sanders.

British forces already are north of Homs, 100 miles south of Aleppo. The British are making good progress in repairing the railways in the country they have overrun in the last few months.

Mr. Manufacturer--
Do You Read The Newspaper?

Of course you do. You want to know how the war is progressing—what's happening in the United States, in Great Britain, and on the continent.

You could not dispense with the newspaper.

There are millions like you.

The multitude are interested in the newspaper as they never were before.

The floating of an immense war loan in the United States interests us; the political situation in Great Britain more than interests us ; it vitally affects us, and the work of our boys at the front—it enthralls us!

Billions of dollars have been raised, millions of men recruited in stupenduous armies, the morale of nations kept growing and growing; even the sinister work of the Hun has been fostered through the atlantean power of printers' ink.

Taking all this for granted—

How does this increased power of and concentration on the newspaper effect you and your business? Have you taken full advantage of it?

The war will be over some day—before we realize it, the Hun will be driven off soil bought by the blood of our sons and our sons' allies; our armies will be exchanging the swords for the implements of peace; France and Belgium will be one mighty workshop; problems will have to be faced by every patriotic and country-loving man and woman.

IN THE MEANTIME WHAT HAS HAPPENED TO YOUR MARKETS?

Has your competitor a firmer hold than he had before the war?

The lesson: Don't wait for a "better" day—use the four A's of commercial success—

ALERTNESS, AGGRESSIVENESS, ACTIVITY, ADVERTISING

—and then you don't need to worry about "after the war business," your problems will solve themselves for you as they arise.

COBOURG LOST IN CIVIL ACTION

Town Stands to Lose $2,500 as Well as Restore the Junk Bought in at Time of Bailiff's Auction Sale.

(Cobourg Star)

The case of the town of Cobourg against the Cyclone Woven Wire Fence Co. of Toronto, which has been before the courts for nearly two years, is now through, and, as a result, the town now faces law costs of over $2,500 their appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada having been dismissed with costs. It will be remembered that in November, 1912, the Cyclone Woven Wire Fence Co. were induced to take the old model school property as a factory. They came here with big talk of the number of men they were to employ, but in the four years of their doing business in Cobourg one to three was the limit of their employees. In June, 1916, the Company were removing their machinery to Toronto, and then Mayor Duncan, acting on behalf of the town, had their goods seized for rent, taxes and insurance, the town's bill being $700. A bailiff's sale was held, and the town bought in the chattels at the sale. The company was never in sound financial shape, but brought suit against the town for $7,000 damages in the Supreme Court. The case came up for trial in May, 1917, at Cobourg before Hon. Mr. Justice Britton, who dismissed the company's appeal, and ordering that the company pay the town the $700 rent owing on the town returning to the company the machinery seized. From this judgment the company appealed to the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of Ontario, and the appeal came on for hearing in November 1917, at which Hon. Justice Britton's appeal was reversed, judgment being given for the company for $5.00 nominal damages and $23.50, the amount of goods sold at the sale and not bought in by the town. Costs of the action and appeal were also given against the town.

The town appealed this judgment to the Supreme Court of Canada, argument being heard in May last, and on which argument the Supreme Court gave judgment at the opening session on Tuesday, dismissing the town's appeal with costs By this judgment all the machinery now in the custody of the town will have to be returned to the company. The building then used by the company, has since been sold to the Lydia E. Pinkman Medicine Co., and how the judgment will affect the sale still remains to be solved.

The town, it appears, were in the wrong when they made the seizure, sold the goods and bought them in. What should have been done was to apply for an injunction preventing the company from removing their machinery until the town's claim for rent had been settled. This was brought about by the loose agreement made orginally by the town with the company in 1912, by which the company were not liable for any rent until their five-year lease had expired. The present bill for law costs is just the result of loose methods on the part of councils.

A RECEIPT IN FULL FOR ALLIES

Former Attorney-General in States Revives Suggestion Previously Exploited.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—International finances were interested to-day in the suggestion of George W. Wickersham, at a Y.M.C.A. meeting, that the United States cancel all the obligations of the Allies, France, England and Italy to this nation, for the billions loaned these governments. Wickersham is a well known corporation lawyer and was Attorney-General in the Taft Administration.

"I would like to see America forgive our Allies the debts they owe us, I would like to have our country send a receipted bill to Great Britain, France and Italy," said Wickersham. "We can afford to do so for we must remember all they have borne, what they have suffered during the years before we entered this war, to hold the line against the Hun and to keep autocracy from crushing democracy."

THE RED CROSS WINDOW SIGNS

Merchants Are Asked Not to Remove Them Until the Canvas Is Over.

Last Saturday evening the Advertising committee of the Red Cross Campaign had the store windows of George street decorated with a pennant with the words "Give as they fight," which, interpreted, means the men at the front are fighting to their utmost and we are asked to give to our utmost in aid of the Red Cross campaign.

An effort was made to see every merchant, but owing to so many being away and busy through illness in the stores, this was impossible. The committee does not wish to appear as taking unwarranted liberties on the occasion, but would be pleased if any merchant who was not seen would be good enough to let the pennant remain until after the canvass.

6,210 Others in the States, Col. Arnold Testified Before the House Committee.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—The present army aviation programme contemplates training 30,000 aviators. This became known here when testimony by Colonel H. H. Arnold, as given to the House Appropriations Committee was made public. Colonel Arnold, who appeared before the committee together with Major-Gen. Kenly, chief of the army air division, told the committee that 11,000 fliers have already been trained. During the testimony it came out that there are 8,390 American fliers in France and 6,210 in this country.

Negro Soldiers Are Making Good

(By United Press)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, Oct. 3. (By Mail.)—Colored troops of America already have established themselves in Europe as being cool and reliable fighters in the front line. Both American and French commands say so, and if the Germans have discovered who it was that held part of the line through Argonne forest when the boche failed to get through some time ago, the German command has a decidedly high respect for American colored infantry.

Up and down the line, after the test of a year's service, you hear no doubts expressed regarding the colored infantry. The darkie doughboys have made good in the line as well as behind. They have proven themselves cool and brave soldiers in the trenches and gentlemen when back at rest in French towns. You are continually running into units of these colored chaps as you travel up and down the line from Switzerland to Flanders.

Down in a little town some miles back of Verdun the United Press correspondent encountered a large unit of these colored chaps, all from Chicago or thereabouts. They had just come back to rest, after a long period in the Argonne Forest trenches. Like their predecessors, a negro unit from New York, they had made a great hit with the French officers in high command of the sector. Unlike the New York negros, these Chicago boys had encountered no big fighting, and they were disappointed at being taken from the trenches before doing big fighting.

The French officers explained that good soldiers can be recognized just as well when holding the line as when they are fighting, but the darkie doughboys were still disappointed. Finally the French general came down to review the negro outfit. Down by the creek they went through some of the snappiest exercises ever seen and the French general was delighted. When the review as it had been planned was finished the general turned to the American colonel.

"If I were an American general, what would I do now?" asked the Frenchman.

"Most anything," replied the colonel. "These boys will do anything you wish."

"Well, suppose the Germans were across the creek," replied the general, "I'd like to have the nearest company attack them."

The captain of the nearest company was given the order, and he marched his men across the meadow, where they suddenly disappeared. Pretty soon a whistle sounded, and the company was up and running toward the creek. Only a minute and then they dropped, waiting and running, always skirmishing in the latest approved French fashion. When they dropped it was with two skirmish lines in advance and two support lines leading off to the rear, with each man dropping over the legs of the chap in front of him. Tin derbies and packs covered the upper portions of their bodies.

After a bit a flank movement by a couple platoons, the supposed German positions along the creek were stormed and taken. The French general was delighted beyond words for a moment. Finally he said, "My oldest veterans could do it no better, even if they were warned it was on the program, and your boys did that extemporaneously." The general remembered the review, and a few days later these colored chaps from Chicago received a fine letter from him congratulating them on their esprit de corps and their work.

It was interesting to see how these colored boys mixed with French inhabitants of the village, with whom the Americans were billited. The French folk like the colored boys, and felt highly honored at the way the latter learned French. The darkies are getting extremely fluent, and it fits entirely with their scheme of things to use all French forms of politeness.

Down the battle line a large unit of colored troops was encountered at serious business. It was going into the line, taking over a hilly and important sector formerly held by French troops. It was the first taste of the trenches, or of the front for the boys of this unit. These men were mostly from the South. They had been trained in the middle west, and some more in France, but never had been on duty under shell fire.

Yet on this dark night while the Germans bombarded, these thousands of darkie doughboys, chiefly under the direction of colored officers though some were white, took over a difficult and long sector without mishap and with less noise than usual, so the French officers said. They have held that long sector for some time now, and there has been no slip, from the furthest outpost to the nearest supply truck.

Importance of Knowing Milk Yield of the Bull's Dam

Not much headway can be made in breeding up a dairy herd if the dam of the bull is not a good milker. This is now a well-known fact, and very high prices have lately been paid for bulls out of heavy producing cows.

At Cap Rouge Experimental Station a very fine French - Canadian bull, which will be called Z, was bought a few years ago, one that would easily have won championship honours at any exhibition in Canada against all covers. Moreover, this bull, according to ordinary standards, was of a conformation which induced one to believe that he was of a heavy milking strain and would produce good heifers. But, unfortunately, such was not the case, and he did not leave a single heifer which was worth keeping as a milk producer.

Cow A, to the service of another bull, produced a daughter which later qualified for Record of Performance with 7,794 pounds of milk, whilst to the service of Z, she gave a heifer which never gave fifteen pounds of milk per day during her first lactation period.

Cow B qualified for Record of Performance as a three-year-old with 5,332 pounds of milk, gave 4,624 pounds during her first period of lactation and averaged 6117 during her first five years in milk. Her daughter, by Z, only gave 3,040 pounds during her first period of lactation.

Cow C was out of a dam which qualified for Record of Performance, with 9,747 pounds of milk, but herself failed to qualify, though tried two different years. She only gave 3,297 pounds during her first period of lactation and her daughter, by Z, only gave 2,800 pounds during her first period of lactation.

Cow D qualified for Record of Performance with 8,358 pounds of milk and her daughter, by Z, only gave 2,776 pounds during her first lactation period.

Cow E qualified for Record of Performance as a two-year-old with 4,547 pounds of milk, and as a three-year-old with 5,530 pounds, whilst her daughter, by Z, only averaged 2,731 pounds during the first two periods of lactation.

Cow F is the dam of a cow which gave 10,229 pounds of milk in 365 days and her daughter, by Z, only gave 2,401 pounds during her first lactation period.

Cow G averaged 5,271 pounds during four lactation periods, going up to 6,224 in one of them, and her daughter, by Z, only gave 2,947 pounds during her first 365 days in milk.

The cost of barn room, care, feed, has gone up faster than the price of milk, so that every dairy farmer must see that he does not use a bull like Z.

War Birds Given Long Training

(By Fred S. Ferguson.)

(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Oct. 4.—(By Mail.) — Pigeons must be schooled and prepared for battle just the same as men.

Of the thousands of pigeons flying over the battle lines, carrying messages, and playing their part in the fight against Germany, all have been carefully trained. Having natural "homing" instinct owing to their breeding the birds practically train themselves, but they work under supervision of soldiers assigned to the "pigeon corps" because of their knowledge of the birds.

When a flock of pigeons is installed in a certain cote, it is kept confined closely for several days. The birds are given but little food. Then one day they are released. Not being well fed, and therefore not very strong, they will fly only a few hundred yards from the cote. Upon their return they are given more food. Next day they are liberated again. This time they will fly somewhat further than on the 1st day, and again their rations will be increased.

By the 3rd day, the pigeon really goes to work schooling itself. The bird's instinct is to become thoroughly familiar with the country about its home cote. The flock will take to the wing on being released, and swing in an ever widening circle about the cote. All the time, as it flies, each bird is studying the terrain, landmarks by which it can find its way home. The next step is to carry the pigeons up toward the line for training. On the 1st day they are taken about a kilometer nearer the front from the cote, and there released. The birds rise high in the air, get their bearings, and then head for the cote. The 2nd day they are taken a kilometer further, then a jump of two kilometers more and finally are released from the front line proper for a trial home. They are then ready for real battle line work.

Life in the front line isn't any easier for a pigeon than for a man. Consequently a bird's "trick" in the trenches on a stable sector is only 48 hours. At the end of that time, if not sent back with a message, the pigeon is released to fly back home for a dry roost and a good meal.

In the trenches pigeons also face the common enemy of the men — shells and gas. When not on duty, pigeons are kept in a dugout and are reasonably safe from shellfire. But for protection accorded them they would be exposed to instant death from gas. As a result of measures taken to protect pigeons from gas, many stories have sprung up about "gas masks" for the birds, the impression being given that each pigeon was equipped with a tiny mask of some sort. This isn't the case.

Carried forward with each basket of pigeons is a big square container resembling a piece of tarpaulin. That's the pigeon's "gas mask." Made of strong, heavy water-proof material, the "gas mask" fits over the entire basket of pigeons. It is lined on the inside with chemically treated material that neutralizes the effect of gas. In case of a gas alarm, the soldier looking after the pigeons picks up the basket, opens up the big container, puts the basket of pigeons inside, and closes it, the folds at the top being so arranged that it can be made airtight.

In addition to gas and shell-fire the pigeons have their enemies of the air to combat in carrying out their missions. A heavily wooded district is especially dangerous for war pigeons. Many of the birds have been killed in such places, not by bullets or shells, but by hawks. A pigeon usually will avoid flying over a wood whenever possible, but often when forced to take such a course is compelled to fly for its life as a hawk suddenly swoops up from the wood.

If the pigeon lives through shellfire, gas, escapes hawks, and arrives near its cote safely, still another danger may be waiting, if the bird is nervous and refuses to be 'trapped." In many cases the messages by the birds mean life and death. Consequently there can be no delay in getting them from the pigeon's little message box once it arrives at the cote. The pigeon men, therefore, keep a shotgun close by, and are under orders to shoot down any pigeon that does not alight at its cote promptly. A pigeon that refuses to alight at its cote can be coaxed down in a majority of cases by sending up another bird that will lead it back. If this fails, the pigeon must pay with its life. Fortunately, recourse to the shotgun by pigeon men is not often necessary.

Pigeons have played a prominent part in all fighting in which Americans have participated, from the first raids in Lorraine through the battle of Cantigny, the fighting through the Marne region and on to the St. Mihiel victory. Originally 2,000 birds were brought to France from the United States. More have come over from time to time, and pigeons from French cotes have reinforced Uncle Sam's feathered messengers.

Ask Cheese Makers For Two Weeks' Extra Work This Autumn

CHIEF DAIRY INSTRUCTOR MAKES APPEAL TO FARMERS FOR INCREASE IN PRODUCT

KINGSTON, Oct 21.—C. G. Publo, chief dairy instructor for Eastern Ontario, is appealing to the cheese-making factories to remain open a week or two longer than usual this fall in order that the usual output may be realized.

In an address to the Frontenac Cheese Board he pointed out that there was a shortage of about seventy thousand boxes at Montreal compared with a year ago. He stated that one or two weeks' additional output in Eastern Ontario would wipe out the deficit, and as cheese was very much needed at the front, he appealed to the farmers to do their best.

The Nerve That Counts

AN AMERICAN HOSPITAL IN FRANCE, Sept. 14. (By Mail)—The worse they are hurt the better their spirit, the doctors say. Doughboy philosophy is great. Three of them were discussing their missing legs.

Said one, "I didn't need that left leg, anyway. I'm a lawyer, and what good's two legs in a law office. If I lost any, I wanted it to be the left one. I got my wish."

Said a second, "Well, my right's gone, but if I had it I'd just have to wash it all my life, so I'm saved a lot of work."

The third got enthusiastic. "Say, I've got it all over you. I lost both legs."

Another doughboy came out of ether just as they were finishing his operation. "Say, doctor, can I smoke?" he asked. The doctor gave him a cigaret, and the doughboy smoked calmly on the operating table as they bandaged him. He now claims he put one over on the doctors by smoking while they operated on him.

$1,200,000,000 IN WAR ORDERS HAVE BEEN PLACED IN CANADA

Victory Loan Has Made Possible a Great Stimulus to Industry—Half Billion More Orders for Next Year Through Munitions Board.

The Imperial Munitions Board has placed $1,200,000,000 of war orders in Canada to date. As a result of this huge outlay of money business activity throughout the Dominion has reached a climax during the year 1918, and the whole people are getting the benefit. To enable the board to place such a volume of business it is receiving advances from the Dominion treasury amounting to $25,000,000 a month, and this has been possible because the people subscribed ample funds for all war purposes through the 1917 Victory Loan.

For the coming year orders amounting to $500,000,000 are to be placed. They will go to manufacturers and sundry other interests in the Dominion and will have to be financed to a considerable extent out of the proceeds of the forthcoming Victory Loan.

Over 300,000 Employed.

A few figures will help to an understanding of the manifold activities of the Imperial Munitions Board. From 250,000 to 300,000 persons are at present engaged on war contracts, while another 50,000 are handling supplies. The Board has placed orders with over 1,000 contractors and at present 400 manufacturers are in contractural relations with the Board. Over 60 million shells have been produced, as well as 60 million copper bands, over 45 million cartridge cases, 30 million fuses, 65 millions pounds of powder and 50 million pounds of high explosives. Over 1,800,000 tons of steel have been used in the production of war materials, of which 1,450,000 tons have been produced in Canada.

Air Force Expenditures.

The Board has built, equipped and operated seven national plants on which over $15,000,000 has been spent. It has built up an airplane manufacturing industry in Canada. Nearly $6,000,000 has been spent on buildings for the Royal Air Force in Canada. The monthly expenditure for equipment and maintenance amounts to $1,360,000, and the expense of the aviation service, outside of rations and medical services ,amounts to $30,000,000 up to the present. The Toronto plant has built many airplanes and the output of high grade engines is expected to reach hundreds during the next nine months.

The Board has established immense plants in British Columbia to procure spruce and fir for the airplane industry, both at home and in Great Britain, and has contracted for 250,000,000 feet of those woods. In ship building it has given an impetus that means much to the future of Canada. Ninety ships are being constructed for the Board at a value of $66,000,000, and the steel industry is being augmented to provide for the needs of the shipyards.

Manufacturers on War Basis.

Eighty-five per cent of the manufacturers are operating on a war basis. Canada's trade returns show the stupendous strides our business activities have taken since the war began, largely through the ability of the government to finance some of the purchases of the Imperial Government. In 1913 our exports of manufactures amounted to $43,692,708; last year they jumped to $636,000,000.

This is but an outline of the work of the Imperial Munitions oard. The work will go on if we are able to make advances as we have in the past.

Over Five Hundred Influenza Victims Reported in Toronto

It is Three Weeks Since the Epidemic First Gripped Toronto.

RETURN OF DEATHS

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, Ont., Oct. 21.— It is three weeks to a day since the Spanish influenza epidemic gripped Toronto, and registrations at the office of the City Clerk up to noon to-day showed that so far it has taken a toll of 540 lives. Of this total three hundred and fifty-eight were from influenza and 182 were from pneumonia and other consequent complications. Registrations up to the 12th of October to-day show 18 deaths from influenza and 13 from pneumonia. Deaths from all causes from the first 21 days of October including to-day's incomplete returns, total 809.

LURES HUNGRY GERMANS.

Girl Seeks Husband Through Listing Her Supply of Edibles.

German papers are reprinting with much humorous comment upon the drawing qualities of the advertisement, the following matrimonial notice inserted in a small provincial newspaper of the Rhine district, by a single lady desirous of obtaining a husband:

"I have fourteen hens in the yard, a wine press, six hogs, four head of cattle in pasture, two hams and some sausage hanging in the chimney, a blind mother who can spin and weave, a small vineyard, twenty-five cherry trees, fourteen apple trees, ten plum trees, a stock of home spun linen, and some wine. Besides that I have a piano and a lute. Wounded soldiers, who are still able to do a little work on the land or around the place and possess honorable characters, are asked to send information about themselves."

MRS. PATRICK McMURRAY MAY RECOVER

Was Badly Burned About the Face.

Mrs. Patrick McMurray, who is lying at St. Joseph's Hospital suffering from burns sustained when her house was totally destroyed by fire last Wednesday evening, is reported to still be in danger, although strong hopes are held out for her recovery. Mrs. McMurray was terribly burned about the face.

Fire Victim Is Recovering

Dr. J. A. Morgan, who is attending Lily Weaver, the two-year-old child of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Weaver, who was badly burned about the head and arms last Friday morning, reports that she is progressive as favourably as may be expected, although it will be a long time before she will be able to leave the hospital.

SANDWICH CITIZEN DEAD.

WINDSOR, Oct. 20.—John Spiers, the "Pooh bah" of the town of Sandwich, is dead at the age of 65 years. In addition to holding the office of postmaster, occupying the chairs of several Masonic bodies, serving at various times as a member of the Town Council, acting as county treasurer, Mr. Spiers, in his spare moments attended to a large general store, which he owned for a quarter of a century on the town's main street. He was also agent and operator for the Great North-Western Telegraph Company in Sandwich.

DETROIT CLUB IS LOYAL

TIGERS HAVE 24 PLAYERS IN ARMY AND NAVY SERVICE

CHICAGO.—Recent claims that the Cleveland club led American League clubs with eighteen stars in its service flag, sixteen of them representing players in the army, caused President P. B Johnson to ask each of the eight clubs in the league to give the number of its men in the service.

The head of the league announced to-day that the Detroit club was the first to respond with an official list of twenty-four players in the army and navy—seventeen in the former and seven in the latter— and a manager going overseas for the Knights of Columbus to promote athletics. With only one man in a shipyard, President Navin of Detroit challenged the major leagues to beat its loyalty percentage. The Chicago club has sixteen players in service, four of them officers, while other clubs in the league are to be heard from.

PERSHING THANKS WORKERS.

Grateful to Eddystone Employes for Producing 1,000,000 Rifles.

WASHINGTON.—In response to a message announcing the production of a million rifles in the last year General Pershing has sent the employes of the Eddystone Rifle Plant of the Midvale Steel and Ordnance Company, Eddystone, Penn., the following cablegram:

"The American Expeditionary Force sends thanks to the employes of the Eddystone Rifle Plant for their message. We thank you for what you have done, for what you are doing, but, most of all, for what you are going to do during the coming months."

France Pensions Verdun Pigeons

(By Fred S. Ferguson.)
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Oct. 4.—(By Mail.)— War pigeons have personality. In their way they are as conscientious in playing their part in the war as are the men they are aiding.

The proudest pigeons in France are the "Pigeons of Verdun." During the dark days when Germany threw all her weight against the famous French stronghold and sacrificed thousands of men in an effort to break the line there, pigeons furnished the only means of communication with the fortresses for weeks. They flew through the storm of German bombardment day after day. Many were killed. But when the fight was ended with victory for the French, the survivors of the Pigeons of Verdun were honoured, along with men with whom they fought.

The Pigeons of Verdun are now pensioned. They do not have to risk their lives in battle flighs again. Being of the finest straing many of their sons and daughters are now in the battle service of France, but the older birds —the real pigeons of Verdun—are living a life of ease, growing fat and shiny, and strutting proudly when exhibited.

"Old Satchelback" is a pigeon in a certain American cote that is a constant source of amusement to the men in charge of the flock. "Satchelback" has almost human characteristics that apparently include a sense of humour. He isn't what may be called a good bird. He isn't as fast on the wing as others in the cote, but he is valuable for the influence he has on the other pigeons.

Often when a pigeon has flown through shelfire to bring back a message from the front, it will be nervous and unstrung. The bird will circle over the cote, but will not alight. Then "Old Satchelback" is called on. He is released, and circling about the other bird, will head for the cote. If the newly returned pigeon fails to follow the 1st time, "Old Satchelback" tries again. On the 2nd or 3rd attempt he usually brings the other bird back with him.

"Old Satchelback," himself, can't take flying seriously. The most serious charge against him is that if he is given a message, and gets tired on his way home, he quits flying and walks.

The engineers tell a story on "Satchelback" he'll have a hard time living down. It happened on the Vesle. The boche had been shelling a certain stretch of road and the engineers were out to make repairs. "Satchelback" was at the front, and on being sent back, had one of his tired experiences. He steered over toward the road, made his landing and started to walk. Then he came to the stretch of road that had been shelled. It was full of holes. The engineers were filling them up, and this is their charge against "Satchelback."

He looked the road over, saw it was being repaired, and then sat down and waited until the engineers had all the shell-holes filled. Then he strutted majestically over the new made highway.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—For many of your readers:—Be fair to the soldier away at war and to his wife and little ones at home, for these reasons:—

(1).—In what shape would your family be if you went away suddenly to war for two or three years?

(2)—Do you realize the weight of anxiety upon those left at home during all that time?

(3)—How many women have ever learned to take their husbands' place as managers of the business part of home life?

(4)—What sort of a mix-up would your family make of it if it had no friends but many critics and others who are glad to hear of any objection that appears to lessen the obligation to spend money for those left at home?

(5) What proposition do you include in your oft repeated remark that "They" were never so well off as they are now? Do you believe that you are fair in making such a broad statement?

(6)—Were times ever as good for you at home as they are since war began and the fathers and sons of these families went away to keep the war going and to keep the times good for you?

(7)—If it is true that some of those left at home by the soldiers are better off what have you to say about more than half of their critics? Are they better off?

(8)—Why did not some of the critics go to the war? What would have happened if all hands had put up the same excuse?

(9)—Is it possible that you are not honest enough to admit that Canada is really under an obligation to those who are fighting for it?

(10)—Have you shown yourself as keen for the families of the absent soldiers as you are to keep down your own taxes?

(11)—Honestly can we do too much for the families of those who left us at home to enjoy high wages and the best of everything while the soldier left all he most loved and cherished for the heroic work he has done for you?

(12)—Is it your name or his that will go down in history? Is it you or he and they who are making the sacrifice?

CITY MEN JOIN HANDS TO FARM RURAL IDLE LANDS

The Tractor and Contractor Idea of Farming Idle Land is Spreading Throughout Canada.

The tractor and the contractor idea of farming idle land, begun in Montreal, is catching on throughout Canada.

In Chatham, Kent County, Ontario, a meeting of business men recently decided to form a syndicate to finance and operate the cultivation of one thousand or more acres of land near that city.

Many city men in Canada have farms and run them as hobbies, creating cordial relations between the city and the rural districts, but these individual enterprises are not as worthwhile nationally as the formation of a syndicate of ten or more business men in the city to cultivate an extensive tract of farm land.

In the former case only one man gets the benefit, and even in his case the benefit is more in the saving of doctor's bills than in stimulating production and demonstrating advanced methods of cultivation.

But when twenty or more city men, contributing $250.00 to $500.00 each, go in for farming one thousand acres with a tractor and with a contractor and business-like organization, a community of interest is created which means much for production and inevitable application of the most approved methods of farming.

In most cities a dozen leading business men, all united on a common project, pretty fairly express the latent judgment of all the citizens. This syndicate formed by the tractor and contractor idea makes tangible the best public opinion in the city. The effect of getting the business men of the city interested in the development of a rural area of idle land is impossible to calculate. They will make their farming a success for their pride will be in the effort. They have wrung success from the business world, and by the same principles they will achieve success in farming. Who can doubt it?

Thus, the problems of the farmers, and they are many, will soon be understood by the business men of the city, and a new order of brains will be applied to their solution to the advantage of the farmers and the city men turned farmers. Better understanding between residents of the country and residents of the city will be established to the lasting improvements of national life.

Chatham is the first Ontario city to evince a public spirit commensurate with the Imperial and imperative need of the Allies for greater food supplies from Canada. The working out of this syndicate of business men applying the tractor and contractor methods of farming idle lands will be watched with interest throughout Canada.

What city will be next?

You Need More Than A Laxative

To correct constipation, all organs of digestion and elimination should be helped. Try NR and see how much better you feel.

NR Today—Keeps the Doctor Away

To live and be healthy, your body mechanism must properly digest your food, extract all the nourishment from it and promptly throw off the waste that is left. This is accomplished by the processes of digestion, assimilation and elimination—the work of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels.

The failure of any of the vital organs to do its work properly affects the action of all the others. A forced bowel movement does not help constipation; it only relieves for a few hours the condition that constipation brings about.

Now if you are used to taking so-called laxative pills, oil, purges and the like, you know mighty well you've got to be taking them all the time. Moreover, if you stick to any one laxative, you've got to be increasing the dose all the time. That can do you a lot of harm.

Stop dosing yourself with such things. Just long enough to give Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) a trial, and let the results show the difference. NR Tablets are not mere bowel movers, their purpose is to correct the condition that induces constipation and give you real, genuine, lasting benefit; to improve your digestion and assimilation, give you a good hearty appetite, regulate your liver and bowels, tone up kidney action and give your poison-clogged body a good cleaning out.

Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) is not harsh; it is mild, easy, pleasant in action; no griping or pain ever follows its use; but it is thorough and sure.

By its action on the digestive organs it promotes assimilation, which means extraction of full nourishment from your food, and thereby gives you new strength, energy, better blood, better appetite. By toning, not stirring your lazy liver, NR sends bile into the intestines, improving intestinal digestion. Lastly, by gently encouraging more vigorous bowel and kidney action, NR drives poisonous impurities out of and cleans up your body.

Try Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) and just see how much better you feel in every way. Get a 25c box today and take one each night for a week. You'll say you never felt better in your life. NR is sold, guaranteed and recommended by your druggist.

CAMPHOR BAGS AND INFLUENZA

A Montreal physician says: A large number of our supposed influenza cases can be traced directly to the use of "camphor bags." As an agent to lower temperature in febrile diseases, camphor is very useful, but it is very harmful when lowering the normal temperature of a healthy person. Drop the use of camphor and see the "drop" in the number of influenza cases.

SPANISH INFLUENZA EPIDEMIC IS ABATING IN PETERBORO

Yesterday Was a Good Day to Stay in the House.

DR. AMYS' REPORT

"There is nothing serious or alarming in the Spanish influenza epidemic,' Dr. C. H. Amys, M.O.H., stated this afternoon. Everything is going on all right, he said, and no new cases or complications of any kind have been reported over the week-end. Dr. Amys is particularly satisfied with the action of closing the city churches. With the wet day the over enthusiastic church-goers would probably have turned out, got wet, and sat amongst people suffering from the disease. In this way there might have been a great spread of "Flu."

Epidemic in Otonabee.

In the country the Spanish influenza has gained rapid headway during the past week. Otonabee is full of it. At Keene, where the Doctor has been called repeatedly, in some cases he is attending 8 patients in one family.

Asked when the picture houses and theatres will reopen, Dr. Amys said he could not say at present. The public will get ample notice, however.

TO THE PETERBORO PUBLIC

You surely have not missed the LITTLE LESS WHEAT in your bread? Yet by this small sacrifice we have done much to save Britain and her Allies from starvation.

Why not FOLLOW THIS UP by giving more than ever this year to the Red Cross and thus help save the lives of our wounded Canadian and Allied soldiers.

Victories cost more in men and munition than does defensive warfare, and Peace is still a long way off. If we stop giving now we are playing right into the hand of the enemy.

It is unthinkable, is it not, that our boys should lack any implement of war that money will buy? It would be a greater shame than our minds care to dwell on, that our boys should suffer sickness or death because we now hold back the money necessary for their care when sick or wounded.

Let us remember that "GIVING IS LIVING."

For the convenience of anyone who cannot wait for a canvasser to call, a Red Cross Room will be opened at 338 George St., during the Campaign, Oct. 22nd, 23rd and 24th.

Yours for Over The Top,
2d-93 THE PETERBORO RED CROSS SOCIETY.

Uden of Toronto, and Helen and Belle at home.

The funeral takes place Thursday afternoon at 2:30 from the family residence to Little Lake cemetery. Service will be conducted by the Rev. R. Pogue at 2 o'clock.

CHURCHLESS SUNDAY A HISTORICAL OCCASION

The present epidemic of influenza indelibly imprinted itself in the chronicles of Peterboro and in the minds of this generation by closing the churches yesterday. To many citizens the order of the Health authorities meant the deprivation of an influence in their lives which they had but lightly appreciated perhaps because the weekly round followed regularly through the years and with it came the Lord's Day and their dutiful observance of it. Not that church going is a perfunctory affair, because it is long established but rather yesterday's experience proved that, despite the element of custom, church attendance and membership had a saliency that was thoroughly realized. This was particularly true of so many elderly persons who with the succeeding years have found the church occupying a stronger place in their thoughts and every day life.

The order did not greatly perturb the sick nor interest the heathen who worship Pan, at least the latter declare that they obtain all the religion they require by communing with Nature, taking their sermons from stones and brooks. These superior individuals whose pose affects disdain for church goers perhaps glean some satisfaction from the absence of collections in their sylvan sanctuaries. If these folk pretend to criticize the churches for obeying the orders of the Health authorities, the church people know at once that their motives are insincere.

Ottawa Deaths Were Higher on Sunday

OTTAWA, Oct. 21. — There were twice as many deaths resutling from the influenza-pneumonia epidemic last week as in the previous week. The mortality rate took a jump over the week end, the number of deaths on Sunday being 50 per cent. higher than on Saturday.

New cases reported are decreasing as compared with early last week, and indications point to a material check to the spread of the disease.

The Board of Health has received a request from merchants who ask to have the store closing hour in afternoons made this week at 5 o'clock instead of 4 as at present.

Sunday's jump in the mortality rate is in part attributed to the inclemency of the weather, continuance of which would seriously aggravate the conditions.

A TRIBUTE

Mrs. Elizabeth Menzies.

The passing away of the late Elizabeth Baylor, wife of William Menzies, of 291 Rubidge street, this city, at the ripe age of seventy-four, covers a period of her residence in Peterboro of nearly half a century. She was born on December 25th, 1844, in the old military town of Fromoy, in Ireland, close to where the lovely Blackwater flows past the door of the Baylor homestead, "Duntaheen". She left her home in Ireland in company with some of her dearest companions and came to Canada and made her new home in the city of Hamilton. It was while residing there that her husband met her and to whom she was united in marriage on January 11th, 1870, and commenced their residence in Peterboro, where they have lived together ever since Five children were born to this union, the surviving members of this family being, Mrs. Robert Hicks, Mrs. Louis J. Le Clair and William G. Menzies. One son George B. died when he reached the age of manhood at 21 years of age, the other died in infancy.

The deceased was a truly devoted wife and mother, beloved by all who knew her. Of a quiet and retiring disposition, her love for her home and her family overshadowed all else, and her love was strong and deep. With a true benevolent heart no one in want ever left her door empty handed. Her generous impluses were always awakened where she could help and comfort those in distress or sorrow. She was tenderly fond of little children and was never more happy than when in their company All through life she enjoyed the blessing of good health until she reached her three score years and ten. She was a member of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church and her high ideals of a pure life and her spiritual discernment, were such as to give the assurance that another mother has gone to heaven and to rest.

The family desire to express their heartfelt appreciation of the many kind tokens of respect shown by the friends of the deceased both during her illness and since their bereavement.

THE ROSE STILL GROWS BEYOND THE WALL

Near shady wall a rose once grew,
Budded and blossomed in God's free light,
Watered and fed by morning dew,
Shedding its sweetness day and night.

As it grew and blossomed fair and tall,
Slowly rising to loftier height,
It came to a crevice in the wall,
Thro' which there shone a beam of light.

Onward it crept with added strength,
With never a thought of fear or pride,
It followed the light thro' the crevice's length
And unfolded itself on the other side.

The light, the dew, the broadening view
Were found the same as they were before;
And it lost itself in beauties new
Breathing its fragrance more and more.

Shall claim of death cause us to grieve
And make our courage faint or fail?
Nay! let us faith and hope receive:
The rose still grows beyond the wall.

Scattering fragrance far and wide,
Just as it did in the days of yore,
Just as it did on the other side,
Just as it will for evermore.

How Churchless Sunday Was Spent in Peterboro

While half the town wondered yesterday what the other half did during the churchless Sunday, the storekeepers had a fair idea of how a big percentage employed their time. By five in the evening nearly every magazine in the city had been bought up, while at one store not one paper covered edition of any kind was in stock by evening. The confectioners report a big business on Saturday while another dealer reported a run on playing cards.

Germany Wants Neutral Commission to Investigate

Washington Officials Say That Germany's Reply to President Wilson's Note Is Merely a Declaration of Intentions—And the Good Faith Is in Lap of the Future.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—Germany has definitely announced that the Kaiser has been shorn of his power to declare war and declared that German submarine commanders had been ordered to stop torpedoing passenger ships in her reply to President Wilson's note. In agreeing that the terms of an armistice should be fixed by the military advisers, the German note stated that the present standard of power "of both sides" should be safeguarded. There was no definite acceptance of Wilson's statement that the terms should be fixed by the military advisers of the United States and the allies. The text apparently left open the possibility of Germany claiming that the military advisers of Germany as well as the allies should participate in fixing the terms of an armistice.

Orders to Hun Subs.

Germany, replying to President Wilson, announced that orders had been issued to all submarine commanders to stop the torpedoing of passenger ships.

The text of the note, covering this point, follows:

"In order to avoid anything that might hamper the work of peace, the Government has caused orders to be dispatched to all submarine commanders precluding the torpedoing of passenger ships, without, however, for technical reasons, being able to guarantee that these orders will reach every single submarine at sea before its return."

The German reply was handed by the German Government last night to the Swiss Legation in Berlin for transmission to the United States. The note begins with the following.

"In accepting the proposal for the evacuation of occupied territories, the German Government started from the assumption that the procedure for this evacuation and the conditions of the armistice should be left to the judgment of the military advisers and that the actual standard of power which both sides in the field have, should form the basis of arrangements safeguarding and guaranteeing this standard."

As to German "Honour."

"The German Government suggests to the President that opportunity be brought about for fixing the details (of an armistice).

"The German Government trusts that the President will approve of no demand which would be irreconcilable with the honour of the German people and to the opening of the way to a peace of justice.

"The German Government protests against the reproach of illegal and inhumane actions made against the German land and sea forces and thereby against the German people."

The reply refers to the President's demand for the destruction of every arbitrary power that can separately, secretly and of its own single choice disturb the peace of the world, and declares that the present Government is free from such domination and is supported by a great majority of the German people.

Some Charges Against Huns.

With references to the charges of illegal and inhumane practices, the note says:

"For covering a retreat, destruction will always be necessary, and insofar as necessary, they are permitted by international law.

"The German troops are under the strictest instruction to spare private property and to exercise care for the population to the best of their ability.

"Where transgressions occur in spite of these instructions the guilty are being punished.

"The German Government further denies that the German navy, in sinking ships, ever purposely destroyed lifeboats with passengers.

"The German Government proposes, in regard to all these charges, that the facts be cleared up by neutral commissions."

New German Government Formed.

With reference to the responsibility of the existing Government, the note said:

"The leaders of the great parties of the Reichstag are members of this Government. In future no Government can take office or continue in office without possessing the confidence of a majority of the Reichstag.

"The responsibility of the Chancellor of the Empire to the representatives of the people is being legally developed and safeguarded. The first act of the new Government has been to lay before the Reichstag a bill to alter the constitution of the empire so that consent of the representatives of the people is required for decisions as to war and peace.

"Hitherto the representatives of the people of the German Empire have not been endowed with influence on the formation of a Government. The constitution did not provide for the concurrence of representatives of the people in decisions as to peace and war. These conditions have just now undergone a fundamental change. A new Government has been formed in accordance with the wishes of the representatives of the people, based upon equal, universal, secret and direct franchise."

Says He Speaks for People.

The note concludes:

"The permanence of the new system of Government is, however, guaranteed not only by constitutional safeguards, but also by the unshakeable determination of the German people, whose vast majority stands behind these reforms and demands their energetic continuance.

"The question of the President as to with whom he and the Governments associated against Germany are dealing, therefore is answered in a clear, unequivocal manner by the statement that the offer of peace and an armistice comes from a Government which, free of any arbitrary or irresponsible influence, supported by the approval of an overwhelming majority of the German people.

A CHILD'S TONGUE SHOWS IF LIVER OR BOWELS ARE ACTIVE

If Cross, feverish, sick, bilious, give fruit laxative at once.

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Syrup of Figs," that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, Mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless "fruit laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When its little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Syrup of Figs" handy; they know a teaspoonful to-day saves a sick child to-morrow. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here, so don't be fooled. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

THE DISEASES OF THE TOMATO.

Few people have ever stopped to consider the number of diseases to which the tomato plant is subject. A bulletin recently issued by the Division of Botany of the Experimental Farms enumerates forty-four of these diseases, and possibly there may be more. Many complaints to which the potato, tobacco plant and egg plant are subject, are also common to the tomato, the five plants all being members of the Nightshade family. Mr. McCubbin, Assistant in Charge of the Plant Pathological Laboratory at St. Catharines, Ontario, is the author of the bulletin which can be had free upon application to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. It consists of sixteen pages with three full page plates showing some of the diseases at the various stages. At a time when vegetable gardening is so general, there should be wide demand for the bulletin, which indeed no grower of the tomato should overlook.

CREAM FOR CATARRH OPENS UP NOSTRILS

Tells How To Get Quick Relief from Head-Colds. It's Splendid!

It's just fine. Don't stay stuffed-up with a cold or nasty catarrh—Relief comes so quickly.

A LITTLE SLIP-UP, MR. HUN!

(By United Press.)

LONDON, Oct. 3.—(By Mail.) — He was a "brass-hat" and he came leaning heavily on a stick, limping into a casualty clearing station. He said he had sprained his ankle, but as he knew all about first aid he would bandage it himself.

The busy officer in charge handed him the necessary trimmings, and quickly writing a tag, tied it to a button high up on the junic.

Seated in an ambulance, he was soon in Amiens, where he remarked to the officer receiving wounded that he would stay in that city and be all right in a week or ten days. However, as his tag read, "No. —— General Hospital," at a base near the coast, the officer said, "Sorry, but I've got to send you down to the base"—and to the base the brass-hat went.

There, despite his almost flawless English, his lack of knowledge of the most ordinary army matters soon brought him under suspicion. The brass-hat was a Hun. His curiosity and sprained ankle both were cured.

LET THE CHICKENS HAVE THEIR WINE SAYS PROF.

(By United Press)

London, Oct.3. (By Mail.)—Mrs. Hen says to her lord and master: "Another little drink wouldn't do me any harm," it'll be no use for him to argue the point. She is backed by authority.

The professor of agriculture at Fontainebleau has been making a discovery about eggs.

He took a dozen hens and gave six of them a little wine each day and kept the other six enforced teetotallers Stimulant triumphed over prohibition, and the teetotallers were beaten to a frazzle! They laid only twenty-seven eggs as compared with the wine-bibbers' hundred and eighty, and the latter were much superior in quality.

It is a dangerous discovery to have made in these days of strikes, especially with winter coming. Now that women are getting their rights everywhere(or most everywhere), it is quite conceivable that all the hens will go on strike and refuse to lay eggs unless they get their beer.

Sloan's Liniment Kills Pain

Eating When Tramping.

Experiments have shown that animals which demand a mixed diet will starve as surely and almost as quickly when fed on a one sided diet, even though it be large in bulk, as when deprived of food altogether, and the same thing holds true for men. Hunger of a moderate degree is not prejudicial to strength and vigor, provided it be what might be termed a general hunger. The thing to be carefully guarded against on a hard march is the tremendous hunger for some particular food content, such as sweet or fat or starch, which we so often find in the case of a carelessly equipped expedition. A well rounded ration is worth two which are not so. The man who has this principle firmly in mind has made a long step toward success as a field leader.—Outing.

THE WIFE

BY JANE PHELPS

RUTH TOLD SHE SHOULD USE HER TALENT.

CHAPTER XVIII

Nothing loath, Ruth changed her dress and they walked to the next corner where there was a restaurant. It was an expensive place, but as Brian explained:

"A rarebit is no good in a cheap place. They just can't make them so they won't string. We won't have anything but that and a bottle of beer. We don't come often, you know."

Ruth was in no mood to cavil at anything. But she couldn't help but think that they wouldn't have been there then, had it not been for the money she had earned by doing the work for her aunt, instead of its having been given to a decorator.

They had been seated but a moment when she heard Brian exclaim:

"By George! if that isn't Kenneth Page. Excuse me a minute, Ruth."

Ruth's eyes followed Brian as he hurried to a table at some distance from them. She saw him engage in an animated conversation with a good-looking man a little older than himself; then they both came over to her.

"Ruth let me introduce Mr Page, an old college chum of mine, even if he did graduate about the time I entered. Sit down, Page We're going to have a rarebit. Dined at home, but you know how it is—one likes to get out occasionally.

Mr. Page had acknowledged the introduction very pleasantly. Ruth felt his keen blue eyes appraising her, her costume. She knew she was correctly gowned and felt a thrill of pleasure. Her clothes were so elegant; so unquestionably the latest mode that the most critical could not find fault with them.

Have a rarebit, too, Page, or will you have something else?" Brian asked gracefully, playing the host.

"I'll have the rarebit, thank you," he replied, adding that it was an unexpected pleasure to meet some one he knew.

"Page is a bachelor," Brian explained to Ruth. She thought him a most attractive one but refrained from saying so. He was very blonde but still manly looking. He had perfect manners, and it was really a relief to have a third one in the party. Had any one said that Ruth wanted to talk to anyone but Brian, she would have been suprised and shocked But the little tilt over the dinner, had left them both rather quiet. And Kenneth Page was exerting himself to be entertaining.

"I wonder where Hallett found her; she's a stunner! Bet she brought him money," he said to himself as he looked at her expensive clothes and the jewelry which was in such perfect taste.

In a way Ruth sensed his thoughts, and it made her uncomfortable. She had the right to wear what she pleased, whether Brian could afford it or not. Her clothes were he own; her aunt had given them to her. Then her thoughts were interrupted. She heard her husband say:

"My wife is crazy over all that stuff; you'll have to talk to her. I am absolutely ignorant on the subject.

"What subject, Brian?" Ruth asked; she hated to hear him belittle himself

"Interior decorating. Page is a decorator, and has just received importations, so he says. It's all Greek to me, you know.

Ruth was at once interested, and showed it plainly in her face as she turned to Kenneth Page. Bachelor, dilettantee, society's favorite and a decorator.

For an hour they talked. If Ruth was interested, Page was surprised. The breadth of her knowledge; her appreciation of materials and stuffs; her acquaintance with the modes and architecture of different periods, was really most unusual.

"You are a student," he declared, smiling.

"Of that particular subject, yes My aunt, with whom I lived, allowed me to purchase everything published on the subject, then let me experiment with her home."

"I should like to see it," he returned, simply—the woman forgotten, in his interest in what she could do.

"It's a peach!" Brian interrupted "a perfect peach! I'll bet you haven't a man on your staff who could improve on it," he finished proudly.

"Why don't you give something of such talent to the world? isn't it rather selfish to hide it under a bushel?" Page asked, then plainly showed his surprise when Ruth abruptly changed the subject. She had no wish to provoke a discussion at that time.

But what Kenneth Page had said to her, lingered long after they had bidden him good night. It helped to hold her to her determination.

Wealth In Middle Ages.

Hallam, whose "View of the State of Europe During the Middle Ages" was published in 1818, calculated that in the latter half of the thirteenth century money had at least twenty-four or twenty-five times more purchasing power than at the beginning of the nineteenth. In Edward I.'s day a knight passed "extremely rich" on £150 a year, while an annual income of between £10 and £20 was reckoned a "competent estate for a gentleman." But the gentleman of those days had few, if any, foreign luxuries, and rarely left his own county—except to fight.—London Mirror.

Be Master of Your Health

ALMOST every man realizes in a general way that "success is to the strong."

But he does not always apply this rule in his own case and keep his own system in condition.

These days the worry and strain on the nerves is tremendous. Almost daily we are shocked by learning of the death of some prominent man.

The unusual strain has proved more than he could bear.

Many who have worked just as hard are standing the strain because of the attention they have given to keeping their vitality at high watermark.

Some are able to do this by outdoor exercise and a carefully regulated diet, while others find they cannot get back into condition without the help of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

This is the most natural and most rational treatment imaginable, for it supplies in condensed and easily assimilated form the vital substances which go to form new, rich blood, and thereby feed the nerves back to health and vigor.

As an illustration of what Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is doing for business men just read this letter:

Mr. William H. Kennedy, Gloucester Street, Cornwall, Ont., writes: For the last two years I have been suffering from run-down condition of the system, gradually getting worse all the time. Last summer, during the hot weather, doing extra work brought on the climax. I was taken with nervous prostration, feeling dizzy, sick at my stomach, the nerves in my arms and legs twitching so that I could not keep still, while at the pit of my stomach the nerves would beat quite perceptibly. I have given many remedies a thorough trial, patronized several doctors, and spent hundreds of dollars without getting any relief. I was even in the hospital for a short time, living on eggnogs. I was told that there was no hope. I could not eat nor sleep, with no ambition to get around very much. I was so bad that I could not even ride on a train. While at the store a traveller advised me to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and give them a good trial. After the second box I saw that I was getting better, so I continued taking them according to directions, until now, when I am on my sixth box, I am feeling fine, able to do my work, can eat well and sleep well at night. I feel that I cannot recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food too highly."

Any druggist will tell you what an enormous sale the food cure has attained. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Only the genuine bears the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt Book author.

WRESTLING WITH ENGLISH.

Joyous Course in Conversation in a Brazilian Handbook.

Occasionally are heard expressions of discouragement that the South Americans do not respond warmly enough to our efforts to win their confidence. Let the doubting peruse the pages of a booklet published in the city of Para, a copy of which has been received by a merchant dealing with Brazilian firms.

"Inglish For the Mass" is the title of it, translated by the author. Apparently the "mass" in Brazil, whoever it may be, need not be very fastidious in the matter of spelling, for the first ten or twelve pages, devoted entirely to columns of words, would not earn a very high percentage in a primary school examination.

"Conversacions for the Daily" is the heading of the first round of this battle with English syntax. Then follows a sample of a "conversacion" that should take place between two Americans meeting each other out walking.

"Good morning, sir, is it not the day fine?"

"Very pleasantly, thank you, and how are you?"

"Very goodly, with your permission, sir. Are you walking?"

"Yes, sir, for the health. Will you break some fast with me?"

"Gracious, yes. Shall we go to the coffee?"

"With pleasantness, sir. Let us eat meat and bread."

And so each lesson progresses until the mass is supposed to be so advanced as to be able to enjoy a more scholarly essay on "The American Seilsman."

"The American Seilsman," writes the author, "is typically of an energy which is to admire in the warmth of tropics. Of a youthfulness generally, he breathes lively and walks springly, searching the customer loyally for the firm his.

"To all he greets smiles, and one is to admire his frank. He is fresh of the cold northerly. Yet under the breast of the American seilsman beats the heart warmness, therefor let us give greeting smiles with two hands open to him crying 'welcome to Brazil, Mister.'"

Need the United States business man be discouraged with such a greeting awaiting his commercial representatives when they sail south to capture the South American trade?

The Russian Moujiks.

After he had smashed a Russian army and overrun a province Napoleon collected the moujiks and told them that henceforth they belonged to him and France. They glared at him and gave him the lie. He shot some of them, but the rest were adamant. Then he had one moujik branded on the left arm with the letter N. "Now," he said, "you belong to me." The moujik lifted to the conqueror's face his bloodshot eyes under his shaggy mane of hair, and then, seizing a hatchet, lopped off the left arm and let the bleeding limb fall at Napoleon's feet. "That is yours," he growled, "but the rest of my body and my heart belong to holy Russia and the czar!" And from that hour Napoleon realized what he was up against.

A Punctured Metaphor.

"Did you write this note to Maria?" asked the young woman's mother.

"Yes," replied the susceptible youth.

"And you considered it proper to remark that her teeth were pearls?"

"It's customary to say things like that."

"Well, young man, let me tell you something. If Maria's teeth were pearls she wouldn't be wastin' 'em on ham and cabbage an' chocolate drops. She'd string 'em an' wear 'em around her neck an' take her chances on an imitation set of household jewelry for everyday work from the store."

Bridal Customs in Spain.

In Spain a bride has no girl attendants to stand at the altar with her, but instead a "madrina," or godmother. Neither does she have a wedding cake nor any festive going away after the ceremony. The wedding pair depart quietly to their new home, where they remain until the following day, when they start on their honeymoon. Before departing they pay a formal visit to their respective relatives.

A Creature From the Fire.

Aristotle believed that some creatures were capable of supporting life even though confined to the devouring element. He says: "In Cyprus, when the manufacturers of chalcitis (lime) burn it many days in the fire, a winged creature something larger than a great fly is seen emerging from the stone and leaping and walking about in the fire. These creatures perish immediately upon being removed from the furnace."

Saving the Innocent Ones.

Governor Stewart of Missouri once found eight convicts mowing the grass of the statehouse lawn. He questioned them. Seven of them said they were innocent men. The eighth said, "I stole er hawg, suh, an' it was a mos' 'stonishing good hawg!"

"You're pardoned!" Stewart thundered. "Leave the prison at once. We must preserve our innocent convicts from contamination."

A government enumeration in Alaska shows 47,368 reindeer, all in training for roof climbing next Christmas time.

The friends of radium should publish a list of folks who have been cured by its use to offset the list of deaths.

The trouble about giving wives night keys is that the absentminded creatures are liable to leave them in the keyhole.

It takes a joint of beef to make a bottle of Bovril

Bovril contains the goodness of the beef.

THE vital elements that give beef its special place and value as a food are concentrated and stored in Bovril.

Just as the equivalent light of 32 candles is concentrated in one electric lamp, so the vital elements of beef—of many pounds of beef—are concentrated in a single bottle of Bovril.

But Bovril is not merely a precious food in itself; it possesses the peculiar power of enabling you to extract more nourishment from other foods. This gives Bovril its wonderful body-building power, proved by independent experiment to be from 10 to 20 times the amount taken. Bovril, therefore, in the true sense of the word, is a Great Food Saver.

Always keep Bovril in the house.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

At the Garden Gate

By GEORGE ELMER COBB

Bruce Tyrell and Aida Wrenn were acting out a sweet little love story all by themselves. So far they were only friends they told themselves, but their inner consciousness revealed to them that they were fast drifting into that delightful phase of super-existence where life is one rose-tinted, delirious whirl of ecstatic joy.

Aida was a schoolteacher. So was her sister, Marcia, in a rural district fifty miles distant. The family was a pleasant one, the mother of the old-fashioned, fast-disappearing type, indulgent and sympathetic, the father a storekeeper of the town with trade enough to keep things comfortable. He was content, and not willing to covet business expansion at the cost of risking his little capital and passing sleepless nights worrying over it.

It was by mere chance that Bruce had become acquainted with Aida. The biggest rainstorm Hillsboro had ever known was on the program in active display, one warm spring afternoon, when he was absolutely marooned upon a rise of ground near the roadside, with no shelter except an open stock shed. He was rather glad of the company of two horses which crowded out of the drenching rain with him. They were docile and friendly. It had begun raining just after the bell of the little crossroads schoolhouse called in the odd two dozen scholars from the playground. There was no afternoon recess, for the rain never let up until four o'clock. By that time the roadway was a rushing torrent and the water was up over the steps of the little frame building. At its open doorway stood the pretty schoolteacher, with a dismayed face noting the grewsome prospect, while at the windows the pupils crowded generally, very much entertained by the novelty of their situation.

Conditions were less discouraging at the roof shelter. The water had been over shoe tops for an hour, but a run of a hundred feet in knee-deep water would have landed Bruce on the higher level. A sturdy framework of planks, apparently used as a bridge across some creek or ditch, had been swept from its moorings and had landed directly against the side of the shelter shed. There came a final fearful downpour, resembling a cloudburst, Bruce saw that the water had come up clear over the threshold of the little schoolhouse and was pouring in over the floor.

"Something ought to be done for those refugees. They'll begin to get frightened soon. There may be no danger, but there will be some wailing among those little tots when it begins to get dark."

Bruce studied the watery waste between the shed and the schoolhouse, and then tried to calculate how far the floating, but stalled platform might be utilized as a raft. When he waded around to it the water was up to his knees, and he doubted not that it was waist high farther down the slant in the direction of the marooned pupils and their teacher. Across one side of the shed was stretched a long pole beyond which a food trough had been placed to contain fodder for the horses. It was thick, staunch and secured by nails at both ends.

"The very thing," decided Bruce, tore it loose, waded to the platform and got upon it. Then using the pole as deftly as he had manipulated it when a lad playing the castaway afloat on a home pool, he started his bulky bark in the direction of the beleaguered ones caged within the little schoolhouse.

He was inspired mightily to diligent effort as the schoolmistress appeared at its door, waving her handkerchief encouragingly. The little ones clustered about her and at the windows, keeping up a babel of excited cries and cheers. The experiment was a rare success, and as, for the first time close at hand, the eyes of Bruce rested on the lovely face of Aida Wrenn, he felt all his trouble well recompensed. In the three groups the little ones were ratted across the expanse to where Miss Wrenn, fully familiar with the topography of the vicinity, pointed out a rising bluff path. Dry shod and flattering with rare excitement, the little ones dispersed, able to reach their homes in safety. Miss Wren insisted on remaining behind until the last of her charges were safely delivered from peril and discomfort.

"How can we ever thank you for your wonderful work?" she fluttered, as she stepped upon the raft. "What is that?" she added, with a quick backward glance. Then she shuddered. A grinding creak had sounded out; the underpinning of one end of the schoolhouse had given way. Lopsided, the structure toppled and rested four feet deep in the water, crushing the door and windows out of shape, a wreck.

Bruce Tyrrell found himself quite a hero in the eyes of the little community after that. But, still better to his method of appreciation, he became a welcome visitor at the Wrenn home. Aida's face was radiant whenever he appeared and all the world seemed sunshine to Bruce, subject of a first attack of that incurable disease—love.

There came a cloud over the spirit of his dreams one day. As he was passing through a little park square, he diverted his course, but his gaze was fixed on Aida, seated on a bench beside a young man, a stranger. They were so very close together that he seemed to whisper to her at times. Then as they arose to separate, Aida seized both hands of the handsome young fellow and held in a fervent clasp, meanwhile looking earnestly into his eyes.

"Who can he be? And she?" reflected Bruce in a troubled way. "Can it be possible that her heart is already engaged and that I am blindly hoping for a love that can never be mine?"

Bruce grew depressed and was half minded to cease his visits to the Wrenn home. He was magnanimous concerning Aida, for although their relations had been friendly she had really never given him any definite encouragement as a suitor. She was no coquette, he was sure of that, and he blamed his own sanguine nature for the daring presumption that Aida's handclasp had at times been lingering and tender, and that her eyes responded sympathetically to his own ardent glances.

"I can hardly break the engagement for this evening," meditated Bruce, "but tomorrow!"

Aida and himself were to attend a party at Wildwood, a few miles distant on the trolley line. Bruce called for her that evening. Never had she looked so beautiful. A pretty locket and chain he had never noticed before were her only jewelry adornments. Bruce sighed as he recalled that but for his discovery of the day, he intended to present her with a friendship ring he carried in his pocket. Her acceptance of it would have decided him as to the fact that there was some real depth to the interest she had manifested in him.

And, further, never had she been more charming in the kindly, pleasant way in which she received his attentions. He partly took heart of hope that he might be entertaining a suspicion without foundation. Still, he was constrained and unhappy all the evening.

As they left the trolley car on the return trip and proceeded towards Aida's home, the latter paused abruptly with a little cry of dismay.

"Oh, dear!" she exclaimed, her hand to her throat, "I have lost the locket."

"Are you sure?" questioned Bruce solicitously.

"Oh, yes, I had it when I got aboard the car."

She shook her dress and they retraced their way to the trolley station. It was bright moonlight, but their searching eyes discovered no trace of the missing article of jewelry.

"You had better let me see you home," suggested Bruce. "Then I will return and wait till the car comes back on its return trip. It may be that you lost the locket on the car."

"I shall wait up for your report," said Aida. "I am very anxious about the locket."

Bruce signaled and halted the car as it returned. At his first question regarding the locket and chain the conductor produced the lost article.

"Just found it under a seat," he explained, and Bruce hastened to impart the glad news to Aida. He turned the locket over and over in his hand. Its upper case came open.

"It is so I guessed!" he half groaned, and well he might, for a bright ray of moonlight revealed a circular photograph within the case. It was that of the man he had seen with Aida that afternoon. Oh, there was no doubt now of the existence of a rival! Bruce had one thought only in his mind—to return the locket to Aida and forget her.

"Just a minute, please," spoke a voice behind him as he neared the Wrenn home, and Bruce faced a new, astounding circumstance. Turning, he confronted the original of the photograph.

"You are Mr. Tyrrell," spoke the other. "I have heard Aida—that is, Miss Wrenn—speak of you and have seen you once or twice before this. I also know you are her close friend. Will you do me a great favor? Are you going to her home?"

"Yes," answered Bruce, and gruffly, and darkly suspicious.

"Will you hand her this note?" and the other tendered a folded paper.

"Why should I?" resented Bruce, drawing back coldly.

"Must I tell you?" questioned his companion. "Yes, I will. Aida says you are a man to trust. Well, then, I am secretly married to Aida's sister, and the note tells her that Marcia will be here in the morning to break the news to her parents."

"Oh!"

It was passed by as a mere commonplace aspiration by Aida's brother-in-law. For Bruce it expressed relief, and hope and joy. With alacrity he accepted the commission and with delight. He listened later to Aida's explanation that her sister had left the locket at home on her last visit, and Aida had borrowed it for the occasion of the party.

And then Bruce felt that he should also unburden his heart, which he did, and graciously Aida listened to him, and the white moonlight irradiated two glowing, happy faces as Bruce kissed his fiancee good night at the garden gate.

Sending a Secret Message.

We are hearing much today about secret writing, but have not yet heard of anything to beat the simple cunning of one Histimus, a Greek, at the Persian court in the fifth century B. C., who wanted to send a private message to a friend at Miletus. He took a slave with bad eyes and, under pretense of curing him, shaved his head. The message was then written on his scalp, unknown even to him, the hair allowed to grow again and the slave sent off to Miletus with a letter all could read, saying how well he had been cured. And the friend, with whom the plan had been arranged, only needed shaving materials to uncover the secret message.—London Standard.

The Great Big Moon.

The full moon is very deceptive to those who attempt to estimate its apparent size in the sky. Most people would assert that the "great big moon" could entirely blot out the lovely cluster of the Pleiades, which glitters in the constellation of Taurus, but actually the full moon could, and occasionally does, pass through the Pleiades and only succeeds in hiding a few of the stars comprising it. So small indeed is the moon when in its full phase it dominates the night sky that a three-penny piece held at arm's length will completely eclipse it.—Pall Mall Gazette.

"Suicide by Inches"

THOUSANDS of people commit suicide by inches!

If one should take minute daily doses of some irritant or poisonous drug, no particular effect might be noticed until accumulation of the poison made its action evident.

Yet how many realize that irritant and poisonous substances are formed constantly, even in health, during food digestion and the preparation of its waste for elimination?

If the bowels act regularly and thoroughly, such dangerous matter is safely gotten rid of.

But if constipation exists, there results stagnation of intestinal waste, increased production of poisonous substances, and their absorption into the blood, which carries them all over the body.

The result is disease or disorder, which, if neglected or allowed to continue, cripples or kills.

The victim of such self-poisoning commits suicide by inches.

Constipation is a bad habit. It is a sin against the body.

But there is an even worse habit, a crime against Nature, the taking of pills, castor oil, laxative mineral waters, and salts to "force the bowels to move." Because such drugs do not cure constipation. They make constipation a habit. They do not prevent "suicide by inches."

On the other hand, the Nujol Treatment not only overcomes constipation, but prevents stagnation and makes self-poisoning impossible.

Nujol is not a drug, does not act like any drug; it is absolutely harmless. Nujol helps Nature re-establish easy, daily, thorough, bowel evacuation.

A SURE WAY TO END DANDRUFF

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

Ladies! Keep It on The Dresser

Few drops on corn or callus stops pain, then they lift off.

Your high heels have put corns on your toes and calluses on your feet, but why care now?

This tiny bottle holds an almost magic fluid. A genius in Cincinnati discovered this ether compound and named it freezone. Small bottles of freezone can be had at any drug store for a few cents. Never limp or twist your face in pain again, but get a bottle of freezone and apply a few drops on your tender, aching corns or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears and shortly you will find the corn or callus so shriveled and loose that you lift it off with fingers.

Just think! You get rid of a hard corn, soft corn or a corn between the toes, as well as hardened calluses, without suffering one particle, without the slightest irritation of the surrounding skin. Just a touch of freezone on a sore corn gives instant relief.

MUST RAISE THE LOAN TO MARKET THE WHEAT

Great Dependence of Grain Growers on Success of Present Campaign —How it Was Done Last Year.

No class of men in the Dominion is more directly interested in the success of the forthcoming Victory Loan than the grain growers. Notwithstanding the decrease in the 1918 yield per acre throughout the West it is expected that there will be available for export to Great Britain close to 100,000,000 bushels, which at the price fixed by the Government will bring to the grain growers no less than $225,000,000 in real money.

The grain growers responded to the appeal for more production by putting in nearly 2,000,000 more acres of wheat than last year. It is unfortunate that in these stressful times, there should have been a reduced crop year, but the fact that they responded to the urge to produce more indicates their whole-hearted support of the Government's war policy. The circumstance that $225,000,000 will pour into the pockets of the grain growers on the delivery of this year's crop will do a great deal towards strengthening the country's financial position.

Britain Wants Our Wheat.

This is how the Victory Loan figures in the possibilities of the future: It is through the Victory Loan that the wheat crop is financed. Great Britain wants our wheat, as she wants many others of our products, but under the necessity of continuing at high pressure the many war services she is not in a position to pay for the wheat at once. The Dominion Government must provide the cash which goes into the pockets of the western farmers, and it is done through the Victory Loan.

Hear the word of authority on the subject. Sir Thomas White, Finance Minister, says:—

"A very considerable portion of the Western wheat crop will be financed through the Victory Loan. The crop could not be moved unless the Dominian Government furnished a considerable amount of money by way of an advance."

Advanced 100 Millions.

This is the situation in a nutshell. Last year the Dominion Government made advances amounting to $100,000,000 to finance the wheat crop. Concerning those financial operations Mr. E. R. Wood, Chairman of the Dominion Victory Loan Committee, said:

"When the United States entered the war, in April, 1917, we were faced with two important factors, namely: that Great Britain could not pay cash for her purchases in this country, and that the United States could no longer help to finance Canada. That was the delicate and dangerous situation. The success of the Victory Loan met that situation completely. For the farmer, the loan was able to finance the only purchaser who could buy his excess products, namely Great Britain."

Made Business Good.

In the fiscal year, 1915, our farmers exported animal and agricultural products valued at $209,000,000. During the last fiscal year they exported no less than $740,000,000, the largest agricultural exports in the history of the country. The advances made by the Government last year permitted not only the prompt disposal and movement of the wheat crop but it put millions of dollars at once into the pockets of the western farmers. This had a stimulating effect on the business life of the Prairie Provinces. There was never so much money in circulation.

It cannot be too strongly impressed on the people of the west that there is only one market for this year's surplus wheat, and that is Great Britain. The success of the forthcoming Victory Loan will make possible the financing of this year's crop. Two million people living west of the great lakes primarily and all the people of Canada to a less extent are interested in the question. They cannot afford to see the Loan fail, and it will fail, at last partially, unless the people of Canada place such a sum at the disposal of the Finance Minister that he will be able to meet all financial contingencies.

POOR BELGIUM.

Dog meat is almost a luxury in Belgium, and cats also are slaughtered for the table. Food commodities are so scarce that old people and infants are dying in great numbers. Tuberculosis is ravaging the population. Prof. Albert J. Carnoy, of the University of Louvain, made the following statement:

"Coffee is very scarce in Belgium, and is not obtainable under $5 a lb. Eggs sell at 16c apiece. To preserve, however, that kind of food, so badly needed for the invalid, now so numerous in Belgium, the works of rescue provide a low price food for the hens. Swiss cheese is obtainable at $3 a lb. Chocolate sells at $4 a lb, and cocoa at $4.50. Olive oil is $8 a bottle. This situation has incited the discovery of numerous substitutes. A severe test has been applied to imitation products, and all that were harmful have been pitilessly excluded. What is more interesting to record is the use of strawberry leaves, instead of tobacco, totealine to replace coffee, syrup instead of butter."

LIGHTING OUR LIVES.

Lines Along Which Physicians of the Future May Work.

Some day there will be a new physician who will be part engineer and part medical student. He will ask you no personal questions, and his prescriptions will be filled by a dealer in lamps and lighting fixtures; yet he is a man who can cure the world of half its grouchiness and ill temper.

The new doctor will investigate your home from the standpoint of lighting efficiency. Have you enough or too much light? Is the wall paper soothing to your eyes, yet economical from the standpoint of lighting efficiency, or does the color of it and its figures cut your nerves like a ragged edged knife?

Medical men have said that many a murder has been the result of a glaring incandescent light and red wall paper. When the denizen of a flat building curses the pianist across the way his ill temper may be caused by his desk light and not by the piano at all. The eye can stand less abuse than the ear, and were it in repose the grouch would probably fail to notice the doubtful music. The lighting doctor probably will find the cause of that grouch and remove it.

Instead of a stethoscope he will use an illuminometer. The illuminometer is a device to tell in figures just how bright the light on your book is as you sit and read. It is used by lighting engineers, municipal lighting departments, building inspectors and others for determining the brightness of natural or artificial illumination. Portable, easily and quickly used and utilizing the familiar methods of measurement, it is a complete outfit for making photometric measurements.—Technical World.

Whispering.

What is the most arresting noise—the human shout, the fire bell, the toot or scream of the motorcar? Not a bit. A doctor will tell you that the human whisper is the wakener. A patient may sleep through all the noises but that, which some people think secret, in a railway train. And the first thing a nurse has to learn is not to whisper, for you can waken the soundest sleeper with that when a conscientious carpenter's hammer would leave him sound asleep.—London Standard.

No Fiction.

It was a clerk in a bookstore of whom a prim matron demanded a book for her son. "No fiction, please," she explained, "but absolute, literal truth, without unnecessary verbiage or absurdly fanciful pictures."

"Well, madam" — the bookseller paused, his eye running over his shelves; then, with a flash of inspiration, he took down a volume. "I should think this might meet your requirements," he said, and he handed her a popular geometry.

What are Canada's Victory Bonds

CANADA'S Victory Bonds are the solemn promise of the Dominion of Canada to the holders that Canada will repay, at the time stipulated in the bonds, their full face value in money, and will pay interest at the rate stated in the bonds, every six months.

As a financial investment Canada's Victory Bonds are in the first rank of the world's investments because:

—the security of the principal and interest is certain as anything human can be, being nothing less than the entire assets of Canada, the pledged honor of the people of Canada and all the assets of all the people of Canada,

—they are the most "liquid" form of investment; they can be promptly turned into cash at any time,

—they bear interest which, if saved and compounded, at ordinary bank interest rates would double the amount of the original investment in about fourteen years.

They are also free from Dominion taxation, present or future.

FOR the investment of estate funds, trust funds, sinking funds and all other funds which by law or other necessity must be invested in unquestioned securities, Canada's Victory Bonds are the premier investment.

Executors, trustees, municipalities and public service corporations and all others with trust or sinking funds to invest, can render to Canada valuable patriotic service by investing their funds in Canada's Victory Bonds.

+ + +

AND because of the high rate of interest they bear, coupled with their supreme security, there is every reason to expect that Canada's Victory Bonds 1918 will increase in value, when peace is declared—already in the open market Victory Bonds 1917 are quoted at an increase over the issue price.

+ + +

BUT Canada's Victory Bonds are much more than merely a sound money investment; they are Canada's renewed pledge to fight the war to a finish, till victory is with the Allies and lasting peace is secured to the world.

Every one of Canada's Victory Bonds bought by you is a new assurance to every Canadian soldier that Canada stands behind him ready to send him food and munitions, and to care for those he has left in Canada.

Canada's Victory Bonds guarantee that Canada will keep on producing the food, the munitions and machines to bring victory to the Canadian soldiers in France, and that Canada will keep the home fires burning for their loved ones while they are fighting for our freedom.

+ + +

SO when you buy Canada's Victory Bonds you help Canada finance the war,—you help to maintain the production of food, munitions and supplies which our soldiers must have.

—and the money paid for these products helps to maintain business and industrial conditions by which the productive efficiency of Canada can be kept at high pressure.

Your investment in Canada's Victory Bonds will be a link in the complete chain of helping our soldiers, helping the country, and thereby also helping yourself.

Investment in Canada's Victory Bonds is sound business patriotism

British Have Advanced to Within Short Distance of Village of Tournai

Sharp Fighting at Various Points Along the Battlefront—British Casualties.

OFFICIAL DESPATCHES

LONDON, Oct. 22. — The British have advanced their line to the left bank of the Ecaillon river and have captured the western part of the village of Thiant, five miles south-west of Valenciennes, it is announced officially. The British after sharp fighting have advanced to within less than a mile of Tournai.

The statement follows:

As a result of local fighting during the night we advanced our line to the left bank of the river Ecaillon, south of Thiant, the western portion of which is in our possession. Further progress has been made by our troops between Valenciennes and Tournai. The enemy's resistance on the front is increasing. In the Tournai sector, as a result of sharp fighting during the night, we drove the enemy out of the village of Orcq and the woods in the neighbourhood of Froyenne. Our troops are now within less than a mile from the town.

French Official.

PARIS, Oct. 22.—(Official.)—Further progress was made last night by the French on the Serre front. The French reached the railway north-west of Assis-Sur-Serre and also St. Jacques farm, north-west of Chalandry.

British Casualties.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—British casualties reported for the week ending to-day numbered 37,150, compared with 35,710 for the previous week. They are as follows: Killed or died of wounds, 5,488; wounded or missing, 31,662.

LONGED FOR CRACK AT THE CONSTABLE

Early Morning Arrest Adds Two Hundred Dollars to the Treasury.

In this morning's police court Frank W. Tully pleaded not guilty to the charge of having liquor in a place other than his residence.

He was seen by P. C. Bromely driving with a horse and buggy at a fast pace at 6 o'clock this morning. At Akey and Poulson's livery stable, from where the accused hired the horse, the buggy was searched, and a whiskey bottle with an inch of whiskey in it was found.

A Fond Hope.

"I'd like to get a crack at you," was Tully's only comment while being conducted to the police station this morning by the guardian of the law. At the station a corkscrew was found in one pocket, but the prisoner knew nothing about it.

The prisoner took the stand in his own behalf and, according to his testimony, he had worked for Mr. Gus White on his farm, Chemong road, all summer. Mr. White asked him to go to the home of Mr. Bradley in Smith township to see if his threshing outfit was available. He was at the house of his brother John and had two drinks of whisky, after which he went to the home of Caleb Mellens, where he stayed for the night.

"And I hadn't had a drink for two years," said the prisoner positively, to the amusement of the court. He didn't know where the bottle came from or the corkscrew.

"They put a corkscrew in your pocket and a bottle of whiskey in your buggy," said the Crown Attorney. "And who opened your mouth."

He was conducted to the cells until next Friday, when he suddenly changed his mind. Again appearing before the Magistrate he pleaded guilty and was promptly assessed the usual $200 fine with $10.10 costs, or three months in jail.

"The goal is in sight, but tons of comforts will be needed before it is reached. The widow gave her mite."

GERMANS ABANDONED COAST DEFENCE GUNS

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, Oct. 22. — British troops have reached the Escaut (Scheldt) river on a five mile front north of Tournai, Field Marshal Haig announced in his special Belgian communique early to-day.

The British advanced about a mile between the Escaut and the Lys, while the French improved their positions along the latter river.

The Germans, it was announced, abandoned all their coast defence guns.

Peterboro Casualties

Pte. William Curtin Died of Wounds —Other Casualties.

Mr. David Curtin, East City, was officially notified this morning of the death at the front of his son, Private William Curtin. The late Pte. Curtin died of multiple gunshot wounds on October 12th, in Number 33 Casualty Station. He was first wounded some months ago and also gassed. He subsequently returned to the front line.

Pte. Curtin enlisted in the 93rd Battalion and for nearly two years has been in the trenches. He was a brave soldier and scorned the offer of a position as cook with a base battalion in England in order to go to the front where the fighting was.

PTE. WM. CURTIN

On one occasion Pte. Curtin aided by two comrades, captured twenty German prisoners. He was present at many of the important engagements of the past two years. Prior to enlisting he was an expert cook and in that capacity was employed by some of the lumbering companies throughout the district where he was well and favourably known.

Pte. Curtin was born in Galway Township thirty years ago. In addition to his parents he is survived by three sisters and five brothers, namely, Mrs. William Dolan of Galway, Uella of East City and Loretta of East City. The brothers are Thomas and David of Galway, Michael of Brownton, Robert of Peterborough, and Wilfrid of East City. The late Pte. Curtin was a member of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, East City.

PTE. JOHN SLOAN.

Mr. and Mrs.. John Sloan, of Millbrook, have just received word that their son, Pte. John Sloan, has been killed in action. The date given was September 28. He went overseas only last February. He worked in Peterborough at the Mattress Factory, East City. His brother was killed in France some time ago.

TO THE PETERBORO PUBLIC

You surely have not missed the LITTLE LESS WHEAT in your bread? Yet by this small sacrifice we have done much to save Britain and her Allies from starvation.

Why not FOLLOW THIS UP by giving more than ever this year to the Red Cross and thus help save the lives of our wounded Canadian and Allied soldiers.

Victories cost more in men and munition than does defensive warfare, and Peace is still a long way off. If we stop giving now we are playing right into the hand of the enemy.

It is unthinkable, is it not, that our boys should lack any implement of war that money will buy? It would be a greater shame than our minds care to dwell on, that our boys should suffer sickness or death because we now hold back the money necessary for their care when sick or wounded.

Let us remember that "GIVING IS LIVING."

For the convenience of anyone who cannot wait for a canvasser to call, a Red Cross Room will be opened at 338 George St., during the Campaign, Oct. 22nd, 23rd and 24th.

Yours for Over The Top,

2d-93 THE PETERBORO RED CROSS SOCIETY.

GERMANY'S NEW LINE

Hun Generals Are Playing for Time —May Not Defend Antwerp.

BATTLE CONTINUES

(United Press Service.)
(By Wm. Phillip Simms.)

PARIS, Oct. 22.—The news of the last forty-eight hours is corroborative of Germany's intention to fall back on the short line from Holland through Liege, Metz and Strassburg to Switzerland.

The eleventh-hour armistice manoeuvre having failed, to save them from disaster, Von Hindenburg and Ludendorff are working hand in glove with Berlin, playing for time.

Meanwhile, they are praying to every variety of Boche Belliken that something will happen to prevent a debacle.

Apparently, the rainy season has commenced, holding out the hope that General Winter will grant the truce which the Allies refused. However, the battle is rattling on.

Plan Seems Clear.

Ludendorff's general plan seems clear. It consists of refusing battle on the northern flank, while stubbornly holding onto the positions in the centre.

Reports have reached Paris that the Huns do not intend to defend Antwerp. Masses of Boches are pouring past Antwerp toward Liege. Likewise much material. Military critics do not believe the Germans would have quit the Belgian coast unless they realized the necessity of giving up practically all of Belgium.

Things are also livening up on the Alsace-Lorraine front, where the Germans are very uneasy. Developments are expected there, especially by the enemy.

Thus, while the precise goal of Ludendorff's manoeuvres can still only be surmised, the scheme of reaching it is perfectly clear-cut.

Men Are Badly in Need of Socks

PETERBORO PARCELS ACKNOWLEDGED BY FIELD COMFORTS COMMISSION.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Progressive Club will be held to-morrow, Wednesday, the 23rd, in the Barrie Building, at 3.30 p.m. The last two bales sent to the Canadian Field Comforts Commission, contained 252 pairs of socks.

The following letter was received last week:

To Miss Peck, Pres. Progressive Club
758 George street, Peterborough.

Dear Miss Peck: In our last shipment we received one case of socks from your Club, which was shipped on June 13th. Many thanks for these. We are so very glad to have them as the men are badly in need of socks, after all the moving and fighting of the past few weeks. With best wishes, yours faithfully,

CITY WILL NOT PRESS PROTEST AGAINST THE BELL TELEPHONE RATES

The Legal Committee of the Council last night considered discretion the better part of conducting the city's affairs and retired from the pursuit of the Bell Telephone Company's increased rates. Ald. A. A. McIntyre had pointed out at a recent meeting of the Council that some action should be taken to investigate the company's new tariff, but the Dominion Railway Board informed the city that it must file a formal protest, which involved the preparation of a case to show that the company was not entitled to the new rates. City Solicitor Gordon intimated that it would cost the city no small sum to engage experts and properly present the case to the Board. This prospect of stirring up a nest of expenses that should be avoided in the present straitened circumstances of the treasury prompted the Committee to drop the issue as quickly as possible.

It was stated that the Company's increases were the first since the war started, and were probably justified.

The Committee also decided on motion of Ald. M. McIntyre, seconded by Alderman Jones that the Council should retain the title to the Public Library property.

FRANK JENNE Says:

Never was the marvellous efficiency and speed of the Red Cross so apparent as at the present time of the war. These two factors have been the means of saving hundreds of Canadian lives. Our help is needed to maintain these two factors, so necessary for the welfare of the boys "over there." Remember the motto, "Give as they fight."

WAR MAP — Le Cateau, the scene of the latest Canadian victory, is to be seen in the upper right of this map.

Unconditional Surrender and No More Negotiation

German Reply to President Wilson Generally Regarded as Unacceptable —Germany's One Desire is to Go On Talking—Comment on the Latest German Reply.

LONDON, Oct. 22. — The newspapers almost without exception, view the German reply to President Wilson with impatience and distrust.

"Germany still impenitent," is the caption on the editorial of the Chronicle, which dismisses the reply as obviously unacceptable.

The Graphic is more optimistic, and says: "Verbally, the Germans are getting slightly ne rer the point of view upon which the Allies mean to insist."

"The nigger in the woodpile" in the German reply, according to the Express, is the desire for an armistice based on an elaborate estimate of the rival forces as they are to-day. This the newspaper says, is an "disingenuous twist of the Wilson conditions," and continues:

"We dare not consent to a suspension of hostilities unless we can obtain in October the terms we shall dictate before July to an enemy who is broken and beaten to his knees.'

The Daily Telegraph says: "Germany's one desire is to go on talking." The newspaper points out the danger of this procedure.

CLOSE THE DOOR.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22. — An analysis of editorial opinion from all p rts of the United States, shows little desire for consideration of Germany's latest reply. If President Wilson answers it at all, says newspaper opinion generally, it should be to refer Germany to the Allies' supreme war council, headed by Field Marshal Foch. Some papers suggest plainly that the president should close the door to future negotiations that are not accompanied by unconditional surrender by Germany.

Paris and London comment to hand so far is partially unanimous in the demand for unconditional surrender, and "no more talk" until that surrender comes.

German Press Comment.

Special to The Examiner:

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 22.—The German press generally considers Doctor Solf's reply to President Wilson as a satisfactory basis for further negotiation. "Should Wilson demand impossibilities, we must reckon on the continuation of the war," the Talgeblatt declares.

Mere Argument.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—German reply to President Wilson is regarded here as "not business, but mere argument and protestation." In government, diplomatic and political circles the view is that it is not a reply. One highly placed official described it as a badly camouflaged insincerity. The government has not considered the reply in detail, although Premier Lloyd George and his colleagues held a protracted deliberation to-day.

Late Despatches Say.

(Special to The Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—(2:30 o'clock)—Germany must come to military terms with Marshal Foch.

This was the outstanding feature of developments here up to noon to-day, following the receipt of the latest reply to President Wilson. The next logical step appeared to be an announcement from Foch of the terms on which he would consider an armistice possible. Whether the President will request Foch to make this statement at this time is not purely problematical.

It is believed in military circles that Foch's minimum terms will include the Allied occupation of Metz, Strassburg and Coblense. Meantime the public pressure from the entire nation in the form of telegrams and editorial opinion was combined with the strongest demands from Congress, expressed by members individually that unconditional surrender be made the only basis for further negotiations.

The official text of the German reply has been delivered to President Wilson. It is thought no reply will be made till to-morrow.

"A Great Advance."

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, Oct. 22.—The Majority of the members of the House of Commons are hostile to Germany's reply, regarding it as an attempt to split the Allies. Solf's armistice plan is not sufficient, they declare. The constitutional changes referred to, they point out are contained in a bill which has not yet been passed by the Reichstag.

A few Labourites and Radicals regard the note as a great advance from previous German notes.

Will Reply Soon.

(Special to The Examiner.)

PARIS, Oct. 22.—(1:45 p.m.) — "The Austro-Hungarian Government soon will reply to President Wilson's note, inasmuch as he has not answered the question concerning possible conditions for peace negotiations," declares a semi-official despatch from Vienna, received here to-day.

Punish Culprits.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 22.—German Provincial and Socialist newspapers continue their campaign against the "Chief Culprits" responsible for the war. The Frankische Tages Post of Nuremburg, the first paper in Germany to openly demand the abdication of the Emperor, declares that the accession of the Crown Prince is entirely out of the question. "The German people is searching for the guilty," says the Volks Zeitung, the organ of the Nuremburg Socialists. The Pan-German policy has gone bankrupt, but, unfortunately, it has led the German people to disaster. To the gallows with the guilty, whoever they may be." The Socialist Arbiter Zeitung of Vienna urges German Socialists to punish the "Chief Culprits" without mercy.

G.T.P. IMPROVES EDMONTON FACILITIES TO HANDLE ITS GROWING TRAFFIC

EDMONTON, Oct. 22.—Mr. W. P. Hinton, Vice-President and General Manager of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, states that from three to four times the volume of freight traffic has been passing over the G.T.P. line between Prince Rupert and Edmonton this year as compared with any previous season. To handle this growing business the yards of the Grand Trunk Pacific at Edmonton are to be increased one-third in size. Work has commenced on the enlargement of the round-house, machine shops, power-house and extension of the trackage in the yards. Other extensions are proposed in the near future. Mr. Hinton believes that there is enough prospective business in the territory tributary to the City of Edmonton to warrant the anticipation of continuous growth in railroad facilities.

Kaiser Must Conclude a Quick Peace, Says Harden of Germany

Deep Wedges Driven Into Enemy Lines

(United Press.)
(By Lowell Mellet.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Oct. 22. — British troops are rapidly enclosing Tournai, both to the north and south. Deep wedges have been driven into the German lines on both sides of this important city, and its fall appears imminent.

The enemy is stubbornly defending the approaches with artillery and machine guns.

The Germans heavily shelled Neuville last night, from which I saw wet and bedraggled but happy women, children and old men escaping this afternoon. They were escorted by Tommies, who were carrying chickens, household goods and other valuables.

A Blunt Declaration of German Conditions—Meeting Ended in a Demonstration.

THE KAISER'S CROSS

AMSTERDAM, Oct, 22.—"We are at one. When a fortress can no longer hold, it is no dishonour if the Commander surrenders. The Kaiser must take up his cross of concluding quickly necessary peace and accepting whatever is hard. Let the Kaiser declare himself ready, and let him fit himself with new Germany as her first citizen."

This utterance of Maximilian Harden, addressed to several thousand people in Berlin on Sunday, was loudly applauded.

The meeting ended in a riotous demonstration.

Herr Harden, whose plain-spoken language in Die Zukunft, of which he is editor, has caused a suspension of the journal on several occasions, was permitted, according to the reports of his address, to speak freely and without let or hindrance. His remarkable declaration respecting surrender and the "Kaiser's cross" followed a review of the situation, in which he pointed out that Bulgaria was occupied, Turkey's fate was sealed, and Austria-Hungary was out of the fight.

"It is one of the most cruel actions that this war, which was begun to maintain an impossible Austria, should be ended by the declaration of that selfsame Austria that it cannot exist," continued Herr Harden. "We must shoulder the consequences of the step taken October 5."

"There is no shame in accepting the consequences of acts one has committed.

All Must Make Sacrifices.

"We must make sacrifices. The Emperor also must make sacrifices. He must first adapt himself to the new Germany, and content himself to represent the nation. He must remove from his successors all possibility that they will be harmful to the nation. Then he must bear his own part of the cross and conclude rapidly the necessary peace and take upon himself the task of accepting the onerous conditions involved in that.

"We must withdraw the German troops to the Empire's frontiers, and henceforth demand that the Reichstag assent to a declaration of war."

Italians on Western Front

Full Army Corps in the Great Battle in France.

(Special to Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22. — Italian forces number nearly half a million men in France. General Mangin in a telegram of congratulation to the Italian minister of war, discloses the fact that Italy has a full army corps in the great battle in France.

The Italian embassy pointed out that in addition to this combatitive force of more than 250,000 troops, the Italians have had approximately 200,000 non-combatant and work troops behind the French lines since early in the war.

WAR SUMMARY

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—The Associated Press to-day issues the following summary:

Allied troops on the northern end of the front in France and Belgium to-day are driving into the German line from the west of Ghent, past Tournai to Valenciennes. This is the line of Scheldt, and two of the important points on it, Tournai and Valenciennes, are almost within the grasp of the British. The German resistance is stiffening between Tournai and Valenciennes southern end of 80 mile line from Valenciennes to the Dutch frontier. The British armies, however, continue to progress. Orcq, within less than a mile of Tournai on the west, has been captured, and the British hold La Sentinelle, one mile west of Valenciennes. North of Tournia the British are along the Scheldt river on a front of five miles and north and south of this sector are gaining the western bank of the river. Between Valenciennes and Le Cateau the British maintain pressure and have reached the Ecaillon river at Thiant, south-west of Valenciennes.

GLEANINGS FROM BATTLE FRONTS

(Special to Examiner.)

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 22. — A revolution has broken out in Bulgaria, according to a report received here to-day. Fighting is now going on in the streets of Sofia between laborers and troops. Three thousand people have been killed.

WILL FORM LEGION.

(Special to Examiner.)

ROME, October 22. — In conformation with the desire of the Roumanians residing in Italy the Government has authorized the formation of a Roumanian legion to operate on the Italian front.

MAKING GOOD PROGRESS.

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, Oct. 22.—French troops operating north of the British army (in Flanders) advanced on a wide front this morning and are making excellent progress, battle front despatches reported to-day.

BERLIN REPORT.

(Special to The Examiner.)

BERLIN, via London, Oct. 22 — American attacks north of the Somme and on both sides of Von Bantsville broke down under fire and counter attacks with heavy losses, the German War Office announced to-day.

OVER THE TOP.

Canada's new Victory Loan goes over the top on Monday. The preliminary barrage is clearing the way of all obstructions and when zero time comes the rush to the final objectives will be under way. Just now the biggest menace in the path of the Victory Loan to victory is the feeling that the money will not be needed with the end apparently in sight. There never was a more mistaken idea, and once more let it be understood that were the war to come to an end to-day, Canada would still require every dollar of the five hundred million that is being asked for. How do you suppose the purchase of Canadaa's surplus products by Great Britain would be financed if there were no Victory Loan? And our troops overseas, how would they be paid and fed and separation allowances for their families provided? For if peace were signed to-day we would still have the expenses of the army on our shoulders. It will be many months after the peace articles are signed before Canada's army is demobilized, returned from overseas and placed back in civilian life. And in the meantime the Vitcory Loan money will be needed to look after them.

Make no mistake—the Victory Loan is absolutely needed, and every Canadian must stand behind the campaign. $500,000,000 is a lot of money, but the people of Canada have it and are ready to lend it to help carry on the war. From sheer patriotic motives alone every cent of the amount should be readily forthcoming, but leaving that consideration on one side and coming down to a more sordid basis, investment in Canada's loan is a sound, profitable business transaction. The credit of the nation is behind the loan and there is the high interest rate of five and one half per cent. You are being paid substantial interest and are taking absolutely no risk.

There should be no hesitation when the bonds are placed on the market next week. Every citizen of Peterborough should invest to the limit and help win an honour flag for this city.

The Loan is going gover the top on Monday. Are you going with it?

PLUNDERING THE CONSUMING PUBLIC.

Specialists, with the necessary official data at hand, are going deeply into the subject as to whether or not the present abnormal prices of various food stuffs are justified. The answer is that they are not justified. Or to put it fairly and squarely, the consuming public is in a great degree being robbed. The impression is very general that the country is short of cattle and swine, therefore the excuse for boosting the prices of these meats to nearly double the old scale. The fact is that in 1917, the last official figures available, we had in this country nearly 2,000,000 more milch cows, beef cattle, sheep and swine than we possessed in 1915. To particularize: 536,000 more milch cows, 319,000 other cattle, 508,000 swine and 331,000 more sheep than we possessed in 1915. It may also be noted in passing that the increase in the United States between the two periods mentioned was also as striking, with the single exception of slight decline in the number of sheep, so our neighbour's alleged shortage carries as an excuse not the least vestige of weight.

When one comes to the produce of the farm which is also up a hundred per cent. or so, we find much the same position of affairs. The farmer sells you 25 cents worth of vegetables and charges you 50 cents for them, the excuse being that his costs are up a hundred per cent. To begin with, this is not true. He is not paying a hundred per cent. advance for his labour nor for his machinery, but even if he were this does not justify his asking a hundred per cent. advance on his products for obvious reasons. For instance, the rise in the cost of farm machinery, 1914, as compared with 1917, would be less than sixty per cent. But he does not buy this farm machinery every year or even every ten years. His extra labour, which is only for a limited period, he paid $1.50 per day to five years ago, where he now pays $2 to $3. Let him write off the utmost he decently can from his farm machinery as an annual charge; let him calculate the increased cost of his labour, and then let him apply that to his crop. For instance, if he has raised a thousand bushels of wheat his additional cost on labour account would be 13 1-2c. per bushel and 12 cents per bushel on machinery or 25 1-2 cents in all, as compared with 1914 prices. In turn he is getting $1.20 per bushel more for his wheat, provided it is first class, than he did in 1914. No one will deny, of course, that the 1914 prices were too low to make farming a paying business, any more than one can deny that prices are not now too high in fairness to the consuming public. Our Ontario farmers have simply got the reins in their teeth. When one complains that 65 or 70 cents per dozen is too high for fresh eggs, the farmer begins by telling you that it costs a hundred per cent. more to keep hens now than it did, which is not a statemen of fact, but a bit of profiteering propaganda just as much as is the story that we are paying double for our beef and pork on account of a shortage of live stock.—Toronto Saturday Night.

A WONDERFUL REPORT.

Annual reports are as a rule inclined to be prosy affairs, but there is a wonderful story, full of heart interest in the annual report of the Canadian Red Cross Society, which has just been issued, and which is peculiarly timely in view of the campaign that is taking place in Peterborough this week.

The vast extent of the activities of the Canadian Red Cross overseas can be realized after glancing through the pages of this fascinating report. The growth of the work is illustrated by the fact that the headquarters in London has grown from one office and a small warehouse, both loaned by friends, to nearly forty offices, four warehouses and a transport convoy of four lorries and twelve cars, while the staff has increased from the original two to nearly two hundred, nearly all voluntary workers. From the London headquarters the chief overseas work of the Red Cross is directed.

The book is full of wonderful facts about the activities in England and France, telling a remarkable story of the work on behalf of our men overseas. If a copy of the report could be placed in the hands of every citizen of Canada campaigns for funds would not be needed — the money would roll in so fast.

Here is an extract from the report of Lieut.-Col. Blaylock, assistant commissioner of the work in France. Speaking of Passchendaele and the operations there he says:

> Conditions at Passchendaele were indescribable. The ground behind the front line was a mass of shell holes and a sea of mud. Roads were few and indifferent. Shell fire was heavy, gas was frequently used, aeroplanes bombed roads and communications. For thousands of yards, through the sticky Flanders mud, stretcher bearers toiled to bring the wounded towards help and safety. The advanced medical posts were, at the best, in partly demolished "pill boxes," at the worst, in the open without cover or protection. I venture to say that never in the history of the war has any medical service been faced with greater difficulties or graver dangers. The successful evacuation of our wounded in record time and in remarkably good condition reflects the highest credit upon the medical officers of the Canadian Corps. Men of wider experience than myself go so far as to say that it is an unequalled achievement.

In view of existing conditions, I knew that you would wish us to place all our resources and our best energies at the service of the D.D.M.S. In consultation with him, a long list of comforts was provided and delivered to the forward units. From socks to scissors, from candles to chewing gum, every want was anticipated. There was no stint of anything. We were in daily touch with every advanced post. During the heavier fighting these posts were visited two or three times each day, so that no want might remain unfulfilled. Our lorries have made deliveries in the forward area at midnight and have started again shortly after dawn to fill some new demand.

The conditions of the ground, the long distances which stretcher cases had to be carried, and the cold and wet weather, made it necessary that both casualties and stretcher bearers should be provided with hot drinks, chocolate, biscuits, etc., at relay posts and advanced dressing stations. In co-operation with the Chaplain Services, we opened eight canteens, reaching from the relay posts on the right and left sectors to Ypres. These canteens proved a positive God-send.

The Peterborough branch of the Red Cross Society needs $30,000. After reading the story of the Red Cross at Passchendaele, surely no one could refuse to contribute.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Give as they fight.

The Red Cross has saved the lives of thousands of Canadian wounded. You cannot afford to refuse to subscribe to their great work as long as there is a Canadian overseas.

Think of the prisoners in Germany. Are you going to allow them to starve because the Red Cross has not funds enough to look after them?

If a neighbour's family were starving across the street from you you would rush over with a basket of food as soon as you heard the news, wouldn't you. Well, a lot of your neighbours' sons are in danger of starving in Germany. Only the Red Cross can save them from that horrible fate. And the Red Cross needs money — $30,000 from Peterborough. Think it over.

The Red Cross campign begins today. The influenza epidemic will be a handicap, but let the spirit of the boys overseas animate the people of Peterborough for the next few days and all will be well.

The United States oversubscribed its latest Liberty Loan. Canada's Victory Loan goes over the top next week. We cannot do better han follow the example of our neighbours to the south.

"War Neurosis" is Not Very Serious

By FRANK J. TAYLOR.

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, Oct 2. (By Mail.)—Shellshock isn't shellshock after all.

It's war neurosis, so doctor have dicovered.

That takes all the prestige and distinction out of being shellshocked, so much so that a lot of people who know about it won't even admit there's shellshock anymore.

Here's why.

Were you ever surprised speechless, or scared stiff? Well, that's the same thing going on within you as when you have so-called shellshock. The fellow who went time after time to propose to his girl and couldn't make his tongue work, had the same thing, only on a smaller scale than they do at the front.

These discoveries about what they used to call shellshock are interesting and valuable, because they show that the victim merely has lost control of some faculty. He may stutter or his head may shake, or he may have the trembles, but it's far from being incurable.

Just as the chap who wants to propose finally gets his tongue and gets the idea over to her, so the shellshock patient gets back to himself again. The psychology of the word has been had, say doctors of one big army hospital who have been working on the problem. So they have requested that the word "shellshock" be forbidden in the army.

However, you can't prevent a man from thinking what he wants to say, if he can't say it, and thinking is as bad as saying, so a more practical group of doctors got busy and figured out just how ordinary shellshock is. Nobody is scared of it any more since it can be cured, sometimes in less than ten minutes, so it really doesn't make any difference whether you say shell shock or not.

The best cure, it seems, is to put your mind on practical and concrete work. Washing dishes, sawing a log, or knitting sox would be good for shellshock, because they give you something you can concentrate your mind and your hands upon.

In this shellshock hospital they work on manual training objects, making toys, building boxes, boats, or making designs. Anything one can concentrate on is good.

Just figurnig out what the proposition is has taken all the honor and danger out of shellshock, and since nobody's scared of it, everybody gets well pretty quickly. Most of the boys go right back into the trenches and never get it again.

THE MOOSE AND THE LILY PAD

The moose's love for the lily pad that floats on the surface of the northern lakes makes him appear reckless and unafraid. In summer, even in September, the fishermen often cut him off from the shore, drive him into the deep water, and have fun with him. Sometimes when the moose reaches shoal water and gets his kind feet on the bottom, he has fun with the fisherman, smashes his canoe, and makes him swim for his life. However, after the shooting season opens the moose becomes cautious. There are thousands of moose around Lake Timagami. Any Grand Trunk Agent can tell you how to get there, or write to C. E. Horning, D. P. A., G. T. R. Ry. System, Union Station, Toronto.

FAKED VENTRILOQUISM.

The Deception Made Possible by the Loud Speaking Telephone.

A great deal of ventriloquism is not ventriloquism at all. In fact, the modern wonder in this line of pleasant and deceptive art needs to have none of the old time ventriloquists' ability at all. He may—and often does—stand on the opposite side of the stage from hi manikin and puff a cigar quite contentedly, to the amazement of the audience. The dummy answers with a ready line of repartee, delivered in stentorian tones. Nor is that all, for he turns and twists his head, waves his arms, kicks up his feet and otherwise acts in a very lifelike manner.

The secret of the dummy's voice is the loud speaking telephone and of his actions various electro magnets. As may be guessed, both are operated by some one off the stage. In order to produce all the desired effects the dummy figure is fitted inside with a loud speaking telephone receiver, with the horn or large mouthpiece pointing toward the audience. The receiver is connected with a special transmitter in an anteroom some distance away. An ordinary operator's breast transmitter is also concealed in the body of the dummy, so that whatever is said by the ventriloquist on the stage is transmitted to the operator in the anteroom, enabling him to speak for the dummy at the proper time.—Argonaut.

Anti-Air Craft Shells.

Special shells have to be used in anti-air craft guns, for the ordinary shell fired into the air cannot be seen in its flight, and the gunner would have no idea whether he went near his target or not. So "tracer" shells are used in anti-air craft guns.

This shell leaves a trail of smoke by day and fire by night, so that its flight can clearly be seen, and the gunner is able to observe how far off his target he is.

The "tracer" has in its base an inflammable composition which is fired as the shell leaves the gun. The actual base of the shell has in it a number of holes, through which the smoke streams as the shell makes its way through the air. At night a firework attachment to the base of the shell takes the place of the smoke composition.

The shell itself is a high explosive shrapnel—that is to say, it is a shell with a thick steel high explosive head and a thin steel body filled with bullets. When it bursts the flying fragments of thick steel from the head smash up the aeroplane or Zeppelin, while the flying bullets kill or wound the aviators.—Pearson's.

A Welcome Visitor.

Prospectors in Alaska who spend the long winters up there sometimes are incredibly lonely. A man named Hartford was left in charge of a mine one winter. He was all alone and at the end of the third month was sighing for companionship. One morning he left his cabin to get some wood and met an enormous black bear that reared on its hind legs and stretched out its front paws as if to hug the miner.

"Good morning, bear," said the miner, holding out his hand. "I'm darned glad to see you."

TO FARMERS

The Government has sent out an appeal to the Canadian people to buy at home. Why? Because when we buy abroad more than we sell we have to pay a premium on the excess, in addition to the price of the goods. This is known as an adverse rate of exchange. We have bought four hundred million dollars' worth more from the United States than we have sold to it. The rate of exchange is 2 per cent. against us. In other words, we are paying 2 per cent. on four hundred millions of dollars, or eight million dollars, which means that if we owe a great deal of money for goods bought we have to pay extra for the privilege. If we keep this up Canada will bleed to death. Please inquire into this matter at once.

TWO MINDS THAT DID AS ONE.

When Dr. Anna Shaw and Miss Anthony Lectured Together.

Writing of her lectures for suffrage with Susan B. Anthony, Dr. Anna Howard Shaw says in the Metropolitan Magazine:

We traveled and lectured together so constantly that each of us developed an almost uncanny knowledge of the other's mental processes. At any point of either's lecture the other could pick it up and carry it on—a fortunate condition, as it sometimes became necessary to do this. Miss Anthony was subject to contractions of the throat, which for the moment caused a slight strangulation. On such occasions—of which there were several—she would turn to me and indicate her helplessness. Then I would repeat her last sentence, complete her speech and afterward make my own.

The first time this happened we were in Washington, and Aunt Susan stopped in the middle of a word. She could not speak; she merely motioned to me to continue for her and left the stage. At the end of the evening a prominent Washington man who had been in our audience remarked to me confidentially:

"That was a nice little play you and Miss Anthony made tonight—very effective indeed."

For an instant I did not catch his meaning or the implication in his knowing smile.

"Very clever, that strangling bit, and your going on with the speech," he repeated. "It hit the audience hard."

"Surely," I protested, "you don't think it was a deliberate thing—that we planned or rehearsed it?"

He stared at me incredulously.

"Are you going to pretend," he demanded, "that it wasn't a put up job?"

I told him he had paid us a high compliment and that we must really have done very well if we had conveyed that impression, and I finally convinced him that we not only had not rehearsed the episode, but that neither of us had known what the other meant to say. We never wrote out our speeches, but our subject was always suffrage or some ramification of suffrage, and naturally we had thoroughly digested each other's views.

LIFE ON A SUBMARINE.

There Are No Comforts, and Sleep Is Almost Impossible.

Speaking of life on a submarine, one of Uncle Sam's naval officers stationed on one of these under sea terrors says:

"Every minute the men are in the submarine means the risk of pneumonia and tuberculosis. The entire inside of the boat sweats like a pitcher of ice water on a hot day. Before we are on it three hours our clothes are soaked, and they stay that way. We have absolutely no heat, which means that the boat is the temperature of the outside air. Sometimes we nearly freeze. The doctors say that the men on a submarine never sleep; they merely become unconscious for brief intervals. The air, the odors from the machinery, the constant vibration and the intense strain under which you labor make sleep an impossibility.

"In a storm, when we have to seal up, the air gets worse than anything you can imagine. There are eighteen men and two officers in one of our boats, and at any moment any one of the twenty may cause the death of all the rest. There is no room for mistakes. The space in which the men live is fifty feet long and about ten feet wide. I can stand upright if I pick my place, but most of the time my shoulders are bent. There are no bunks; we all spread our mattresses on an iron deck. The dining room consists of four electric hot plates. Nothing in the nature of a spark is allowed below decks, but we can heat up coffee on the hot plates and occasionally fry things. We can't smoke, and the vibration of the engines makes it impossible to read or even play cards, so when we are not working there's nothing for us to do but sit on the floor and look at each other."—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

The Human Brain.

Our brains are seventy year clocks. The angel of life winds them up once for all, then closes the case and gives the key into the hand of the angel of the resurrection. Tick-tack, tick-tack, go the wheels of thought. Our will cannot stop them. They cannot stop themselves. Sleep cannot still them. Madness only makes them go faster. Death alone can break into the case, and, seizing the ever swinging pendulum which we call the heart, silence at last the clicking of the terrible escapement we have carried so long beneath our wrinkled foreheads.—Holmes.

Matter of Precedence.

A discussion once arose in the University of Cambridge whether doctors at law or doctors in medicine should hold precedence. The chancellor asked whether the thief or the hangman preceded at an execution. Being told that the thief usually took the lead, "Well, then," said the chancellor, "let the doctors in law have the precedence and let doctors in medicine be next in rank."—London Standard.

Insulted.

"Why did you strike this man?" asked the court.

"He told me to use my head," pleaded the prisoner.

"Well, that's no crime, is it?"

"But, your honor, I was crushing stone at the time."—Buffalo Express.

Suspicious.

"Lucky Heinies" Got Away Safely

By FRANK J. TAYLOR

(United Press Staff Correspondent)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, Sept. 15. (By Mail.)—There is pathos in the brief reports that airmen sometimes turn in regarding battles above the clouds. The best words of a great writer would hardly be more vivid than the following three reports with all their military brevity as they were turned in to flight commander.

"Capt B. reports: Combat 9:20 to 9:40 region of Sampigny—Gironville—Etang de Girondel. Combat began at 5500 meters. Fired 200 rounds from 150 to 40 yards range. Put the observer's gun out of action, then both of my guns failed. Lieuts E and S also attacked. Both Lieut. E's guns failed and Lieut. S had motor trouble. After my guns jammed I maneuvered the enemy plane, a byplane Rumpler, to within 50 meters of the ground in the region of Etang Neuf. Held him here for five minutes without being able to fire a shot and trying to bluff him into landing. Was several times in perfect position at 20 yards range. Finally the pilot realized I could not shoot, the enemy plane flew straight for its own lines I followed to the region of Louemont at 400 meters altitude. When i turned to come home the enemy plane followed me back to our lines, the pilot firing about 50 rounds from the forward gun without result. The Rumpler was camouflaged in green and black diamonds with white tail, the cross on tail, on upper and lower wings, number 8 in white on each side of fuselage. During latter part of combat the observer stood up facing me and as I maneuvered, he would turn and point to his pilot the direction in which to turn."

"Lieut. E reports: Saw two enemy aircraft east of Bey at 4000 meters. Saw one enemy aircraft north of Pont-a-Mousson at 4500 meters. Over Sampigny saw biplane Rumpler. Climbed to 5500 meters and headed enemy aircraft off his lines. He turned east over Foret d'Apremont. Capt. B got under his tail while pilot was maneuvering and an opportunity came to dive under him and attack from below, which I did, firing 40 shots from 30 meters Both guns jammed, and while clearing jams lost sight of fight in the clouds. Capt. B and Lieut. S were still after enemy aircraft when I left at 2000 meters. Rumpler had white tail, green camouflage and number 8 was painted on both sides of fuselage in white paint."

"Lieut. S reports: At 9:10 engaged an enemy two seater over Commercy at 4800 meters. Fired some 150 shots at range of from 100 to 40 meters. The enemy plane went into a dive and I followed pulling up at 800 meters to fix machine gun jam. At this point of the combat my pressure system went bad, my motor stopping dead, so I was forced to land near Gironville. The enemy artillery opened fire on my machine fifteen minutes after I had landed and up to the time I had left had not secured a direct hit, although the plane undoubtedly is badly damaged from shrapnel and shell fragments."

The BBoche airmen who figured in this figh tare elangily regarded as "meat" and also "lucky Heinies" by the airmen of the escadrille. It is seldom that victory is so close and slips away so easily through airmen's luck.

An official army report which caused more satisfaction abaout headquarters today than the three just quoted is the following.

"The commander-in-chief has learned with great satisfaction of the excellent work of the First pursuit group of the air service and desires to commend it especially for its praiseworthy record. The handicaps under which this initial pursuit unit of the American Expeditionary Forces has been organized and begun the discharge of its duty are well-known and recognized. With fine spirit and determination it has overcome obstacles and already achieved an enviable record. The commander and personnel are congratulated for their effective and daring work."

The commendation from the "C-in-O" more than balanced the "tough luck."

Brantford Business Men Hold Meeting to Fight Epidemic

BRANTFORD, Oct., 20.—Meetings of the merchants and manufacturers have been called for to-morrow morning to discuss further means of fighting the epidemic. It was reported today that there is a shortage of drugs for fighting the "flu." There is no quinine on hand

There are 112 cases in the Emergency Hospital, which has been affiliated with the Brantford General Hospital, and which is thus made eligible for the Government grant of 70 cents per day. Over the week-end there were 18 deaths, eight being reported on Saturday and 13 to-day, this making it the worst period of the epidemic.

REMANDED TO MONDAY

FIVE OGDEN SHOPS WORKERS ACCUSED OF VIOLATING LEMIEUX ACT.

CALGARY, Oct. 19.—When the cases of the five Ogden Shops workers, accused of violation of the Industrial Disputes Act, were called in Police Court, their counsel asked for a remand until Monday, which was granted. A crowd of 300 Labor men gathered to witness the proceedings but because of the order forbidding the congregation of more than ten persons on account of the Spanish influenza epidemic, they were not admitted to the courtroom.

The sale of meat by-products in Hamilton, Ontario, goes on with unliminished vigour. The eight different ench committees are each taking a week in turn and by this time the city has come to realize the value of the neglected by-products. Indeed, Miss Florence Meakins, the organizer of the movement, declares that the "longer they keep shop the more their wares become delicatessen instead of by-products."

During the first five days of the sale no less than 6,045 pounds of the meat were sold, or an average of 1,209 pounds a day. The sum netted for the five days was $662. The meat bill was $317, exclusive of the donation of 1,000 pounds given by the packers. Beyond $12 for incidentals there were no other expenses.

Winnipeg is beginning to make inquiries about the scheme and it is expected that other Canadian cities will take it up, now that it has been proven an unqualified success.

Clear, Peachy Skin Awaits Anyone Who Drinks Hot Water

Says an inside bath, before breakfast helps us look and feel clean, sweet, fresh.

Sparkling and vivacious—merry, bright, alert—a good, clear skin and a natural, rosy, healthy complexion are assured only by pure blood. If only every man and woman could be induced to adopt the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place. Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls, with pasty or muddy complexion; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance, awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

Ministerial Association and Council Discuss Epidemic and the Closing of Churches

While emphasizing their desire to co-operate with the Medical Officer of Health in his efforts to restrict the epidemic of influenza, the Ministerial Association presented to the Council last night their resolution passed on Saturday morning, to the effect that they deemed it in the best interests of the city that the churches be permitted to hold at least one service on each Sunday while the preventive regulations remain in force. There was complete agreement on the general question of combatting the disease in the city as thoroughly as possible, but the conference enabled the Association to lay before the Council certain considerations in support of a Sunday service in each church which they felt had perhaps been overlooked when the closing der was issued.

At the conclusion of the discussion Ald. Langford moved, seconded by Ald. Dobbin, that the directing of the campaign against the influenza outbreak be left with Dr. Amys, and Mayor Duncan expressed the encouraging hope that the Medical Officer might find the situation so much improved next Sunday that a service could be held as suggested.

The deputation from the Ministerial Association included Rev. Canon Davidson, Rev. J. R. Webb, Rev. R. Pogue, Rev. Dougald Brown, Rev. A. J. Thomas, Rev. R. B. Grobb, Rev. F. E. Mallott, Rev. W. H. White, Rev. F. H. Rowand and Rev. John Galt.

Rev. Canon Davidson.

Canon Davidson said that the Association did not desire to press upon the Council any particular proposition, but wished to consult with them in regard to the present crisis, the gravity of which the deputation fully recognized. Canon Davidson pointed out that the churches should noe be placed in the category of public halls, that meant theatres, clubs and motion picture houses. "We are not here simply to preach the Gospel but to do religious work in general, particularly in times of public trial and difficulty, when we have a special work to do. The church exists to bring spiritual power to the people, to co-operate with the authorities on such occasions as this, to help and comfort the public, and generally to uplift the town. If there is danger to the public, we very loyally bow to the orders of the Medical Officer and Council. We wish to urge that we have a very particular work for the souls and bodies of the community. The worse conditions are, the closer we desire to stand by mankind.

We would urge that churches are not wholly unsanitary places. They are clean and airy. There is no expectorating. The churches are thoroughly aired during the week, and between the Sunday services. We believe we could further help by calming and guiding the people in this time of difficulty."

Rev. J. R. Webb.

"We are here because we wish to do those things which in the long run will make for the speedy and most effective end of the epidemic in our midst," Rev. J. R. Webb stated. The whole history of epidemics from 1635 to 1918 proved that the opening of the churches and the gathering of the people for worship, had been a decided help to the work of the physicians. In the great plague of London in 1635 the churches were filled both day and night, and it was observed that the persons who attended were the least subject to the disease, and less likely to succumb to it. In the epidemic of 1889-90 inthis country there was no talk of closing the churches, and in Toronto, Mr. Webb quoted ex-Mayor Urquhart as saying, that all were convinced that the people were helped in every way by keeping the churches open for one service each Sunday.

Rev. Mr. Webb also quoted Dr. Osler and other medical authorities in testimony of his assertion that public worship in such anxious times helped to calm and steady the people.

Rev. Robt. Pogue.

Rev. Mr. Pogue had but recently recovered from an attack of La Grippe that visited five members of his household. He believed that the epidemic had swept a wider swath in the city than most people imagined. Whatever was done now, he believed, could not lessen the outbreak very much.

Rev. F. E. Mallott.

Rev. Mr. Mallott endorsed the representations that had been made, and added that when the factories, street cars and stores had been banned, the closing of the churches might be considered.

Mayor Duncan.

His Worship remarked that everything that had been done was for the best interests of the public. Everybody had co-operated whole heartedly, and the Mayor felt that the situation could be safely left with Dr. Amys.

Dr. Amys' Statement.

Dr. Amys announced that Peterboro had nothing more serious than La Grippe. But if this were combined with endemic pneumonia, Spanish influenza would become epidemic here.

"As long as it remains the innocent Grippe, I am willing to let the churches open for one service, but if endemic pneumonia becomes associated with it, I will close up everything—even to the factories. It was a godsend that the people hadn't a church to go to on Sunday. They would have got their feet and their clothes wet, and would consequently have become more devitalized, and likely to get it."

Dr. Amys explained that he had given permission to the picture shows to open a week ago upon receipt of a communication from the Provincial Officer of Health. On that same day, however, he read that Toronto was closing its theatres. "Had I been let alone the theatres would have remained closed, but the churches would have had one service on Sunday."

Rev. Mr. Webb asked Dr. Amys whether it was not true that history and science supported the belief that the churches experienced a psychological effect that helped to stamp out an epidemic?

"You may have history, but I don't see where science comes in," Dr. Amys replied, stating that doctors agreed that public meetings with persons infected with a disease helped to spread it.

Canon Davidson—We have every confidence in the Medical Officer of Health and we do not doubt but that what was done was for the public welfare?

Rev. Mr. Pogue—He has been most courteous, and I feel that he will do everything possible in the interests of the church and of the people.

DOIRAN VICTORY MADE POSSIBLE BY GREEKS

SALONICA, Oct. 20.—Lieut.-Gen. Milne, commander of the British forces here, in responding to a telegram of congratulations from Gen. Danglis, the Greek commander-in-chief, declared that without the aid of the Greek army it would not have been possible to attain the allied victory at Doiran during the recent fighting. The British commander said that Greek help had made possible the allied advance to the Vardar and that the Greek troops had shown themselves worthy of their country's best traditions

Gen. Zymbrakakis, commander of the Greek army of national defence has issued an order of the day congratulating his soldiers on the bravery and tenacity shown in the recent succesful fighting.

NO CHANCE FOR THE GERMS.

Disease germs cannot live in rich, red blood. It is people in low vitality that fall victims to germ diseases. By using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food you enrich the blood, increase vitality and prevent disease germs from finding lodgment in your body. There's wisdom in prevention. It's easier to keep well than to get well.

BELGIUM TAKES STEPS TO COMPUTE DAMAGE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—The Belgian Government already has taken steps to compute the enormous total of the damage done to property in Belgium by the Germans during their occupation of the country, said a cablegram received to-day by the Belgian legation. The Council of Ministers met at Havre and adopted measures for verifying claims for damages to civilian and pubilc property. These will be employed as a means for determining the total compensation to be demanded from Germany.

SAVE YOUR WOOD ASHES

The experience of many generations of farmers and gardeners has proven the high value of unleached wood-ashes as a fertilizer, especially for clover, corn, farm roots and vegetables and fruit crops generally. Wood ashes contain no nitrogen and supply no humus, but as far as mineral plant food is concerned there is probably no compounded mineral fertilizer on the market that is more effective and more lasting. They furnish potash, lime, phosphoric acid —the very elements taken from the soil by the forest trees, and, returned to the soil they will supply, in the very best form and combinations, the mineral plant food required by the crops.

According to analysis made by the Division of Chemistry, experimental farms, unleached hardwood ashes, free from sand, etc., will contain between 5 and 6 per cent of potash, about 2 per cent. of phosphoric acid and from 20 to 30 per cent. of lime. Before the war Germany supplied all the potash used for fertilizing purposes; since that supply has been cut off, potash has tremendously increased in price so that now it is worth almost ten times what it was in the early part of 1914, and as a consequence it has practically disappeared from commercial fertilizers. The potash in 100 pounds of good quality wood ashes is now worth from $1.00 to $1.50.

Scarcity of Coal.

Owing to the scarcity and high price of coal, farmers will be burning more wood this winter than has been customary for many years. We counsel them to save carefully the ashes from their stoves, storing them in a dry place protected from the rain. Leached ashes contain very little potash, for this element is readily soluble in water.

The soils most benefitted by wood ashes are light sandy and gravelly loams, and mucks and peaty soils. They are also especially valuable for sour soils deficient in lime. The application may be from 600 to 2,000 pounds per acre, preferably broadcasted in the spring on the prepared land before seeding and harrowed in.

JUMPED FROM TRAIN AND GOT TO HOLLAND

ESCAPE OF VANCOUVER MAN FROM GERMANY AFTER TEN MONTHS' CONFINEMENT

AN ATLANTIC PORT, Oct. 20.—Escaping after ten months' confinement in German prison camps by a daring leap from a moving train and a 125-mile pilgrimage at night across Westphalia into Holland, Private Herbert Batchellor of the 48th Canadian Highlanders arrived here to-night on his way to his home in Vancouver, B.C.

Batchellor, who has service medals for the Boer war and the Zulu rebellion of 1906, said he and several companions on a sapping operation were captured after they had dug themselves out of a sap which the Germans had blown up.

During his entire confinement in Germany, he declared, he did not taste a piece of meat, subsisting on black bread acorn coffee and "soup that a hog wouldn't eat." Many of his fellow-prisoners died from hunger and overwork, he said, and he had dwindled from 185 to 135 pounds when he finally escaped.

Embarassing Hairs Can Be Quickly Removed

(Beauty Culture.)

Hairs can be easily banished from the skin by this quick, painless method: Mix into a stiff paste some powdered delatone and water, spread on hairy surface and in 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and it will be free from hair or blemish. Excepting in very stubborn growths, one application is sufficient. To avoid disappointment, buy the delatone in an original package.

Your Duty, Can't You See It?

One Thing the Men and Women at Home Must Provide.

The war with all its activities is wonderfully well organized. The government trains, clothes, feeds, transports and supplies with arms and munitions the soldier from the time he first enlists until he is a discharged soldier, with the exception of a time in between when he is unfortunate enough to be wounded. When this happens he is taken in charge by the Red Cross organization, he is sympathetically cared for, his wounds are dressed, his sores are healed, his broken bones are mended and he is given every chance there is to get well. To keep up this great work it takes a vast amount of money. Don't you realize that it is an imperative duty resting on the shoulders of all those who are at home to see that funds for this purpose do not fail.

It is not only a duty but it is a privilege that the committee in charge of the Red Cross campaign feel you will recognize by liberal subscriptions to the canvassers when they call on you. muob."

Patterson, and G. H. Thompson, secretary

MRS. MATTHEW'S ADDRESS.

The meeting was opened by the retiring President Mrs. Matthews, who made the following address.

Experience tells us that in most great crisis the darkest hour is just before the dawn. It seems as if that darkest hour is with us now, for while the papers point out the enemy in retreat and Germany asking for an armistice, yet the sadness and sorrow is greater than ever throughout the world. The enemy is in retreat, but they are retreating back through a country that has not been riddled and shelled, while our armies are still fighting with all their might, having to advance over land destroyed. The casualty lists appall us, and the bitteress of death and mutilation is greater now, because of the nearness of victory. I am sure the boys over there feel that—they would dearly love to live now, and be welcomed with those who come marching home victorous. The Allied armies are not relaxing, but fighting their hardest The training of men and the making of ammunition and supplies is going on everywhere with increased vigor and so the Red Cross work like all other winning forces must be kept up and increased.

THE DEBT

We hear so often from pulpit and platform about the debt that we owe to these brave men, our army, who have sacrificed time and opportunity even life itself over there. We will show our gratitude in the measure that we put forth our effort not only until the war is over, but until every man is returned and the sick and nerve racked men nursed back to their proper manly strength. With very many of our men this will take years, even our life time, and yet if Canada does not do this and Peterboro her full share, we will show ourselves unworthy of such sacrifice.

In reviewing our past year's work, I would like to emphasize the gratitude of The Red Cross Executive to the people of Peterboro for their show of confidence in placing such a large sum of money at the disposal of the Red Cross Society and I am certain it can be readily shown that the confidence has not been misplaced, I believe that the money has been wisely expended as the report of the Supervisor of Supplies will show. Practically all our supplies have been purchased from the Peterboro manufacturers and merchants, and I desire to testify to the courtesy and fair dealing, and liberality that has always been extended to your purchasing committee by these loyal business men.

SUPPLIES ON HAND

To have supplies on hand has been a great source of satisfaction to your Executive because, when special calls have come to us, we have been able to send out the finished work in the shortest possible time. All materials have gone up in price tremendously By our knowing, at the beginning of our year what we could afford we were able to purchase in large quantities, and at considerable saving in cost. Very many Societies who contributed their work through the Red Cross and the C. W C. A. have benefitted from this, so that Peterboro's share in the Armies' need has been worthy of her citizens.

The backbone of any Society is the workers. The Supervisors of the different departments and their staff of workers have accomplished a great deal because of the faithfulness of the individual worker, we cannot praise too much our women who have so planned their home work that they could give one, two and sometimes more afternoons a week, from two to five in faithful service, so that our share of the supplies and field comforts for overseas has been kept up.

SUMMARY OF WORK

You will notice that, for the first time, the Treasurer has included in her report as an addenda, a summary of the work done by the various Patriotic Societies in the City. As the Red Cross work of Peterboro is, officially, the statement of the Red Cross Society, it is very fitting that this should be done, and we are only sorry that all Societies have not availed themselves of the opportunity of thus recording their Red Cross and patriotic efforts.

It is difficult to get a complete statement of what Canada has done during the last year, as the Headquarters report cannot be made out in full until the year's report of each of its branches come in, but the figures for the eight months ending August 31 are interesting.

76,184 cases of supplies valued at $1,828,132.00 have been shipped overseas for sick and wounded soldiers.

6,406 cases of field comforts have gone through the C.W.C.A

7 auto chasis, valued at $24,000.00 have been shipped.

Supplies have been: Socks, 769,591, towels 510,970 P. P. Bags 235,641, pyjamas 294,309, shirts 181,817, T & S Caps, 116,615, sheets 92,981, Kit bags, 48,258, dressing gowns 13,955, Pneumonia jackets 72,929 Hospital shirts 12,517, operating gowns 1,760.

Very large quantities of goods of all descriptions have been purchased, razors, underwear, sugar, Hypo units, Tobacco, cigarettes, canned goods, hair and tooth brushes, eye glasses, and shades, base ball outfits and games.

MAPLE SUGAR SHIPPED

128,000 lbs. maple sugar was shipped half for sick and wounded in hospital and half for the men in the trenches.

100,000 lbs of plum pudding with caramel sauce for 400,000 recipients has just been shipped, added to this Canadians in California wired $800.00 so that 15,000 lbs more might be shipped. Women's Institutes have gotten out thousands of jars of chicken, soups, pickles, fruit and jams, beside gathering and making into jelly bushels of fruit and berries that would have gone to waste, thus adding to our food conservation.

7,000 Red Cross stockings have already been shipped for Canadians in Hospitals and, anticipating the further demand on account of the numerous casualties at the present time, 5,000 stockings extra were asked for on Friday of last week. As Peterboro had had no share in this $600.00 was sent last Saturday to Mrs. Stearns Hicks, the convenor. This will purchase 300 stockings for Peterboro.

Besides this work we continue to maintain at least 13 casualty clearing stations in France and the numerous Canadian Hospitals in England. Our Canadian Headquarters in Toronto has been hard pressed lately. She has been called upon to fully equip with Red Cross supplies our Siberian Expeditionary Force Her supplies, and all from Manitoba, West, were diverted to the warehouse at New Westminster for this purpose. The epidemic of influenza amongst our soldiers in our own country calls for all available supplies, Peterboro was asked for 1,000 Pneumonia jackets, materials for 300 were in our store room and 73 have already been shipped to Toronto.

SPECIAL PLEA

Just here, I would like to make a special plea for the sturdiest support of our Red Cross during this fall and winter, never was there a more urgent call. Even an armistice has not been declared and the number of wounded and worn out men far exceed any other time, and we will be short sighted, indeed, if we are not prepared for epidemic and plague that may follow after war, money and supplies must be ready so please do not weary in being faithful to our men and the surpassing needs of the time.

With the enhanced cost of all material and supplies it is to be expected that our requirements for the coming year will not be less that for the year just closed. This is confirmed by the judgment of the Advisory Board who to morrow will begin the canvas for the purpose of raising $30,000.00. It is impossible to make a definite forecast of the manner in which this fund will be applied, but we do know that material and supplies will be required until the Canadian Expeditionary Force is demobilized.

As retiring president I would like to express my deep appreciation to the Executive, Supervisors and to all the workers of this Branch and its Auxiliaries, who have so loyally supported our efforts during the entire year. The cheerful encouragement, and splendid co-operation have been very helpful to the officers.

COME ACROSS

COME ACROSS

That is what Britain, France and Belgium said to the Canadian Boys four years ago and they have been "Coming Across" ever since.

COME ACROSS

That is what the Peterborough Branch of the Canadian Red Cross is saying to-day to you—now will YOU come across.

COME ACROSS

That is the invitation that Canadians at home will send to the Boys over seas after the Allies have whipped the Germans and freed the world from militarism.

But they are not home yet and have plenty of hard fighting ahead of them, which makes it very necessary that you contribute liberally to the Red Cross Campaign which opens to-day in an endeavor to raise more than $30,000,00 for the Relief of the Wounded Soldiers Overseas.

Spanish Influenza Has Caused Only One Death in Peterboro

Dr. Amys stated definitely last night that only one death from Spanish influenza has been reported at the City Hall.

"I don't know when the schools and other public places may be opened. It depends upon the form the epidemic takes. I went to Nassau on Sunday and found several cases there; a house at Keene had eight patients; it has broken out at Hiawatha. In fact we don't know how many cases of the present epidemic of la grippe there are in this county."

Dr. Amys stated that so long as pneumonia is not associated with the epidemic there was no great danger but with the two attacks coming together a very serious situation might arise.

He spoke strongly against the burning of leaves on foggy days when the smoke hangs low and invades the room of sick persons who are sometimes fighting for their very lives and need all the fresh air they can get.

Plans of Bridge Are Progressing

In a letter to Mayor Duncan, Mr. Frank Barber, of Toronto, wrote that the plans of the Hunter street bridge are nearing completion. He has engaged a consulting architect, Mr Claude Bragdon, who is preparing a pen and ink drawing of the bridge which with other details will be presented to the Council in the near future. Nearly all the main points of the design have been determined, and only "straightway" work remains.

TWENTY-EIGHT DEATHS IN TORONTO TO-DAY

Influenza Epidemic Is Reaching th Peak.

TORONTO, Oct. 22.—Basing his opinion on the experience of other centres with Spanish influenza, Dr. McCullough, Provincial Officer o Health, to-day stated that the crest of the present epidemic in Ontario would probably be reached and passed by Friday next. However, he advised all people to take every precaution for weeks yet, till the disease is stamped out. Twenty-eight deaths were recvorded in Toronto to-day, up till noon. From other provincial centres comes news to-day that the disease seems to be getting well under control.

WELCOME G.T.P. INTO SASKATOON CITY

SASKATOON, Oct. 22.—The people of Saskatoon gave a warm welcome to the first Grand Trunk Pacific train to enter the city proper. The Grand Trunk Pacific and the Canadian Pacific will now use a joint station, rendering unnecessary the three-mile automobile-bus transfer which travellers on the Grand Trunk Pacific had to make in order to reach the centre of the city. As many as four hundred passengers from one train have had to be handled in the past by busses and the inauguration of the new service is looked upon as a great convenience. It will attract, Saskatoon officials state, more people into that centre from points along the Grand Trunk Pacific line. In addition to a joint passenger station the G.T.P. and the C.P.R. will in future share the same freight terminal facilities, an added advantage to the Saskatoon shippers.

TAX ON HEROISM IS REMOVED BY FRENCH

(By United Press)

Paris, Sept. 30. (By Mail.)—Although the cost of living continues to soar, the high cost of becoming a hero has taken a sudden slump. Premier Clemenceau issued an order that the State henceforth will bear the cost of the medals conferred upon heroes, and furthermore refund to soldiers money paid since the beginning of the war for their medals. Originally soldiers were charged about $2 for their medals, then in November, 1917, the price was raised slightly owing to the increased cost of ribbon. Last January the cost was boosted again to about $2.50.

UNIVERSAL APPROBATION OF PRESIDENT'S REPLY

(Special to The Examiner.)

"The glorious work of the Red Cross can only be carried on by your aid, Carry on."

Will "Two Platoon" System Reduce the Rates of Insurance?

The Council last night in Committee of the Whole approached the "two platoon" system for which the firemen have been studiously agitating, and, as one of the preliminary considerations, decided to ask the Underwriters' Association whether the adoption of this system would result in a reduction of insurance rates in the city.

Members of the Council expressed their approval of the system inasmuch as it would give the firemen better living conditions, but they evidently do not find it easy to accept the increased expenditure that will be entailed. It was suggested that the question might be put to a vote of the people at the January elections, and it is practically decided now that the present Council will transfer the subject to the 1919 Council. If the latter adopt it, they will of course have to provide for the increased appropriations for the department out of the 1919 revenue.

Letters received by the Committee from various cities in the province showed that Kingston had recently decided to establish the two-platoon system on December 1st. Chief Pritchard of Chatham is opposed to it, and wrote that his men favoured the present system. London had no opinion to offer since they had no experience except with the old method of treating firemen; Guelph considered the plan for a time but has dropped it. Vancouver, B.C., has employed it for some time.

AIRMEN HAVE LUCKY PIECES FOR FLYING

(By United Press)

London, Oct. 3. (By Mail.)—It is an established practice among airmen to carry mascots or charms or keepsakes.

There is an English boy who never goes up without a scrap of brightly coloured cloth from "Somebody's" dress, and many a combat pilot who looks absolutely immune from such little weaknesses will not go up without a dice, a bit of jade, a halfpenny with a hole in the middle, a white mouse—any thing serves, if it is suspected of a potency that will avert the dreadful "crash" and the heartchilling official announcement—"One of our machines failed to return."

SERGT. McLEAN ADDRESSES WORKERS

Sergt. McLean, who was here, and addressed the meeting in the Opera House in the interests of the K. of C. Hut fund, was in Peterborough yesterday and addressed the workmen at the different factories in the city in the interests of the Red Cross Campaign. Sergt. McLean is an earnest and convincing speaker, and as he has done his bit and seen some of the many activities of the Red Cross, his addresses were most convincing.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—It must have been a shock to all right-minded citizens when they read in a local paper last night that the wives and families of two soldiers absent at the front had no fuel for heating or cooking purposes, although some of their children were seriously ill with influenza. Let me say by this letter to the wives of all soldiers at the front that when they reach through accident or misfortune the last ditch, to apply to me. I have made it my business to spend every morning in my office, 440 Water street, where I may be consulted or telephoned to by the families of absent soldiers, and I rarely leave town even for a single day, in order that no such shocking occurrence as the local paper describes may be possible. The mother of one family visited by me this morning informed me that both families now have fuel and are no longer on the bread and dread line. We can all well imagine what a soldier about to hurl his life and fortunes against the Hun will think when he gets word of what his family is suffering at home. It is true that there are many societies and many people ready and only too willing to help in just such cases, but these cases should not be possible. We are in honour bound to see to that.

t Pays to Advertise Christianity to Japs

(By United Press)

Tokio, Sept. 12. (By Mail.)—Use of publicity in missionary work is endorsed by the annual conference of Federated Missions at Karuizawa, a mountain resort of interior Japan. A resolution has been adopted, calling upon the executive committee to obtain all possible data from the missionaries who have made use of advertising in Japan the newspapers. It was the consensus of opinion the wide use of evangelistic publicity should be made after the war.

Rev. Albertus Pieters of Oita came in for lavish praise. On a furlough in the United States five years ago, Mr. Pieters told business men that Americans who were putting $1,000,000 a year into missionary effort in Japan should be convinced that it would be good business to put $1,000 into it for advertising the work Pieters returned to Japan with the $1,000.

A century or two ago Christianity was believed to have been stamped out in Oita province, and up to the childhood of the oldest inhabitants, all citizens were compelled to take oath they had no taint of Christianity.

Pieters obtained a rate of $2.50 a column from the leading newspaper at Oita.

In five years he had received an average of three replies a day to the invitation which ends each newspaper article, for readers to write for free literature.

APPLE IS A VERY VALUABLE FOOD

"Those who make a liberal use of apples will serve the dual purpose of saving for shipment overseas such articles of food as are suitable for that purpose and at the same time furnish a useful and valuable food for the household."

"The apple without question is the king of fruits, whether fresh, dried, evaporated or canned, it is a wholesome food, easily prepared, attracive and palatable at all times." "Always cook apples in earthen or granite utensils and use silver, granite or wooden spoons for stirring. The use of the apple as the basis for all manufactured jam is well known. This is due to the large amount of pectose which it contains. There is no waste to a good apple: even the paring and core may be utilized for jelly. Fruits are classified as flavour fruits and nutritive fruits —the apple comes under both of these heads." Extracts from a little booklet issued by the Fruit Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture giving 180 recipes for the use of the apple. The book can be had free on application to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

KIDNEY DISEASE OVERCOME

Mr. James Pronse, cattle dealer, Shehe, Sask, writes: "For about ten years I suffered from kidney disease; at times I was bad with backache, and derangements of the digestive organs. During that time I was treated by four different doctors. One day I read in Dr. Chase's Almanac about the Kidney-Liver Pills and began to use them. Altogether I used six boxes. All I need say is that I feel well now and attribute this condition to the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills."

PRESENTATION TO PRESIDENT

At the conclusion of the meeting in grateful recognition for her untiring efforts for the society's welfare Mrs. W. H. Hill presented Mrs. Matthews with a beautiful bouquet of chrysanthemums while Mrs. James Wood read a charming address expressing the Society's deep regret at Mrs Matthews leaving both the society and the city. Mrs. Matthews made a graceful reply.

SECRETARY'S REPORT

In presentng the fourth annual report of the Peterboro Red Cross Society, the Executive desires to place on record its high appreciation of the continued financial support it has received through the efforts of its advisory Board and the generous contributions of money received from the citizens of Peterboro.

The work accomplished by the Local Branch during the past year is due to the fact that the people of Peterboro have responded so generously to each appeal made on its behalf.

Eighteen meetings for the transaction of business have been held. These meetings have all been well attended The Convenors of the different departments have worked conscientiously to further the work of the Society to the best of their ability.

There are at present 184 Life Members, 46 Annual Members, 1 Associate Member, 231 members of the Peterboro Branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society.

This membership does not represent the workers as many who have not become members of the general society are busy in the various auxiliaries and organizations throughout the city and district.

During the year many letters, circulars, bulletins and news letters were received and distributed, requests for information as to organization and War work generally were also received from newly organized centres.

The Society's operations for the years were carried on under the following divisions—

THE GENERAL HOSPITAL SUPPLIES

The hearty thanks of the Executive are extended to all the members and helpers of the 35 organizations co-operating with us, who have by their generous support enabled us to accomplish so much.

THE KNITTING

The Executive expresses its gratitude for the way in which the Knitting Committees have by their unwavering zeal ministered to our success.

THE PRISONERS OF WAR

The Prisoners of War Department has grown extensively during the year. The interest in helping our imprisoned men has never flagged, but has continued to grow. Many individual subscribers, and with few exceptions, all Auxiliaries and Societies in the City are subscribing generously to this fund. The Society forwards monthly to Mrs. Rivers Bulkeley sufficient money to pay for the clothing food and tobacco sent every two weeks to the 36 Peterboro men in the Prison Camps of Germany.

In addition during the past six months 33 personel comfort parcels have been transmitted.

The Campaign for monthly subscribers so successfully carried on by the Advisory Board, the Motor Show and Italian Red Cross Tag Day added very materially to our funds.

THE WORK ROOM

The work room at the Public Library was open to all interested visitors, either from surrounding districts or from our Allied Country to the South. Our most distinguished guests for the year were their Excellencies the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire and their party. Both the Governor General and his wife, who is President of the Canadian Red Cross Society were deeply interested in the work and expressed their appreciation in brief addresses.

In January the Society had the pleasure of hearing one of our returned Peterboro nurses, Miss Bertha Mowry speak of the work of the Canadian Hospitals in France and paid a glowing tribute to the Canadian Red Cross, stating that they had never applied to the Commissioner in vain for supplies

Miss Jean Harstone recently home from the War Zone addressed the workers at the re-opening of the Central work rooms in September. Miss Harstone gave a very interesting account of her experiences and the work in which she had been engaged while in France.

It was with regret that the Executive early in the year accepted the resignation of Mrs. Allan as 1st Vice President and Convenor of the Prisoners of War Department. Mrs. Allan's efficient services in connection with the Society since its inception have been heartily appreciated by her Co-workers.

The Society has also been called upon to lose the valuable services of Miss Burnett, who owing to ill health has been compelled for the present to resign the Convenorship of the hand knitting Committee.

To enumerate individually those who, by their services, helped the Society during the year, would be almost impossible, but the valuable services rendered to the Packing Committee by Mr. Grieve and Mr. Dela Fosse must receive honourable mention.

The Executive would extend to the Board of the Public Library their sincere thanks for the splendid accommodation afforded the Society and its Auxiliaries for the carrying on of their work.

The Press is warmly thanked for its continued assistance on which the Society can always rely.

The Society sustains by the resignation of our President Mrs Matthews a very great loss. As President of the Peterboro Branch during the past two years, she has unstintedly devoted both time and energy to the Society's interests. The Executive gratefully records its indebtedness to Mrs. Matthews.

UNTIRING SERVICES

To Miss Effie Munro the Society is indebted for efficient and untiring services. The generous resources placed at the disposal of the Purchasing Committee have been administered to the best advantage by Miss Munro as Convenor and Supervisor of supplies.

The Executive feels that it would not be fitting to close its report without expressing the Society's deep sense of indebtedness and gratitude to the long list of voluntary workers, who during the past year have unselfishly devoted themselves to the work.

The Red Cross is a noble cause, and those who have worked for it will never have reason to regret their devotion. In the peaceful years which we hope are near for us all to enjoy we shall be able to look back with satisfaction and pride on our voluntary work.

MUCH ACCOMPLISHED.

Much has been accomplished, but the future calls for greater efforts than ever, so that our ranks may be filled up and our membership increased, if we are to be able to rightly overtake our full responsibilities. Red Cross work is a department where women's aid calls loudly for untiring service, backed by a spirit filled with the desire to lift up those who have fallen, and made them feel that their country values aright the great sacrifices they are making in order that the coming generations shall enjoy life to the full.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Laura J. Davidson,
Honorary Secretary.

Dated at Peterborough, this 21st day of October, 1918.

SUPPLIES.

Madam President and Members of the Peterboro Red Cross Society:

Your Supply Committee begs to submit the following report:

The staple supplies purchased during the past year were as follows

18,000 yards flannelette at from 22 to 25c a yard, 5,000 yards more than last year.

12,000 yards of flannel, at from 37 to 57c a yard, 8,000 yards more than last year.

15,000 yards of towelling, at from 18 to 23c a yard, 3,000 yards more than last year.

7,000 yards of sheeting, at from 39 to 46c a yard, same amount as last year.

3,000 yards of canton flannel, at from 28c to 50c a yard, 2,500 yards more than last year.

800 spindles of wool at $7.50 a spindle.

We have on hand some quantity of all these materials, enough to carry on the work for a few months, but there has been a tremendous increase in the cost of these materials, and the available supplies are low. Our new orders will have to be placed at an increase of all the prices quoted so a larger sum than usual will have to be spent probably on materials to keep up our stock.

Our supplies have as usual been distributed among our Auxiliaries and the various Patriotic Societies in the city, where they are by them made up into the garments, returned to the Library, where they are carefully examined by a committee appointed for that purpose, and then packed.

One would like to take this opportunity of expressing to each of these Societies, which really form the Red Cross of Peterboro ,the very warmest praise for the truly splendid work accomplished during the past year and the hope that the coming year will not see their efforts slacken.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Effie M. Munro,
Con. Supply Com.

Position is Not Regarded in Light of Promotion

New Lieut.-Governor of Quebec Has a Less Permanent Position Than One Vacated.

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Oct. 22.—The shake up on the Supreme Court of Canada is the occasion of considerable comment at Ottawa. From the purely business standpoint the transfer of Sir Charles Fitzpatrick from the position of Chief Judge of Canada's highest tribunal to the position of Lieut.-Governor of Quebec cannot be considered by any means a promotion. The Chief Justiceship may be very well held for the life of the holder, and Sir Charles is still a comparatively young man, only 65, while his successor, Sir Louis Davis, is 72. In addition the position carries with it the honour of an Acting Governor-Generalship of the Dominion in the absence of the Governor-General, together with the honour of membership of the Judicial committee of the Imperial Privy Council.

Among the Missing.

The position of Lieut-Governor of Quebec is only for five years' duration. From the purely monetary standpoint the yearly salaries are the same, $10,000 a year, but as Chief Justice Sir Charles received a certain emolument while acting as administrator, while in addition he has been drawing $2,500 a year for attention of the Privy Council of Great Britain. The later item provoked a strong protest initiated by Dr. Edwards at the last session, and there were treats that further protest would be made at the next session, the ground taken being that Sir Charles since the war commenced has been seldom in attendance of the Judicial committee. From the monetary standpoint it would appear that the transfer is of no advantage to the new Lieut.-Governor. On the other hand, it is stated that he will receive a Judge's pension based on a service lasting since 19th and estimated at $7,000 a year, or a total emolument from the Crown of $17,000 a year.

A Successor.

A decision has not yet been reached as to who will fill the vacancy now existing on the Supreme Court bench. The name of Hon. Louis Phillipe Pelletier of the Appeal Court of Quebec is certainly prominently mentioned in connection with the position. So is that of Eugene Lafleur, K.C. From present indications Judge Pelletier is the best guess. It is stated unofficially, in fact, that he has already been offered it. Judge Pelletier was Postmaster-General in the former Borden Government, being succeeded to that position by the late Hon. T. Chace Casgrain.

TO-DAY'S CASUALTIES

Smith street, received word to-day that one son, Pte. Frank James Halpin, 19 years old ,has died of wounds which consisted of gunshot wounds in the abdomen.

Another son, Pte. Joseph B. Halpin, is reported admitted to hospital with a gunshot wound in the right arm on October 15

Pte. F. James Halpin leaves besides his mother, three sisters and three brothers.

PTE. C. G. RICHARDSON

Mr. Granville Richardson, 580 Aylmer street has received official word from Ottawa that his son Pte. Chas. Granville Richardson was admitted to the General Hospital, Dannes Camier, on Oct. 13th, suffering from gunshot wounds in the legs. Pte. Richardson enlisted in the summer at 1916 with the Queen's Field Ambulance and was afterwards transferred to a Canadian infantry unit in France. He was employed at the De Laval Company when he enlisted for overseas.

LARGE AUDIENCE AT FALL ASSIZES FLOUTED THE FLU

Five non-jury cases on the civil list of the fall assizes, which opened before Mr. Justice Latchford here this afternoon dwindled to a solitary one, after the others had been variously transferred, several of them because of the illness of witnesses.

The attendance suggested that the court itself was violating the order of the Medical Health Officer respecting public gatherings. Nearly all the lawyers in the city were present, farmers called as jurors, others interested in the county's case in which it is a defendant, Italians who were attracted by the trial of Nicholas Beirodine, charged with the attempted murder of L. Marcatullio; besides the usual curious audience seeking pastime.

How the Docket Wilted.

The case of Leahy vs. Leahy was held up by influenza, but was referred to the County Judge as special referee, for final disposition. Mr. Wearing is counsel for the plaintiff, and Mr. D. D. Kerr for the defendant.

Outram vs. Guerin, the subject of which is the Gadyye estate, was transferred to the next sittings. Mr. Kerr is the solicitor for the plaintiff, and Mr. G. N. Gordon for the defendant.

Meharry vs. the Auburn Woollen Co., was transferred to the next sitting of the court, upon the request of Mr. Gordon, who stated that Mr. James Kendry, the president of the company was too ill to attend the court. Mr. Gordon is counsel for the defendants, and Mr. R. R. Hall for the plaintiff.

Dawson vs. Quinlan vs. Robertson, was set over by an order of the Master in Chambers for hearing in Cobourg on Nov. 13.

HATTON VS. COUNTY OF PETERBORO.

This was the only surviving civil case and was immediately opened.

Mr. Daniel O'Connell, acting for Mr. Hatton, called Mr. Richard H. Greer, County Crown Attorney of York County, as the first witness.

Solicitors for the county were Mr. E. D. Armour, K. C., and Mr. F. D. Kerr.

Of the thirteen original Grand Jurors selected for the assizes, two were prevented by illness from attending. They were W. J. Charlton, of Lakefield, and Joseph Madill, of Monaghan, who were replaced by Cecil Williamson and Mark Burnham.

The Grand jury were then sworn as follows: David Breckenridge, Asphodel; Thomas Cardwell, Asphodel; W. T. Elliott, Harvey; John Jury, Dummer; Martin Kylie, Peterboro; P. F. McNulty, Asphodel; Theo. McWilliams, Peterboro; Walter McKee, Monaghan; John Miller, Peterboro; Richard Shelton, Peterboro; W. J. Telford, Ennismore; Cecil Williamson, Peterboro; Mark Burnham, Peterboro.

The Bar's Representatives.

Members of the bar present were: E. D. Armour, K. C., Norman Sommerville, David O'Connell, of Toronto; O. A. Langley, G. W. Hatton, Joseph Wearing, Basil D. Hall, G. N. Gordon, F. D. Kerr, R. R. Hall.

ONT. AGENT-GENERAL DEAD.

Mr. Richard Reid Succumbs in England Following an Operation—Had Relatives in Peterborough.

The Provincial Government has been advised by cable that Mr. Richard Reid, Agent-General of Ontario in the British Isles, died yesterday morning. A few weeks ago Mr. Reid was operated upon for appendicitis and it was thought he had made a good recovery. Sunday, Dr. Cody cabled that septic poisoning had developed and another operation became necessary and yesterday morning word was received that Mr. Reid had died.

"The Province of Ontario loses a faithful and efficient official in the death of Mr. Reid," said Acting Premier G. Howard Ferguson. "Mr. Reid has given excellent and whole-souled service to Ontario in England, particularly in connection with the war activities of the Government."

The late Mr. Reid was a nephew of Mr. Joshua Smithson, of Otonabee township, and a personal friend of Mr. Robert Fair, of this city.

Mr. Manufacturer--

Do You Read The Newspaper?

Of course you do. You want to know how the war is progressing—what's happening in the United States, in Great Britain, and on the continent.

You could not dispense with the newspaper.

There are millions like you.

The multitude are interested in the newspaper as they never were before.

The floating of an immense war loan in the United States interests us; the political situation in Great Britain more than interests us; it vitally affects us, and the work of our boys at the front—it enthralls us!

Billions of dollars have been raised, millions of men recruited in stupenduous armies, the morale of nations kept growing and growing; even the sinister work of the Hun has been fostered through the atlantean power of printers' ink.

Taking all this for granted—

How does this increased power of and concentration on the newspaper effect you and your business? Have you taken full advantage of it?

The war will be over some day—before we realize it, the Hun will be driven off soil bought by the blood of our sons and our sons' allies; our armies will be exchanging the swords for the implements of peace; France and Belgium will be one mighty workshop; problems will have to be faced by every patriotic and country-loving man and woman.

IN THE MEANTIME WHAT HAS HAPPENED TO YOUR MARKETS?

Has your competitor a firmer hold than he had before the war?

The lesson: Don't wait for a "better" day—use the four A's of commercial success—

ALERTNESS, AGGRESSIVENESS, ACTIVITY, ADVERTISING

—and then you don't need to worry about "after the war business" your problems will solve themselves for you as they arise.

WEDDING BELLS

LANCEFIELD—WHALLEY.

In St. Peter's Cathedral this morning, quietly, at 6.30 o'clock, the wedding was solemnized of Loretta, daughter of Mrs. Frederick Whalley, Cedar street, and Thomas Lancefield, formerly of Fenelon Falls, now of Peterborough. Rev. Father Phelan performed the ceremony.
Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Lancefield left by the C.P.R. for a short trip in the west.

OBITUARY

"BABY" STABLER.

As a result of Spanish influenza, "Baby" Stabler, four weeks old, died this morning. The child was an only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Stabler, Lakefield.
Funeral arrangements have not yet been completed.

MR. JOHN DONOGHUE.

The death occurred last night at 11:30 of Mr. John Donoghue, an old and respected resident of Ennismore. He leaves to mourn his loss several sons and daughters.
Funeral arrangements have not yet been completed.

MR. JOHN CORCORAN

The death occurred at St. Joseph's Hospital this morning of Mr. John Corcoran aged 50 years. His wife is left to survive him.
The funeral takes place on Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock from Lane and Eano's Undertaking Parlours to St. Peter's Cemetery.

VICTORIA FRANCES ORMOND.

In a letter from Mrs. J. R. Stratton at Toronto to Mrs. Suckling today, she conveys the sad intelligence of the death of her sister, Victoria Frances Ormond, very suddenly, at her home at Victoria, B.C.
The late Miss Ormond was the third daughter of Mr. J. R. Ormond, and was born in Peterborough, where she resided with her parents and other members of the family until removing to Victoria some years ago, where the family has resided since.
Her father, who is well advanced in years, has been seriously ill in the Victoria Hospital, and Miss Ormond, who has been most devoted all her life to her parents, had been in attendance on him most faithfully all the time of his illness. She had been with her father at the hospital all the day pervious, and her very sudden death was a great shock to her family and friends.
The deceased was of a retiring disposition, but greatly attached to her family and home, where she will be greatly missed. She was a sister of Mrs. J. R. Stratton, now residing in Toronto, and a cousin of Mrs. Suckling and Mrs. K. G. Lech of this city. All the other members of the family are residing in the west.

MRS. T. W. McCAMUS.

Ruby Tate, wife of Mr. T. W. McCamus, Bailieboro, died at her home last night after ten days' illness from pneumonia.
Mrs. McCamus was the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Tate, who reside near Centreville. Beloved by all with whom she came in contact she will be greatly missed about Centreville and Bailieboro. She was a member of the Anglican church.
There are left of the immediate family besides her husband and parents, one son, Harold, two brothers, Norman in Northwest Canada, Harold and one sister, Emma, at home.
The funeral will be held to-morrow at 2 p.m. Interment at St. Paul's Church cemetery.

Mrs. Waddell, Kansas City, is visiting Dr. and Mrs. Edward Wood, Charlotte street.

Joseph Scriver's Grave

The following letter is addressed to the Toronto Globe:

To the Editor of The Globe: It is evident from the correspondence in your columns of late that a deep interest has been revived regarding the memory of him who wrote one of our sweetest and most popular gospel hymns, and the neglected condition of his grave. I write, therefore, to inform the public generally that at a recent meeting of the Millbrook and Cavan Ministerial Association the matter was brought up and a small committee appointed to see what could be done. To-day in all the glory of the Indian summer the committee proceeded to the spot, a distance of about ten miles from Millbrook, overlooking the lovely Rice Lake. There on Mr. Pengelley's farm is a tiny graveyard surrounded by a stone wall and in a fair state of decency.

The poet's grave is unmarked in any way. Indeed to the casual visitor it would not be readily discovered. No more beautiful spot could be found where in his dust might rest, no more attractive spot conceived wherein to ereet a suitable memorial to his memory. Such I might say was contemplated some years ago but not proceeded with because the promoters wished to remove the remains to Peterboro'. But this will never be done for his last wish was that he might rest beside her who was his intended bride, but died at the early age of 23 to his inexpressible grief. The committee returned home highly satisfied with their visit and have decided to call a public meeting in the Town Hall, Millbrook, on Monday, October 28, when it is hoped the project will take definite shape, and that ere long a reproach will be removed from those of all denominations who love to sing "What a Friend We Have in Jesus."

Electrical Inspection to be Made Here

Fire Underwriters to Have a Report Prepared on All Electrical Installations in Peterboro.

Local insurance agents have been advised of the intention of the Canadian Fire Underwriters Association to make, at an early date, an inspection of, and complete report on, the electric installations in Peterborough.
As a result of similar inspection some years ago considerable defective wiring was found to exist and such defects corrected.
As the business men of the city are anxious to take all possible precautions to prevent fire occurring on their premises they will no doubt be glad to receive any suggestion for improvement which will eliminate or minimize the fire hazard.

INGERSOLL NURSE DEAD'

IN OCTOBER.

Sunscorched and weatherwasted lies the grass;
Orange-red punpkins ripen where uprise
Buff fodder-shocks that, tilted wigwam-wise,
Stir with a furtive clap as frostwinds pass
To break a pond's bright-burnished, oval glass
Before they drive cloud-stragglers down the skies;
Whilst, in the dappled light, October sigts;
"Alas, how quickly my gold turns to brass!"
On the rich forestwoven tapestry
She looks with eyes that soften mournfully—
Yet proud is she and, grasping close her grief,
She whispers, "Hush!" to her heart's fevered beat.
Soon shall, she knows—for darkened days are brief—
Her dead leaves bed the dance of April's feet.

FASCINATION OF UNIFORM DANGER IN THE FUTURE

BOSTON, Oct. 23.—The Rt. Rev. Chas. Gore, Bishop of Oxford, England, speaking here at a meeting of the Boston Federation of Churches, sounded a warning against over-development of the military system, but said, nevertheless, it was the duty of the Allies to bring peace through victory.

"There is a fascination for al the world in the raiment of a soldier," he added, "and the self-sacrificing qualities which have been shown in the last few years make this even more keen.

"But if mothers of men are fed on this idea, future generations may come to feel that there is no occupation so inspiring and noble. We must not suffer this to be."

ECZEMA ON BABY'S EAR

Mrs. F. Clarke, Belmont, Man., writes: "My baby had eczema on her ear. The sore was very bad and nothing seemed to do her very much good. Hearing of the remarkable cure Dr. Chase's Ointment was making, we sent for some, and after the third application the sore began to heal. I am glad to say that it is quite well now Ointment. We cannot recommend it is and we give the credit to Dr. Chase's preparation too highly."

Brave Deeds Performed By Canadian Soldiers

Single Handed Exploit on the Arras-Cambrai Road During the Great Advance.

With the Canadian Forces, Oct 23.—Here are more bugle deeds of Canadian soldiers whose high, clear note will ring in every Canadian heart.

One of the hardest initial tasks of the opening phase of the battle of Cambrai was the crossing of the Canal du Nord by the Canadian first division, which then turned due north as well as east, thus cleaning up the east bank and capturing the strongholds of Sans les Marquoin and quoin from the flank and rear. In this operation the attacking brigade was assigned the extremely difficult task of passing over the canal on a narrow front of a quarter of a mile, thereafter fanning out to a front of over three miles. While very gallant officers commanded three battalions in attack they were only seconds in command, with no previous experience in battle commands. This greatly increased the responsibilities of the brigadier, who therefore kept in closest touch throughout the crossing of the canal.

Shortly after zero under a heavy fire, while the enemy still held part of the left bank, entirely regardless of personal danger, he spent the whole day in the vicinity of the attacking battalions ably directing and dealing with the difficult problems as they arose. Throughout he displayed conspicuous gallantry, splendid initiative and outstanding leadership during the battle of Cambrai.

Wounded Three Times.

While leading his company, the captain of a Western Ontario battalion found that owing to darkness the men were pushing ahead of their objective into their own barrage. running forward under a heavy machine gun fire he checked and organized the men. In the subsequent advance the company suffered heavy casualties, the captain being severely wounded in the arm. With indomitable spirit and by almost superhuman effort he forced his way forward, cheering and inspiring his men until he received his third and fatal wound.

Great Exploit by Toronto Man.

In the attack on Bourlon Wood, an acting captain of the left support company of a Toronto battalion found the advance held up by machine gun fire from a railway embankment. He rushed up two platoons, outflanked the position, and captured it, enabling the advance to be resumed. When almost on the Arras-Cambrai road the company was again held up by machine guns. Single handed he rushed the stronghold, capturing four machine guns, and 31 prisoners, one hundred yards ahead of the men, and thus preventing the withdrawal of an enemy battery which fell into our hands.

Ravening Hun Vulture in Feb., 1917, Herr Erzberger is Peace Dove Now

The Peace-Loving Character of the New German Peacemaker.

LONDON, Oct. 23. — It is recalled by the Times correspondent at Berne that Mathias Erzberger, leader of the German Centrists and a member of the Government formed to convince the outside world of the peace-loving character of this Government, in an article written in February, 1917, expressed sentiments quite the contrary to those he is now supposed to entertain. He wrote:

"The greatest ruthlessness is in reality the greatest humanity. If it should be possible to destroy the whole of London that would be more humane than to allow one of our fellow country men to bleed to death on the battlefield, because such a radical cure would lead most speedily to peace.

"England has stolen from us more than 400 merchant ships. The answer to this should be that for every German merchantman one English town or village will be destroyed by our airmen."

The German papers are, laying great stress on the supposed attitude of Herr Erzberger on the peace question.

They refer at length to his plan for a league of nations.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards—Receipts yesterday, 61 cars, with 932 cattle, 106 calves, 925 hogs, and 979 sheep and lambs.

The trend of cattle prices continues downward and although there was a fair clean up of the two days' offerings, it was not without still further price concessions, especially on the common cattle. There was practically nothing in the way of choice quality in the market, the bulk of the day's offerings being light common butcher, and common cows and canners.

The stocker trade continues very quiet.

All the small stock, calves, sheep and lambs, holding steady.

Hogs are steady at $18.25 fed and watered.

GRAIN MARKET

The Winnipeg Grain Exchange yesterday made an important order, prohibiting all trading in October oats except for the liquidation of existing contracts, and fixing a maximum price at 85 1-2c. Cash prices are therefore fixed on this basis. The corn markets acted very strong, advancing 3c. over Monday's close. The German reply to President Wilson was interpreted as a big bull factor in the market as further postponing any prospect for an immediate peace. Ontario wheat is now quoted on the f.o.b. basis, according to freights.

Manitoba wheat—In store, Fort William, nominal (not including 2 1-2c. tax); No. 1 northern, $2.24 1-2; No. 2 northern, $2.21 1-2; No 3 northern, $2.17 1-2; No. 4 wheat, $2.11 1-2.

SCRIPTURE FOR THE KAISER.

(The Kansas City Star.)

The Kaiser, in his speech to the Krupp workers, showed himself something of a student of the Scriptures. Has he happened lately to turn to Ezekiel vii: 25 and 27? He might learn something to his advantage by doing so:

"Destruction cometh; and they shall seek peace, and there shall be none.

"The king shall mourn, and the prince shall be clothed with desolation, and the hands of the people of the land sholl be troubled; I will do unto them after their way, and according to their deserts will I judge them; and they shall know that I am the Lord."

RUTH TAKES POSITION WITH FIFTH AVENUE DECORATING FIRM

CHAPTER XIX.

Ruth dressed with unusual care even for her. She wore one of her trousseau dresses, a quiet but elegant street dress. When she emerged from the little hallway leading to her flat, she was flawless from the tip of her patent leather shoes to the top of her close fitting toque, which covered but could not hide her glossy hair.

She went first to one of the large Fifth Avenue shops—a very exclusive one, by the way. They received her courteously, as would any man. Women of her type, clothed as she was that morning, are not often found seeking work.

But to their sorrow they had no place for her. They had experts in all departments, and trained assistants. If she would leave her address they would bear her in mind.

Ruth had no intention of giving her address She herself realized that considering the way she dressed, it was incongruous. She simply told them she would perhaps call again if she found nothing soon. They urged her to do so, and with a sinking feeling she departed.

"I musn't be discouraged because they wouldn't try me at the very first place," she scolded herself, as she walked down the street.

Her experience at the next place, a larger establishment, was almost identical.

"They are letting me down easy," she mumbled, using an expression of Brian's, and smiling grimly.

At the next shop they were willing to try her, but the salary offered was so small, she continued on her way. If she could do better she would not take it; if not, she might try—so she told the bewhiskered man who had talked to her.

"It may be filled. Better take it while you can get it," he said with an ingratiating smile. But Ruth shook her head.

The next place on her list was a small but select shop which she had often admired as she passed, because of the exquisite taste shown in arranging the window, as well as because of the unusual and beautiful materials shown

"I wish I could get in there!" she said to herself , as she waited while the clerk called someone in authority.

After talking a moment the proprietor, a man of attractive appearance, about forty years old, asked her to step into his private office with him. He was interested in what Ruth had told him of herself; about her love for the work which had fascinated her since childhood. Her clothes proved her taste, and she herself intrigued him to know her further.

"Now tell me WHY you want work?" he said after, the door had closed them in, "Your clothes do not indicate the necessity."

"I know," said Ruth with a smile, trying to think how best to answer the question which, while emphasized, had been put in a kindly voice. "My trousseau is still new and fresh. I have been married but a few months. My aunt with whom I lived up to the time of my marriage, is a very wealthy woman and she bought my trousseau."

"I take it then, that your husband is not wealthy."

"No, he is a young lawyer," as if that explained their poverty

"I see. And while he is waiting for clients, you want to help keep the pot boiling?"

"Yes, partly that!" Ruth hesitated then confessed: "But I hate housework. We can't afford to hire a maid, so I decided to try and do something more congenial and then have a woman do the work at home."

"A wise decission," Arthur Mandel remarked, thinking that the dainty creature before him was surely out of place in a kitchen.

Ruth waited. There was no more to tell. Was he simply curious about her, or was he intending to give her work? finally he said:

"I will give you twenty dollars a week at first. If you prove as able as I imagine you will, you soon will be worth more. My head woman was married two weeks ago. I have not yet filled her place. In fact I had no hopes of being able to for some time. She had been with us twelve years, and, besides knowing her part of the business, could attend to much that did not come directly in her department."

"She must have been very valuable," Ruth said inanely, thinking she would try awfully hard to fill that other woman's place, and wondering what they paid her

"When can you come?" Mr. Mandel asked.

"At once. To-morrow morning if you want me to," Ruth replied, her thoughts on Brian and what he would say to her high-handed way of doing things.

"Very well. Nine o'clock, or even half past will do. Our hours are not long. But we keep very busy during the time we remain open" so letting Ruth see he expected her to be "on the job," as Brian would say.

Ruth bade him good morning. He politely opened the door for her. Perhaps it was just as well that she did not know his eyes followed her with admiration until she gained the street.

WHOOPING COUGH.

Mr. Arthur Hainge, Ashton Farm, Perley, Sask., writes: "Two years ago whooping cough was very bad in this part of the country; our eight months old boy caught it and had a very severe attack. A neighbor advised the use of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine and we gave it and nothing else with splendid results. When the older brother took the whooping cough we used this medicine promptly and prevented serious trouble, as the cough passed off in two or three days".

PECULIAR OCCUPATIONS.

Those of the Bacteriologist, Anthropologist and Plant Doctor.

What man leads the most peculiar modern life? The question is not an easy one to answer offhand, but it is doubtful if any one spends his days in a more strange manner than the bacteriologist. Day after day, week after week, year after year he works in the laboratory, into which only the privileged may enter, studying the microbes of disease. He may not open the window lest he infect the whole neighborhood with typhoid or diphtheria, or any other diseases with which he is at close quarters all day. He encourages bacteria to multiply, and then through a microscope, or sometimes with the naked eye, he watches how they spend their time, in order that he may combat their deadly influence.

While the bacteriologist looks forward, the anthropologist looks backward. He is the man who de to any place when he hears a deep excavation is being made, and hopes always that he will find a skeleton, and especially a skull, for he is never so happy as when he unearths human relics going back centuries.

The plant doctor is akin to the bacteriologist, for, like the latter, he spends much of his time in the laboratory, not studying the enemies of the human world, but the enemies of the plant world, and he is very proud when, after diagnosing and treating the various ailments of flowers, he runs across, say, the enemy of a rose, and finds how it may be kept from doing harm. —London Tit-Bits.

Poor Humanity.

"Success in aeronautics, as in most things," said a prominent aeronut, "is achieved by patience and faith in oneself. Pessimists, like my friend's new gardener on Long Island, would not accomplish much in work like mine. This man was raking leaves off the lawn one fall day when a neighbor passing by inquired of him:

"'Where's the gardener who used to work here?'

"'Dead, sir,' was the reply.

"'Dead,' said the astonished neighbor. Then, musing, he added, 'Joined the great majority, eh?'

"'Oh, sir,' the gardener interrupted in a shocked voice, 'I wouldn't like to say that. He was a good enough man as far as I know.'"—Lippincott's.

Storks In Holland.

Nowhere else in the world does the stork stand in higher regard than among the people of western Holland. Nothing is regarded as more indicative of good fortune to come than for a pair of storks to build their nest in the chimney of a humble cottage. However humble that cottage may be, the occupants feel that the stork's nest promises many blessings in the future. The farmers erect long poles with a box at the top in their fields, feeling that if the birds build their nests there both the quality and the quantity of their crops are assured.

False Logic.

"Women are all alike," declared the disappointed suitor bitterly.

"Oh, I don't know," responded the maiden airily. "You must not draw general conclusions from the fact that all the women you have known managed to get on to your curves."—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Holland.

Holland, known as North and South Holland, forms part of the northern part of the Netherlands. These provinces are composed of land rescued from the sea and defended by immense dikes. Holland was inhabited by the Batavi in the time of Caesar, who made a league with them. It became part of Gallia Belgica and afterward of the kingdom of Austria. From the tenth to the fifteenth century it was governed by counts under the German emperors. Holland was at one time a Dutch republic. It was created a kingdom in 1806, and Louis Bonaparte, father of Napoleon III., was declared king.—Exchange.

Actors In Retirement.

Many actors have lived long after retiring from the stage. Macready, retiring in 1851 at the age of fifty-eight passed an honored leisure till his death at Cheltenham, England, in 1873. After Mrs. Siddons' farewell appearance as Lady Macbeth in 1812, being then in her fifty-seventh year, she spent her remaining score of years in almost unbroken retirement. The record in this respect, however, is held by that famous Master Betty whom in 1804 London acclaimed as the Infant Roscius. His positively last appearance was made on Aug. 9, 1824, at the age of thirty-two. He died in August, 1874, a "resting" of half a century.—London Standard.

Watching the Bridegroom.

It was not only the matchmaking advertising parson who made money out of the bygone bridegroom. There was the man who watched the bridegroom for twenty-four hours or so before the time fixed for the ceremony lest he turned tail at the thought of the ordeal and its after effects. Here is an entry in the register of a village church in Huntingdon which illustrates the custom: "December, 1647. Paid for wages spent upon the man that watched John Pickle all night and the next day till he was married." Such precautions recall Stevenson's definition of marriage as a "friendship recognized by the police."—London Chronicle.

Safe From That.

"Now that you have been married a year what can you say of your experience?"

"Well," he replied solemnly, "I can truthfully say that I am sure that bigamy is one crime that I'll never commit."

Idyllic Love.

"Daughter, don't marry that young man. He'll never bring home the bacon."

"How foolish you are, dad! What do I care about the bacon if he'll only bring home the fortions."

HELPING THE WOUNDED

Our Canadian nurses are needed "over there" now as never before. This is the time to learn how to take care of the wounded, the sick—or any emergency. You can learn a great deal by obtaining the "Medical Adviser" from your nearest druggist, a book of 1,000 pages, bound in cloth, containing chapters on First Aid, Bandaging, Anatomy, Hygiene, Marriage, Mother and Babe; or send 50c to Dr. Pierce, Courtwright St., Bridgeburg, Ont.

Thousands of women in Canada have overcome their sufferings, and have been cured of woman's ills by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Fainting spells, chills or great pain at regular or irregular intervals should be corrected, and every woman who suffers from backache, headache, nervousness, should take this "Prescription" of Dr. Pierce's. Send ten cents for trial package to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., or branch, Bridgeburg, Ont., or write for free confidential medical advice.

Toronto, Ont.—"As a tonic and builder I can highly recommend Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription to tired and run-down women. I am the mother of eight children and have frequently had need of such a tonic but did not know what to take until my sister gave me some of the 'Favorite Prescription' which she herself had found to be good. It was exactly the tonic my system required and one bottle did wonders for me, so I take pleasure in telling others, hoping that they will give the 'Prescription' a trial and be benefited just as I have been."—Mrs. Elizabeth Taylor, 264 Ontario St.

Want to Feel Just Right?
— Take an NR Tonight —

JUST TRY IT AND SEE how much better you feel in the morning. That "logey," headachy, tired, don't-know-what's-the-matter feeling will be gone—you'll feel fine.

TROUBLE IS, your system is clogged with a lot of impurities that your over-worked digestive and eliminative organs can't get rid of. Pills, oil, salts, calomel and ordinary laxatives, cathartics and purges only force the bowels and prod the liver.

Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) acts on the stomach, liver, bowels and even kidneys, not forcing, but toning and strengthening these organs. The result is prompt relief and real, lasting benefit. Make the test. Nature's Remedy will act promptly, thoroughly, yet so mildly, so gently, that you will think nature herself has come to the rescue and is doing the work.

And oh, what a relief! You'll be surprised to find how much better you feel—brighter, better every way.

If habitually or stubbornly constipated, take one NR Tablet each night for a week. Then you'll not have to take medicine every day. Just an occasional NR Tablet after that will be sufficient to keep your system in good condition—keep you feeling your best.

Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) is sold Guaranteed and recommended by your druggist

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Danger Zone

By Florence Lillian Henderson

anywhere in Canada

I'll satisfy your longing for a plutocratic smoke at a democratic price— 10 cents.

Arabela

"You can't see it my way, Nance?"

"I am sorry to say I can't, Levi. I fear I never will."

"Fear! sorry!" scorned Levi Blair, with a dark scowl. "It's well enough to be polite, but I'd speak the truth if I were you. There's someone else, that's what's the trouble, and I'd like to run across him. And I have a dim idea who it is. He's keeping close, and he'd better, for he's wanted, and if he's caught the crowd will surely settle him."

"You have said quite enough," spoke Nance Duryea with flashing eyes. "Don't you dare to come here any more." Slam! And Levi Blair found the closed door between himself and the object of his love. He shook his fist at an imaginary rival and went his way.

The Duryea house was connected by a covered passageway with the little one-story and loft workshop where John Duryea made boxes. He had originally been a cooper, but there was no demand for barrels or kegs in the district since the moonshiners had been driven into exile. At Mayville, twenty miles away, however, a small shoe factory had been started. Labor was cheap and there was a local tannery, and the shoe people had given Duryea a permanent and quite profitable contract to supply them with shipping cases.

The value of the contract and the necessity of business expansion had about influenced Mr. Duryea to remove to Mayville, and Nance hailed the prospect with delight. There was nothing at Crofton to attract a young girl. The men were rough and uncouth, the women led a humdrum, slavelike life and the town and the district was dominated by a fierce, law-defying group, familiarly known as "The Hillers."

They were called that because at the appearance of anyone in collision with the law the moonshiner up among the mountain ranges welcomed the refugee to shelter and protection. The two elements were in friendly communication and stood by each other in a signal way when occasion required.

The advent of a stranger was always hailed with suspicion. The rough element looked for an excise officer or a government spy invading their territory in every newcomer, and when Bert Knowlton, a young lawyer from a distant city appeared in the interest of a client relating to a large tract of coal land, he was advised by the local head of justice as follows:

"Get through your job quick as you can and stay in nights."

"Why? What's the particular danger?" inquired the self-possessed young man rather coolly.

"You're hitting the gang, that's the particular danger," responded the tavern keeper. "As you know, the squatter rights of the tract in litigation rest with the Widener family and they're strong and powerful with the folks hereabouts. They'll block you. I warn you, and if you stick too close and too long, it will be a load of buckshot some dark night."

"I shall try to take care of myself," said Knowlton with his habitual composure, and went on his way, undeterred and unafraid.

By the merest chance once or twice he had met Nance Duryea. The first time was when he overtook her in a sudden rainstorm, and his umbrella, as he escorted her home, afforded her timely shelter. She was duly impressed with this neatly groomed, clear-eyed young man, whose courtesy and attentions made her remember him. There had been a half understanding between them that he was to call upon her the evening when Levi Blair made his plea and threat, but Knowlton did not come, much to the disappointment of Nance.

It was the next afternoon just about dusk when loud voices and a general commotion in front of the house called her to the front door. She was startled to observe her father with set face and wrath-filled eyes confronting half a dozen rough-looking men, one of whom was holding a bloodhound in leash, Levi Blair was the leader.

"Search my house," John Duryea was shouting, and his honest face fairly bristled with indignation and resentment. "Why, I'll wing the first dastard who crosses the threshold."

"That's all right, John Duryea," spoke Blair, "but our dog has traced the blood marks in this direction. We are after that spy, Knowlton, and we're going to get him. He wounded two of our men and he escaped, but with a good dose of buckshot in one leg."

"You coward," cried Nance, stepping into plain view. "How dare you insinuate that Mr. Knowlton came here. My father scarcely knows him by sight and I have not seen him for two days. Double craven you are, to hunt down a stranger who comes here among us on legitimate business."

"You can go your way," spoke Mr. Duryea. "I have always been neutral in your affairs, attending strictly to my own. I'll tell you this, though: Some day you'll go too far and the police down at Mayville will come up here and clean you out, root and branch."

Reluctantly and with vengeful ire Levi Blair led his crowd away. Nance went to her own room. She was agitated and in tears. Analyzing intuitively an emotion of rare interest in the hunted man, she dared not confront her father with her tell-tale face.

Nance did not go to bed at her usual hour. She could not sleep thinking of the handsome, manly young fellow who had fallen under the ban of the Hillers. She had watched her father and his hired man piling the packing cases on the great hayrack truck, a full load for Mayville. Then the hired man went to his home nearer the village to get his supper and have a lunch put up to last him through his long trip.

Suddenly Nance bent her ear and listened. A scraping sound echoed from overhead. She thrilled as it was followed by a distinct groan. Her heart stood in her mouth as she took up a lamp and went up the loft stairs. A quick suspicion had come into her mind. It was verified as, seated upon the floor, she made out Knowlton.

"Oh, I am so glad," she cried spontaneously, and then flushed with confusion. "I mean, that you have escaped those cruel men."

Knowlton was pale, one limb was bandaged from the knee down, but he smiled with swift appreciation of the kindliness of that gentle nature.

"I was just trying to find something that would do for a crutch," he explained. "I feared I might compromise your father by remaining here, where I stole in early this morning. I must get to Mayville and get some of the buckshot picked out of my limb. My wounds are not serious, but I cannot stand on the foot unsupported."

"Yes, you must get away, and I must help you," spoke his practical little friend, meditatingly. "Oh, I have it!"

First to see that the bandages were in place, then food and water, and then, Nance supporting him, he was helped down the back stairs to the truck, the cover of a rear-most box removed, and within he ensconced himself.

"You are an angel of mercy," he said feelingly, as he kissed the fair hand that had succored him. Nance set the cover lightly on the box, securing only two nails.

"Inside of three hours you will be within the safety zone," she spoke. "In eight at Mayville. I am so glad!"

She returned to her room, but only to watch and wait until the hired man returned. In the distance she caught the echo of some ribald crew in the town engaged in drunken frolic, and shuddered. She heard the truck wheels grate over the stony road leading to the river ford. Insensibly she drifted into slumber, her head on the window sill, to start up wildly an hour later as the voice of the hired man came up to her from the yard below.

He had two horses, wagonless, and one was shouting excitedly for her father, who came hurrying out to him.

"What's the trouble? Where's the wagon?" cried Duryea sharply.

"Burned up, boxes, truck and all. I met Blair and his crowd, roaring drunk. They tipped over the wagon, set the boxes on fire, and are now dancing about the ashes like fiends and boasting that they have taught you a lesson for siding with that stranger, Knowlton, who escaped them."

With a wail of terror unutterable Nance Duryea sank to the floor senseless. She was like some crushed flower, when she came downstairs the next morning. Amid his troubles her father failed to notice the haunting terror in her face. She was too stricken and anguished to tell him of the fate of the man she had befriended.

"You're to get ready to have the hired man take you to Mayville at once," her father told her. "I shall follow. It's getting too hot to hold us down here."

She was like one in a dreadful trance all the way to Mayville. Her aunt noticed the cloud that hung over frame and spirit like a pall. Nance for several days was confined to her room under the care of a physician. She came downstairs weak and attenuated. The horror of that night at home, it seemed, would never leave her.

She was reclining at an open window, in an invalid chair, one day, when a man, aided by a crutch, passed along the street. It was he!

"Oh, it cannot be!" she cried. "Mr. Knowlton; oh, come into this house."

"Just out of the hospital," Bert Knowlton told Nance, "and bent on going back to Crofton to thank you, if fifty Hillers stood in the way."

"But you were burned up—"

"Quite the reverse. I was nearly drowned," said Knowlton. "The box I was in fell off the load as the wagon crossed the ford. I floated for five miles, managed to get ashore, and— But you have been ill?"

She burst into tears of relief and gladness, and and then her story, and then—

In the tender eyes of the lonely girl beside him, Bert Knowlton read a token of love that assured him that that there was no shadow of another parting.

A Romance of Industry

The history of every business, if it could be written, would disclose a romance—the visions of young men being materialized and the dreams of older men coming true.

There is romance about our business, and we are proud of it. It's the romance of a business grown to giant proportions from small beginnings, because of the vision and industrial courage of young men now grown to maturity in our service.

It's the romance of a business, painstaking and careful in small things, that has achieved positive eminence in the production of big things.

It is the romance of a business that enters into the calculation of Canada's industrial resources. Upon our business, our courage and our industrial resolution, some 20,000 firms place complete reliance for the delivery of their Power Transmission Equipment.

And despite the frailties of human nature, and the limitations of mechanical production, we are proud to say that we rarely disappoint our customers' expectations.

Why Stay Fat? You Can Reduce

The answer of most fat people is that it is too hard, too troublesome and too dangerous to force the weight down. However, in Marmola Prescription Tablets, all these difficulties are overcome. They are absolutely harmless, entail no dieting or exercise, and have the added advantage of cheapness. A large case is sold by druggists at 75c Or if preferable, they can be obtained by sending price direct to the Marmola Co., 864 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich. Now that you know this you have no excuse for being too fat, but can reduce two, three or four pounds a week without fear of bad after-effects.

Too Familiar.

A country hotel, a good deal frequented by motorists, took in a showman and his performing bear, and one morning the bear escaped from the stable. Everybody fled before the animal. The hotel man, however, pursued it courageously. It entered the hotel, mounted the stairway, pushed open a bedroom door and vanished. The hotel man, close behind, heard from the bedroom an angry exclamation in a feminine voice and the words: "George, dear, how often have I forbidden you to come into my room without knocking—and in your automobile coat, too!"

TWELVE INCH SHELLS.

These Big Projectiles Carry a Thirty Pound Explosive Charge.

High power projectiles are constructed with cavities in their centers which contain the explosive charge, the explosive carried varying with the size of the projectile. A twelve inch shell, weighing 870 pounds, carries about thirty pounds of explosive. The cavity of such a projectile is about seven inches in diameter at the base, and gradually tapers in size toward the point. After the charge is placed in the projectile a plug is screwed into the base, thus sealing up the explosive, and a fuse is inserted in the center of the plug extending into the explosive within the cavity.

The fuse, without which the explosive is harmless, depends upon the high rotary motion of the shell to become active. This rotary motion is imparted by the riding of the gun. In the smooth surface of the tube are cut the riding grooves of a width of about one-eighth inch.

Around the shell, near its base, in a groove cut for the purpose, is compressed what is known as the rotating band. This band projects above the surface of the shell and corresponds with the riding grooves, so that upon its discharge it is forced into the rifling, where it acts as a seal to prevent the escape of the gas formed by the exploding powder and gives the shell the required rotary motion, which keeps it on its true course with its point always in a direct line ahead.—London Tit-Bits.

Guessed It.

Inspector, examining a class in grammar, wrote a sentence on the blackboard and asked if any one noticed anything peculiar in it.

After a short silence a small boy explained:

"Yes, sir; the bad writing."—Exchange.

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

That beautiful, even shade of dark glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face When it fades turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients for 50 cents a large bottle, all ready for us. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

How Do Men Break Down?

Be assured that there is no chance of your breaking down—although there will be times when you will try to fool yourself with this idea. This thought of breaking down indeed is one of the illusions of mediocrity. It is the excuse which every lazy man presents to himself. It is moral astigmatism. The great fact is that men do not break down from overwork so much as is commonly supposed. As they go upward in the scale of increased activity, increased responsibility only acts upon them as a natural stimulant and carries them along. If hard work and worry killed men so easily, most of the successful business men of America would be dead already. No! What kills men is due more to what they take into their stomachs, rather than what they take into their minds.—Thomas L. Masson, in Physical Culture.

TO RELIEVE CATARRHAL DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES
If you have Catarrhal Deafness or are hard of hearing or have head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength), and add to it ½ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.
This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little and is pleasant to take. Anyone who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.

THE EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S DRESS.

Foulard and Georgette crepe make a very happy combination, for it is smart and dressy and yet gives excellent service. A model which suggests an exceptionally good way to combine the two is illustrated in No. 8860. The skirt and overblouse are of summer foulard and the kimono waist is of Georgette. The overblouse slips on over the head and ties in a sash at each side under the arms. It is cut low at the front, and the waist shows through the opening, giving the effect of a vest. The long sleeves are gathered into deep cuffs, but the three-quarter length is wide and loose at the lower edge. The two gored skirt is gathered at the slightly raised waistline.

The lady's dress pattern No. 8860 is cut in five sizes—36 to 44 inches bust measure. Width at lower edge of skirt is 1¾ yards. As on the figure the 36 inch size requires 3½ yards of 36 inch or 3 yards of 44 inch figured material, and 1¾ yards of 36 inch plain material.

PRECOCIOUS PAINTERS.

Some Famous Pictures That Were Produced by Mere Boys.

Sir David Wilkie was probably the most popular painter of his time and one of the most deservedly so, and his pictures today are almost all in the great national collections or in the possession of the king. He was extremely precocious and might be said to have been born with a palette in his hand.

Wilkie painted his famous and very characteristic piece, "Pitlessie Fair," when he was a mere lad. It was a local scene which he knew well, and the 140 figures which it contains were all sketched from his father's parishioners, for Wilkie was a "son of the manse." As his father would have been very angry to think his boy was doing such a wrong thing as to ridicule his dear flock, David had to use his models quite "unbeknown" to them—in fact, during service. The young artist got them all "under the boarboard" and transferred them to canvas at his leisure.

Everybody knows that Millais was an "infant prodigy." Did he not win the gold medal of the Royal academy when he was nine?

At South Kensington hangs a glowing and masterly canvas entitled "Pizarro Seizing the Inca of Peru." How many boys of fifteen know anything of Pizarro or the Incas even if they happen to know the whereabouts of Peru? Yet Millais was only that age when he not only knew these things, but could realize them in splendid power in paint and get his picture on the line at the academy, and he was only nineteen when he painted one of his supreme masterpieces, judged by some to be the greatest thing he ever did, "Lorenzo and Isabella," which is one of the treasures of the Walker Art Gallery of Liverpool.

Holman Hunt was only twenty when he painted his famous "Eve of St. Agnes" and still little more than a boy when he painted his remarkable picture which he called "Behold I Stand at the Door and Knock," but which is known to the world today as "The Light of the World," a replica of which can be seen in St. Paul's cathedral.

Rossetti painted his lovely picture, "Girlhood of Mary Virgin," when he was twenty and his famous "Ecce Ancilla Domini" the year following.

Landseer was amazingly precocious. He exhibited his first academy picture when he was fifteen.—Exchange.

Judging by Appearances.

The tired father of a restless boy orated as follows, not speaking to the boy directly, but doing it in his presence:

"How true it is that it is never safe to judge by appearances!"

"Yes," replied the boy's mother, seeing that it was her cue and answering with another version of the cliche, "appearances are often awfully deceptive."

"And so are inanimate objects," continued the paterfamilias with marked emphasis. "You would think, for instance, if you judged by appearances, that the heavy pair of school shoes I bought for James the other day was going to last for more than three weeks, wouldn't you? And you would never think that the fragile looking arithmetic I bought him at the beginning of the term would bid fair to last forever. But look at 'em!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A Carlyle Retort.

An empty headed duke once said to Thomas Carlyle at a dinner:

"The British people, sir, can afford to laugh at theories."

Carlyle, scowling, replied:

"The French nobility of a hundred years ago thought that they could afford to laugh at theorists too. But a man came and wrote a book called 'The Social Contract.' This man was Jean Jacques Rousseau, and his book was a theory and nothing but a theory. The nobles could laugh at his theory, but their skins went to bind the second edition of the book."

CLEANSES YOUR HAIR MAKES IT BEAUTIFUL, THICK, GLOSSY, WAVY
Try this! All dandruff disappears and hair stops coming out.
Surely try a "Danderine Hair Cleanse" if you wish to immediately double the beauty of your hair. Just moisten a cloth with Danderine and draw it carefully through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; this will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or any excessive oil—in a few minutes you will be amazed. Your hair will be wavy, fluffy and abundant and possess an incomparable softness, lustre and luxurinance.
Besides beautifying the hair, one application of Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; invigorates the scalp, stopping itching and falling hair.
Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating, stimulating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow long, strong and beautiful.
You can surely have pretty, soft, lustrous hair, and lots of it, if you will spend a few cents for a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter and try it as directed.

WHEN YOUTH DIES.

Shock of the First Realization That One Is Getting Old.

The moment when one first feels acutely that he is no longer young is bound to make one pause in something akin to consternation. For vividness it is like a flash of lightning across a black sky. Life no longer is all before one; even, more dreadful thought, it may be mostly behind.

After the first keen realization there follows a bewildered state of mind due to unwillingness—yes, to an actual puzzled inability to accept the truth. With all the agony of the startled call of a child at night the heart cries out, "It cannot be; it is not so."

Youth dies hard and fights and struggles in its dying like an imprisoned bird. Others, even those near and dear, are older, are even old; we can see that. But how can the stubborn facts be true as to ourselves? Very gradually, little by little, fighting its way inch by inch, the truth prevails and gnaws at the heart—though only intermittently, of course—until time numbs this emotion as it does every other one.—Robert L. Raymond in Atlantic Monthly.

Mrs. Macdonald was a young housekeeper and marketing was new to her. One morning she went down to the market to get some supplies.

"Oh, no," she replied quickly. "Toast butter. We never eat rolls."—Boston Herald.

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS
No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.
The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders
Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

WHAT A MAN READS.

It Is a Big Factor In Determining His Course of Life.

A certain low form of aquatic animal life anchors itself to a rock and feeds on whatever the current brings. The average man feeds his mind in much the same way. He falls into line for current amusements. He reads only current literature. He listens to what happens to go by. He makes but little systematic attempt to shut out the unfit or to put himself in line for the fit.

The result is a defective grade of human life that rarely elevates society and often degrades it. If a man would make the most of himself, and that is manifestly the supreme purpose for which he was put into the world, it is worth his while to do his daily work where unclean things, mental and physical, are not made common.

It makes a good deal of difference in the worth of the man today as to whether his reading last night was "Hamlet" and "Isaiah" or "The Other Man's Wife," whether he went to the art institute or the burlesque show. An ancient teacher of well balanced mind gave this direction to his disciples as to the topics to be selected for deliberate thought:

"Finally, my brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honorable, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report, if there be any virtue and if there be any praise, think on these things."

To think on these things one must see and hear these things. To see and hear these things one must make an effort to do so.

Sunlight and Vegetation.

The early rays of the sun exercise a more powerful effect in promoting rapid vegetation than the sun's light during the later hours of the day. The active little chlorophyll grains work faster and better in elaborating food for the plant under the action of the blue and yellow rays of the early morning than under the later violet and blue rays. Practical gardeners should make use of this fact by growing early produce as far as possible in a position where the plants will get the full benefit of the morning sun.—London Mail.

Poetry and Noses.

I have read that no poem was ever written to a nose. Can you, offhand, recall a single rapturous or even admiring description of one? I search my memory in vain, but produce instead one instance that has always interested me by neglect. You recall that little poem of Browning's, "A Face," the brief and charming description of a girl's profile against a background of gold. The "matchless mold" of softly parted lips, the neck "three fingers might surround" and the "fruit shaped perfect chin" all receive their due of praise; the nose, a seeming necessity in any profile, is not even mentioned. It may be as well; each reader supplies in the lovely face the line that suits him best. The poet may have feared that by its mere mention he would produce the effect too often given by the nose in real life—a heaviness that mars an otherwise charming face.—Atlantic.

Decomposing Water.

Water is decomposed or separated into its constituent gases by passing a continuous current of electricity through it. An ordinary zinc and copper voltaic battery gives sufficient amperage and also voltage to separate the oxygen and hydrogen. Oxygen goes to the pole connected with the copper plate and hydrogen to the zinc pole or plate. The volume of hydrogen is double that of the oxygen, and both are chemically pure. Steam, if passed over red hot iron, surrenders its oxygen to the atoms of the metal, while hydrogen is given off pure and free.—New York American.

HAMS OF WESTPHALIA.

Processes by Which They Are Cured and Flavored.

The famous Westphalian hams, which are eaten without cooking, are cured by an elaborate process that has been worked out patiently and skillfully by generations of expert workmen.

After being rubbed thoroughly with a solution in which there are 100 pounds of salt to one pound of saltpeter, the hams are placed on cement floors, or in vats, and thickly strewn with salt. They lie under salt for two weeks and then pass to a vat that contains a 22 per cent solution of brine. They remain in that solution for eighteen days. Every day they are shifted in the vat: the hams on the bottom are brought to the top, and vice versa.

At the end of the eighteen days the hams are packed, one upon another, in a cool, dry cellar, where they remain for four weeks, in order to ripen—that is, to take on color and become tender. Then the salt is washed off with a stiff brush dipped in lukewarm water, and the hams are put to soak for twelve hours in fresh water. After that they are ready for the smokehouse.

The smokehouses are two or three stories high, with holes bored in the flooring. The fires are kindled on the ground floor, and the meat is hung on the second and third floors. The fires are made entirely of beech wood, but the workmen constantly throw juniper berries and juniper twigs on the embers. The fire burns brightly. It is checked with beech wood sawdust whenever it burns too briskly.

The smoking continues for about eight days. Under the ancient curing methods, however, the hams were often kept in the smoke rooms for six weeks, and it is by this latter method that the best hams are still made by the country folk of Westphalia.

TOWER OF BABEL.

Its Remnants Are Believed to Stand Near Babylon's Ruins.

It is doubtful if there is any place in the world so rich in ancient remains as the valley of the Euphrates, in Mesopotamia. The result is that to archaeologists and scholars the place is a veritable "Tom Tiddler's ground," and new "finds" are constantly being reported.

When it is remembered that tradition places the site of the Garden of Eden here, while among its many ruins are those of ancient Babylon, the promising nature of the valley to the scientific excavator becomes apparent.

It is near the ruins of Babylon that we find what many scholars believe to be the remains of the tower of Babel—an immense cube of brickwork, called by the natives Birs Nimrud.

Recent exhaustive examination of the strange pile and its site has revealed the fact that the tower that once stood here consisted of seven stages of brickwork on an earthen platform, each being of a different color.

The tower boasted of a base measurement of nearly 600 square feet and rose to an unknown height. Even today the ruins rise some 160 feet above the level of the surrounding plain.—Wide World Magazine.

Fills Stomach With New Energy
Weak, Worn Out, Gassy, Sour Stomach Revived and Made to Enjoy Food With Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.
Most of us eat three times a day and often forget that each meal should be disposed of in the stomach to make room for the next. The failure of the stomach to do this is called indigestion or dyspepsia, with its sour risings, gas, rumblings, pain, depression and the feeling of stuffiness when breathing is difficult.
The most effective remedy and the most reliable one, because you can get it at any drug store in the United States or Canada, is Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, at 50 cents a box. Instead of depriving yourself of food or going on a starvation diet simply keep on as you have and let these tablets straighten out your stomach, digest the food and keep you in the fight.

Why Not Insure The Payment of Your Premium?
Suppose you are thirty-five years old, and carrying $10,000 of Life Insurance costing you, say $300.00 per year, would you not like, (in case of serious accident or illness destroying your earning power) to have the payment of this premium paid for you as long as you live?
Then Read The Following:
The Sun Life of Canada will give you a further insurance of $5,000.00 if you are still insurable, and if you become totally and permanently disabled from any cause, the Company will not only relieve you of all future premiums on THIS policy during such disability, but they will guarantee to hand you a $500.00 cheque every year, which you see will pay the premiums on your $10,000.00 and in addition will give you a handsome CASH XMAS BOX each year and, nevertheless, will pay the face of your policy at maturity or death.
Many people hesitate to take out Life Insurance, lest some catastrophy should force them to give it up. Well, that bugbear is removed by the Sun Life of Canada.

INFLUENZA WORSE THAN HUN BULLETS

Claiming More Victims Than Battle Fronts of Europe—Disease Can be Avoided.

According to carefully compiled statistics, it is an indisputable fact that the Spanish influenza epidemic which is now sweeping all parts of the country is daily claiming far more victims than German bullets on the battle fronts of Europe. Although civil and military authorities have succeeded in checking the disease in some localities, it is growing worse in others and continues to spread at an alarming rate. That the disease can be avoided there is no longer any doubt. According to leading authorities the powers of resistance of the human system can be so perfected that it can throw off almost any infection, not even excepting Spanish influenza, which is one of the most contagious diseases known.

It is persons who are suffering from lowered vitality, who are weak and run down and who have not the strength to throw it off who are the earliest victims. Persons who have bad colds, who are suffering from catarrhal troubles, or inflammation of the mucous membranes are especially susceptible, as the inflamed mucous membrane linings of the nose and throat are an open door to the germs. This condition is almost always accompanied by a weakened condition of the system.

If you are suffering from any of these symptoms nothing on earth will build you up and strengthen you like Tanlac, which contains the most powerful tonic properties that are known to science.

This statement is easily proven by the fact that Tanlac is now having the greatest sale of any system tonic in the history of medicine. In less than four years over Ten Million bottles have been sold and the demand is constantly increasing. Thousands are using it daily for the above troubles with the most astonishing and gratifying results.

Tanlac increases your strength and weight and creates a good, healthy appetite for nourishing food. It keeps you physically fit and helps every organ of the body perform its proper function in the natural way.

In connection with the Tanlac Treatment be sure and keep the bowels open by taking Tanlac Laxative Tablets, samples of which are included in every bottle.

Tanlac is sold in Peterboro by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock, by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by the Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowlers' Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

VERY LITTLE CHANGE IN SITUATION REPORTED TO-DAY FROM THE WESTERN FRONT

Sharp Fighting Took Place at a Number of Points—Enemy Resistance Stiffens.

OFFICIAL DESPATCHES

LONDON, Oct. 23.—(Official..)—The British this morning very early began a new attack on a front between Le Cateau and Colesmes. The British have taken Bruay, two and a half miles from Valenciennes, and have reached the west bank of the Scheldt canal.

The statement reads:

At an early hour British troops attacked on the Le Cateau-Solesmes front and are reported to be making good progress. Further north, between Valenciennes and Tournai, we have taken Bruay and reached the west bank of the Scheldt at Blesaires and Espain. Considerable resistance was encountered on this front yesterday and sharp fighting took place in which our troops, pressing the enemy vigorously, inflicted many casualties upon him and drove him from his positons, capturing a number of prisoners.

British troops were fighting their way into the centre of Valenciennes early to-day. They were facing strong enemy machine gun fire from the eastern bank of the Scheldt canal, which flows through the city.

French Official.

PARIS, Oct. 23.—(Official.)—On the Serre front last night the Germans met with heavy machine gun fire the efforts of the French to cross the Souhce and Serre rivers. Further east the French made progress between Nizy-Le-Comte and Le Thour, taking prisoners.

Early Morning Attack.

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, Oct. 23. — British and American troops attacked early today on the Le-Cateau-Solesmes front (about ten miles), Field Marshal Haig announced. "Good progress" was reported.

Northeast of Laon French troops have reached the line of the Serre River, having made an advance of two to three miles on an eight-mile front.

Collections For Red Cross

First Day Results of the Red Cross Campaign Total $9,500.

Nine thousand five hundred and seventeen dollars was collected yesterday in the first day of the Red Cross campaign Mr. Morrow who collected from the manufacturers had the largest amount followed by Mr. Denne and Mr. Breyfogle who brought in $2,600 for their district. The collectors have met with a ready response in practically every appeal they have made and are confident of going "over the top" before the close of the canvass.

Citrus Fruit Are Scarce and Dear

Lemons at $14 a case and oranges at prices ranging from $17 to $19 a case are reflections of the influenza epidemic. All over the country doctors have been prescribing lemons and oranges in the diets of their patients, and an extremely heavy demand has been felt. The market has touched unprecedented high marks. Locally, the supply is very limited and in filling orders for the retailers Mr. W. J .Oke has been alloting three and four dozen orders to the trade instead of sending out cases as in the past. Lemons were four for twenty-five cents in the stores yesterday.

The demand or grapefruit is comparatively light and the prices are normal.

Paper Controller About to Order Cutting Off of Unpaid Subscriptions.

AT a public hearing in Ottawa last week in connection with paper conservation, the Paper Controller for Canada intimated that regulations about to be issued would include one to the effect that:

Publishers of daily newspapers must cease sending their newspapers to subscribers three months in arrears unless subscriptions be definitely renewed and all arrears fully paid.

The reason for this regulation of the Paper Controller is that it is the practice of some publishers to send their newspaper until ordered stopped, and in cases of removal from that city very often the paper is continued at a loss, in which case there is virtual loss of paper. It is to prevent paper waste that the new regulation has been decided upon.

The manufacture of paper consumes labor, wood, coal, chemicals and transportation facilities, and every ton of paper saved means just so much more labor, raw materials, chemicals, fuel and transportation available for urgent war needs. For these reasons the Government insists that paper shall be saved, and proposes that only those who pay for their publications shall receive them.

Under these regulations The Examiner will have no choice in the matter of dealing with subscriptions in arrears for over three months.

You need The Examiner, and we want to continue sending it to you. So, if your subscription is in arrears, please pay up at once to prevent a discontinuance of your subscription, in compliance with the ruling of the News Print Commissioner.

Luxemburg May Cut Herself Free From Germany

Information Concerning Move Received in Official Quarters.

VALUABLE MINES

(By Raymond Clapper, United Press)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23. — Luxemburg, from which Germany is drawing iron for munitions, will cut itself free from German domination and join the Allies after the war, according to diplomats here to-day.

An allied military success may make this possible earlier. Information leading to this conclusion has been received in official circles here.

It is stated that after the war Luxemburg will be either an independent state under the protection of the League of Nations, or a province of Belgium, and adjoining Belgium.

Luxemburg, nominally an independent Grand Duchy, has been held vassal by Germany for years because of her extensive iron mines, which have fed the Krupp works, and made possible Germany's super-preparedness programme.

Appealed to President.

The people of Luxembourg have now appealed to President Wilson for protection and have demanded that the German armies evacuate their territory which was overrun at the outbreak of the war in violation of a neutral treaty.

Political resentment was long held in check by the Grand Duchess but despatches indicate that Parliament is striving to cut loose from Germany and join the Allies.

Luxembourg contains a percentage of French and Belgian population and French is spoken among the educated classes and dominates the present peasant dialects, experts say. Germans signed treaties in 1867 and 1902, guaranteeing the neutrality of Luxembourg and promising not to use her railroads for troop movements.. But without a seaport, Luxembourg was forced into the German Customs Union and German tariffs were exacted on all goods coming in to her. She was thus forced into economic dependence on Germany, having few manufactures and being obliged to take German goods in exchange for iron and farm products.

15,497 SUCCUMBED IN U. S. ARMY CAMPS

Slight Improvement in the Influenza Epidemic in East and South.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—A slight improvement in the influenza situation over the country was indicated by reports received to-day by the Public Health Service, but in many places the epidemic apparently has yet to reach its crest. In the far West and on the Pacific coast the situation has not proved nearly as serious as in the East and South.

Continued abatement of the epidemic in army camps was reported to-day to the office of the surgeon-general of the army. New cases during the 24 hours ending at noon today totalled 2,773, against 3,007 the day before, while deaths decreased from 404 to 392. There was a slight increase in the number of pneumonia cases.

Army medical officers said influenza may now be said to be epidemic in only five camps, the others reporting less than fifty new cases each day. The total cases since the disease became epidemic number 292,770, with 15,497 deaths.

In the East and South generally conditions among the civilian population are rapidly improving, according to reports to the Public Health Service.

Peterboro Casualties

Roy McBride, of Millbrook, Killed in Action—Other Casualties.

Last evening Mr. John McBride, of Millbrook, was officially notified that his son, Roy McBride, was killed in action. The deceased enlisted early in the war with the 21st Battalion, and for some time was associated with the military police.

PTE. THOMAS JOHN HELE.

Mrs. Hele, 182 Sophia street, has been notified that her son, Pte. Thomas John Hele, was admitted to a casualty hospital on October 18th suffering from a gunshot wound in the right shoulder. Pte. Hele enlisted in the 93rd Battalion and subsequently returned home. He then re-enlisted in the 253rd Queen's University Highlanders. His father and two brothers are overseas.

PTE. FRANCIS C. CARTER

Mr. Lewis Major, 441 Rubidge street has received the sad intelligence that his grandson, Pte. Francis Christopher Carter was killed in action on September 28. Pte Carter was only 20 years of age at the time of his death. He was known in the city as Frankie Major and was a successful student of St. Peter's High School. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Carter reside in Renfrew, Ontario. The Renfrew Mercury has the following to say of him.

PRIVATE F. C. CARTER
KILLED IN ACTION

Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Carter of Bonnechere street, Renfrew, on Monday received official notification of the death in action on the Western Front of their soldier son, Private Francis Christopher Carter He fell mortally wounded on September 29th in his 20th year. Mr. and Mrs. Carter, who have two sons left, both under military age, removed to Renfrew five years ago from Peterboro where Frank was born. He had begun life as a bookkeeper when enlisting. He first put on khaki as a sapper and trained at Ottawa; then went across the Atlantic with a draft for the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry. When falling on September 28th he was in the infantry. The late Francis Christopher Carter did not spend much of his life in Renfrew, but was here long enough to make many warm friends, who join with his parents and brothers in mourning his death.

KILLED IN ACTION

Word has been received that Pte. Herbert Calberry who left for overseas with an Eastern Ontario infantry attachment last spring, has been killed in action in France. Pte Herbert Calberry was a brother of Corp. Gordon Calberry, formerly of 39th Battalion who was a short time ago reported died of wounds. The two brothers formerly lived near Crowe's Landing, Stoney Lake.

PTE. JOSEPH EANO.

Word has been received that Pte. Joseph Eano has been admitted to No. 26 General Hospital, Etaples, France, on Oct. 11th, suffering from a gunshot wound in the ankle. Pte. Eano, whose sister was notified in Chicago, is a nephew of Mr. Frank Eano, No. 186 1-2 Hunter Street, of the firm of Lane and Eano. Pte. Eano formerly lived in the city and came here from the Northwest where he was employed.

DRIVER J. D. McCARTHY.

Word has been received that Driver J. D. McCarthy, of the 38th Battery, C.F.A., has been dangerously wounded in the left arm, left leg and head, and is now at 20th General Hospital, Dannes Camiers, France.

Driver McCarthy is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel McCarthey, Keene, Ont., and before enlisting was with the Bank of Toronto staff, Brantford, Ontario.

President Wilson is Communicating With Governments

Germany's Alleged Constitutional Reforms Do Not Go Very Far—Note Ready for Delivery.

A LANDOWNERS' VOTE

(By Robert J. Bender.)
(United Press Service.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—President Wilson to-day was in communication with the Allied Governments involving the disposal of the latest German move for peace. When he determines upon a course of action, which is expected now without much more lelay, it will be in close co-operation with our associates in the war. Meanwhile the official text of the German note was ready for delivery this morning.

And these facts were the only things certain in a more or less puzzling situation. The main point of discussion in official or Congressional quarters hinges on Germany's alleged constitutional reforms which the President stressed as of prime importance in his last reply to the Kaiser. While widely at variance on the question of Germany's sincerity in her latest peace note, officials and leaders are practically unanimous upon one point, that Germany must go further than she has so far promised in amending her constitution before she can satisfy the world. The power of the Bundesrath might be curtailed, it was declared. This council is named by the Kaiser and Kings of the various states making up the German Confederation, under the present constitution. All bills must either originate in or be reviewed by the Bundesrath, which really represents only the sovereign and the ruling classes of the various states. Germany cannot amend its constitution, for instance. If fourteen of the fifty-eight members of the Bundesrath disapprove of the proposed amendment. Prussia has seventeen votes in the Bundesrath, hence Prussia can still dictate how far the demoralization of Germany shall go.

The original districts have not been changed since they were laid out in 1871. Some are thirty times as large as others, so far as population is concerned, but the large ones territorially, have the same representation they had originally. Thus, the vote of a junker landholder is really thirty times as powerful as the vote of a man from a large city, where progressive thoughts centre.

Doctors Advise Patients Not to Expose Themselves

Persons recovering from La Grippe and influenza are said to be particularly susceptible to pneumonia and doctors are reported to have advised their patients to be extremely careful in this matter. When a recovery has been made here should not be a readiness to get away from home at once

WAR SUMMARY

NEW YORK, Oct. 23. — The Associated press this morning issued the following summary:

Defensive warfare will be carried on by the German nation if the present government fails to secure "peace with justice," said Prince Maximilian, the German Imperial Chancellor, speaking before the Reichstag yesterday. The address lends new light on the latest note sent from Berlin to Washington. The German people want first to know what President Wilson's "fourteen points" mean to the future of Germany. If a satisfactory answer is not to be obtained, a "call for national defence" will be issued by the new government, said Prince Maximilian.

This "war of defence" is not far distant, if military events continue to develop during the near future as they have in the recent past. During the last ninety-seven days of fighting the Allies have advanced along the line from Pont-au-Mousson to Nieuport, an average distance of about 28 miles. This advance has aggregated 38 miles from Chateau Thierry to Grandlup, 59 from Amiens to the Sambre River, and 38 from Dixmude to the Eecloo-Zeebrugge canal. The grand average is held to low figures by the fact that the attacks east of Rheims have not carried the German line back over the permanent fortifications, and against desperate resistance, as far as the enemy was forced to flee farther west and north. In this sector the progress made, however, is as important as the must greater advances in some other parts of the front.

CHANCELLOR DISCUSSES THE PEACE SITUATION BEFORE THE REICHSTAG

MAKES THE REICHSTAG RESPONSIBLE FOR WAR.

Canadian Press.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 23.—An announcement was made by the German Chancellor of a Bill making the Reichstag responsible for war and peace, the measure to become effective when the project for a league of nations should become operative.

Attempts to Put the Soft Pédal on Debate—Have Reached a Critical Point.

PUBLIC OPINION

Canadian Press:

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 23. — Peace conversations between Berlin and Washington have reached a critical point, according to Prince Maximilian the German Imperial Chancellor, speaking before the Reichstag yesterday. In the course of the address he urged that the debate on the situation arising on the exchange of notes between himself and President Wilson be restricted as much as possible. The German people must not be blindly brought to the conference table, said Maximilian. The German people to-day has the right to ask, if peace is realized on the basis of President Wilson's conditions, what they mean for our future. Our answers to the President's question must be framed on the German people's understanding of that question. What it now wants is clearness.

Must Answer.

Special to The Examiner:

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 23.— Prince Maximilian, German Chancellor, addressing the Reichstag yesterday, declared that President Wilson must answer Germany's peace efforts. Until then, he said, Germany must prepare to resist a peace of violence.

Any government which acted otherwise, the Prince contended, would be swept away by public opinion.

"The whole German people are anxious to hear the Government's views regarding the success of peace negotiations," he continued.

"I speak with the greatest reserve. I am certain the parties will observe a reticence consistent with the seriousness of the hour."

Portions of the cable received so far would indicate that Prince Max had only really begun his speech and that he was fearful of disturbing interruptions.

A Grotesque Proposal

Allied Troops Must Not Follow Germans in Retreat But Remain in Present Positions.

Canadian Press:

PARIS, Oct. 23.—Germany's High Command is ready to evacuate invaded territories of France and Belgium on the express condition that the Allied troops will not follow them in retreat, but will remain where they are now located, says the Zurich correspondent of the Journal. The grotesque proposal is the outcome of the latest conferences at Berlin between the members of the General Staff and the War Cabinet, it is said. The militarist party is rapidly gaining ground, but the members of the moderate factions believe that before long grave internal events will help to improve the situation.

Sugar Situation Shows Improvement in Peterborough

Supplies Are Coming in More Freely—Prices Unchanged.

The sugar situation has decidedly improved during the past two weeks, the Perkins Ince, wholesale grocers, said to-day. During the past two months the sinking of cargoes of sugar by submarines off the coast had a serious effect upon the quantity placed on the market and now since that menace has apparently been removed, sugar is coming in more freely.

Since the 15th of this month the wholesale grocers have been on allotments of 70 per cent of their usual supply. This will be lifted on February the first, when the new sugar comes in. At present the dealers do not hope for any lowering in price as the new crop is not any too good.

The prices of the ordinary grocery have not changed lately, remaining steady at a high figure.

German-Austrian Deputies Form An Assembly

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BASEL, Oct. 23.—German-Austrian deputies in the Austrian Reichsrath have formed an assembly for the purpose of conducting the affairs of the German people in Austria and have issued a declaration announcing the creation of the "German State of Austria." There has been evidence for some time that the German people in Austria, distrusting the wavering policy of the Austro-Hungarian Empire and fearing its dissolution, or that it might draw away from Germany, were desirous of ensuring their own close unity with the German Empire. The German population in Austria forms the centre of the Austrian society and is the largest of many Ethnical elements in the Kingdom. The census of 1910 gave the German - speaking population as 9,950,000 out of a total of 28,325,000.

APPOINTMENT MAY BE RATIFIED TO-DAY

(Special to The Examiner.)

OTTAWA, Oct. 23. — The appointment of F. B. Migniault, K. C., the eminent barrister of Montreal, to the vacancy created on the Supreme Court Bench by the recent change, is expected to be ratified by the government in council to-day. It is stated that Hon. L. B. Pelletier has declined to accept the position.

Eugene LaFleur of Montreal, had, it is stated, many backers among the legal fraternity in various parts of Canada. He is ,however a Protestant, and the position is considered to be the prerogative of a Roman Catholic. Mr. Migniault is a lawyer of high ability. He is a member of the International Joint Waterways Commission and was counsel for the government in the famous Ne Temere case.

CONVINCING PROOF.

No more emphatic proof of the necessity of the new Canadian Victory Loan could be found than the decision of the Dominion Committee to go ahead with the campaign according to schedule in spite of the influenza epidemic raging in all parts of the country. There was a feeling among some of those connected with the promotion of the loan that it might be desirable to postpone the campaign, but the Dominion Committee has taken the position that the matter is of national importance, and must be carried through as arranged. The war goes on in spite of the epidemic, and the Victory Loan, the driving power behind Canada's war effort, must be successfully floated at once. The influenza outbreak should act as a spur to local committees everywhere to increase rather than diminish their efforts. Our neighbors across the border have successfully completed their Liberty Loan campaign in spite of the visitation of the Spanish "flu." We in Canada must not fall below the standard set by the people of the United States.

Get ready to go over the top with the Loan next Monday.

HONOUR FLAGS.

If Peterboro does not fly an honour flag at the end of the Victory Loan campaign it will be plain evidence to the outside world that this city has fallen down, that she has failed to back up her fighting role. Reproductions of the honour flag are to be seen on the bill boards, but Peterboro wants a real flag — not merely the picture of one—and the local commitee is confident that the people of this city will arise to the occasion and roll up such a heavy investment for the Victory Loan that Peterboro's honour flag shall be earned early in the campaign.

Such a flag, flying in Peterboro will not only be a symbol of financi l strength but will demonstrate that the people at home have an undying faith in their boys at the front and that the determination to win is as firmly placed in the hearts of those holding the home front as it is in the hearts of those who are wresting the soil of France and Belgium from the grasp of the dastardly Hun.

Another honour emblem which will undoubtedly be largely seen in Peterboro when the campaign is over is the honour roll which will be given to every large store, office and factory, in which at least seventy-five per cent. of the employees have invested in the loan. Provision is made for the recognition of those places in which the number subscribing is greater than 75 per cent., so there promises to be keen competition among the manufacturing and mercantile concerns of the city.

THE CALL TO SERVICE.

The poor response of the women of Peterboro to the appeal for volunteer nurses to assist in fighting the influenza epidemic, has not passed unnoticed. A returned soldier who read that only four women had registered, aized up the situation in a manner that might be regarded as severe, but can scarcely be described as wide of the mark:

"Before I enlisted, thirty months ago," he remarked, "there were a lot of young ladies who used to go to recruiting meetings and make perfectly audible remarks about the men who had not enlisted. You could hear them telling each other that they wished they were men so that they could get into khaki, and go out to fight for the old flag. And now that they have a chance to do a national service in fighting the 'flu, and you do not see any mad rush to get into the game. It is true there is a risk, but it is small compared to that taken every day by the men who are fighting in France; there are some hardships, but they are nothing compared to those undergone by the boys over there. And yet the women who said cutting things about the men who were not in khaki, are holding back now when their services are needed."

The man from overseas has touched upon a dangerous subject, but his views as expressed above are worthy of consideration. Volunteer workers are needed to help combat the epidemic. The City Clerk is ready to receive names, and up to last night had only four. Peterboro men made a much better showing when they were called upon to go thousands of miles to meet a foe far more dangerous than influenza.

A GREAT LESSON FOR OURSELVES.

German officers are distributing a tract among the German troops, blaming President Wilson for prolonging the war and comparing him with Caesar.

The audacity of it is apparent from a few extracts:

"However noble these peace efforts were they were destined to break in face of the opposition of the United States."

"It is now accordingly absolutely evident that the determination to kill emanated from the White House at Washington, and is concentrated in the person of President Wilson."

"What balm can the niceties of the President's oratory bring to the sacrifices of this war? If we speak of President Wilson only, it is not to pardon other imperial schemes. But in the presence of the cruel truth that for nearly five years human blood has flowed without cessation, it is natural that we point out to human justice the man who may be reproached by humanity with the prolonging of this horrible butchery."

"To the very end. That is their (England and America) reply. To what end? Must Europe perish? Must the human race disappear from the globe? Do you want the old continent to be nothing but a vast cemetery in which shall reign to the great joy of American billionaires the repose of a peace really eternal?"

This tract or leaflet is distributed among the German soldiers to mislead them, to make them believe that the President is responsible for the "prolonging of this horrible butchery." "Horrible butchery" is good coming from those who butchered Belgium. "For nearly five years human blood has flowed without cessation" and for more than half that time the United States had nothing to do with it. The President reluctantly entered the war to stop the "flow of human blood," to stop the "horrible butchery." It say "the determination to kill emanated from the White House at Washington." Yes, the determination to help Great Britain and France to kill militarism, not to kill but to keep alive human beings.

"We point out to human justice." What do they know of human justice who butchered Belgium, who put to death Edith Cavell, who sunk the Lusitania, who bombed hospital ships, who sent Zeppelins to England in the air, and murdered women and children, who sent U-boats under water to torpedo non-combatant and neutral ships, who form the greatest aggregation of criminals with the greatest variety of crimes the world ever knew!

They finally ask, "Do you want the old continent to be nothing but a vast cemetery in which shall reign to the great joy of American billionaires the repose of a peace really eternal?"

Britain and America and France have said "To the very end." The Germans have made Europe a vast cemetery to many millions, with "the repose of a peace really eternal." "To the very end" let Germans and Germany understand the meaning of those words: "To the very end." You shall not pass. You have carried out your last "horrible butchery." You have sunk the last ship. You have murdered the last man, woman and child. You have seen your last Zeppelin in the air and U-boat in the ocean. Your "horrible butchery" and most horrible crimes have come "to the very end." There will be "eternal peace," not the eternal peace of the cemetery you speak of, but the peace that belongs to nations such as Great Britain, America and France, all countries of happy homes and happy peoples. They know what freedom and true democracy mean. They want no "lording's pomp."

"What is a lordling's pomp?—a cumbrous load,
Disguising oft the wretch of human kind,
Studied in arts of hell, in wickedness refined."

The Germans have been studied in arts of hell, in wickedness refined. They seek by lying pamphlets to blame President Wilson and mislead their people. In that is a great lesson for all democratic countries. Democracy everywhere is led and misled, and instead of blindly following the leader let there be in this Canada a more independent thought, a better knowledge of public questions, more individual thought, so that collectively public opinion will mean something of value to the country.—London Advertiser.

Man that is born of his parents is of few days and full of microobes. He goeth to school when a youngster and gets the seat of his pants paddled for something he didn't do until he is sick at heart. He groweth up like a weed in the back yard and soon reaches the age when he is composed largely of feet, freckles and an appetite for pie. About the time he gets too long for short trousers and not long enough for long ones, he goeth away to college, learneth hew to monkey with a three-dollar mandolin and play whiskey pooker. He cometh home a bigger fool than ever and marrieth a sweet young thing whose pa is supposed to be wealthy, but whom he subsequently ascertaineth, couldn't buy the prize rooster at a country fair. He worrieth along from year to year, gradually acquiring offsprngs, until the house resembles a Sunday school class just before Christmas. He fretteth through the day and lieth awake nights trying to figure how to keep himself and his dependent population out of the poor-house. Efforts are rewarded by his daughters, who run off and get married and bring him some nice son-in-law every few days to feast at his board. His sons grow up and call him governor and set him back a five-spot every day or two. About the time his has acquired enough lucre to make it worth while for his heir to quarrel over, he contracts a cold and is hurried away before he has time to have a talk with his family. His sons blow in his estate on bad whiskey, and plug hats and his wife puts the finishing touches to his career by marrying the hired man.

A lady of our town has found a sure cure for broken dishes. If the dish to be mended can be tied together with a stout string, then place it in boiling milk and left one hour, you can never tell the dish had been broken and it can afterwards be put in boiling water without the pieces coming apart. The experiment has been tried and proven and many are the broken dishes which were thought to be useless which are now as good as new.

The following is a very truthful remark: "The man who grows up in his native town is regarded as a boy by his elders until he is well started down the declevity of life that ends in a hole. The stranger who comes into a place is more often pushed to the front than the young man who has grown up with the town. This is the reason why so many young men become dsatisfied with their home surroundings and long to cast their lot in other quarters.

DOCTORS CARELESS ABOUT SIGNATURES

TORONTO, Oct. 23.—Complaints are reaching the Ontario License Board from many druggists, stating that doctors are issuing large numbers of prescriptions without attaching more than their initials to them. The law requires the doctor to sign his name in full, and the druggists, while unwilling to refuse liquor to persons needing it, particularly during the present epidemic, are loth to run the risk of prosecution

$4,000,000 FOR TOBACCO.

About a million dollars' worth of Essex and Kent White Burley tobacco was bought on the first day of the fall tobacco market at Leamington. Besides the Burley, there is a crop of Virginia leaf of nearly ten million pounds, which will sell for a total sum around three million dollars. Some forty buyers were present on the opening of the market and 32 cents per pound, barn run, was paid for good stock. The yield this year runs rather over the average, at about thirteen hundred pounds to the acre, and many growers realized up to $500 per acre for their crops. Eleven farmers, with a total of 123 acres of Burley, sold their crops for approximately $50,800.

TO FARMERS

The Government has sent out an appeal to the Canadian people to buy at home. Why? Because when we buy abroad more than we sell we have to pay a premium on the excess, in addition to the price of the goods. This is known as an adverse rate of exchange. We have bought four hundred million dollars' worth more from the United States than we have sold to it. The rate of exchange is 2 per cent. against us. In other words, we are paying 2 per cent. on four hundred millions of dollars, or eight million dollars, which means that if we owe a great deal of money for goods bought we have to pay extra for the privilege. If we keep this up Canada will bleed to death. Please inquire into this matter at once.

THE MOST COMMON AILMENT

Kidney diseases are our most common ailments. When the kidneys fail to remove the inert poisons from the system, nature will attempt to get rid of them in some other way in the form of pimples, boils and other skin diseases which are due to the poisons remaining in the system. Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills will free the system of these poisonous acids, and you should have no hesitation in trying them.

Semi-ready Tailored Clothes

We have anticipated the well-dressed man's idea of ideal fashion in these Semi-ready clothes.

Perfect tailoring and a discriminate taste in cloth selection—with every suit fitted to the try-on stage.

The price is as right as the style—but the appeal is to the man who wants day-to-day satisfaction in what he chooses after he has seen the style and the cloth.

That is the Semi-ready policy—the label in the pocket is based on cost of cloth.

"RETREAT" CALL LEFT GAME OF MARINES TIED IN KNOT

Down from old Charleston way, in South Carolina, comes this interesting story of two teams of marines playing a game of ball under a "time limit." It's a variation from that one about how the Army men had to stop running out a hit to stand at atention, because a band struck up "The Star Spangled Banner," and it's a much better story, too, by the way, though there may be a suspicion that some clever scribe has done a bit of plagarizing. However, here it is:

A handful of the New York "Boots" aided by a few Jerseyites, picked a crack baseball nine among themselves and called it the Giants. Then they went ahead and challenged the whole camp to a game, which would be played on the understanding that the winners partake of an ice cream collation at the losers' expense.

This challenge did not go far before it was accepted by a Southerner who, it was said pitched on a college team. He scoured the company streets, and soon succeeded in scraping together a dismond complement of players.

After negotiations had been completed the managers sent down to the "Y" for the baseball paraphernalia.

The clerk must have had foreknowledge of the contest because in a few minutes he was throwing gloves, bats, balls and bases at those who came to receive them.

That's another good thing about the "Y." There isn't any red tape one has to wade through before he gets served. And the fact that this particular representative of the great recreation organization was not slow, had a whole lot to do with the fray that ensued

FANS FOUR OUT OF TENTS

The game was announced at the manouver grounds, and out of the tents came the fans. From the time the first ball was thrown the game was full of nterest. Both pitchers kept the batters guessing and it looked very much in the fifth inning as if the game would wind up in a tie. In the sixth however, the New Yorkers were successful in scoring a run. But before it was over their opponents had two runs to the good.

With three more innings to go most every one went wild with enthusiasm as they watched each flight of the ball.

It was a two to one game up to the first half of the ninth inning, when a big langy New Yorker banged the goods for three bases and almost was called out while touching third. A single that baffled the shortstop brought the lanky one home, and thus the game again was tied.

The ninth inning was over with neither side ahead. It was getting late. Time would only allow for a few more innings.

When the eleventh inning arrived, things took on a different color. One Jerseyite tired of being cussed, double-timed up to a row of bats, selected the heaviest, spit on his hands, rubbed them in the dirt and strutted up to the home plate business-like. There were two men on the bases. It was up to him to bring them in. If he did—he could almost hear the shouting. Along came two balls, then one strike.

The fourth ball came. The batter lunged forward, swung the club mightily, and crash—off went the ball.

THEN SOMETHING BROKE IN

But then something else happened. The bugles sounded retreat. The flag was coming down. It was an odd predicament. The man on second was on his way home, the man on first was making third, while the New Jerseyite was racing for first. At once all of them stopped No one made an endeavor to get the ball. All the players faced the flag and saluted. The fans stood at salute, it was "colors."

A movie camera could have recorded a sight that would have thrilled thousands of Americans. Imagine 18 ball players in high tension and over a hundred fans full of excitement, instantly stop to honor Old Glory!

The umpire was at a loss who was going to get the ice cream for nothing, so both sides conferred. Finally they decided to call it quits since there are no rules written saying just what to do when the game is stopped in such a manner.

That baseball game will long be remembered by those who were fortunate to see.

Bob Dibble is Now Athletic Instructor

Noted Toronto Sculler Has Been Wounded Twice.

Bob Dibble, of Toronto, has been wounded twice at the front. He went to England with the 180th Sportsmen's Battalion, and was transferred to the 38th in France, being the first casualty from the former battalion, having been injured in the face with shrapnel, and suffered shock from concussion of an exploding shell, on January 21. Lieut. Dibble returned to the trenches, after which he was wounded again. He has now been appointed military athletic instructor in the second military district of Canada. Dibble enlisted early in the war, but he did not get into active service until late in the fall of 1916. In the summer of that year he was stationed in a trainine camp near Toronto, and was able to keep in traininz for rowing races. He was challenged to a race by John Kelly, of Philadelphia, and arrangements were virtually completed when Dibble was ordered to the front.

JIMMY WILDE IS CLEVER BOXER

Welshman Would Give Champion Pete Herman Real Argument.

"I have no hesitation in stating that Jimmy Wilde, British fly-weight bantamweight and feather-weight champion, is one of the mightiest fighting men that ever climbed through the ropes," writes Ed. Shave former sporting editor of the St. Paul News, but who is now in England with the Y.M.C.A

I saw him spot Joe Conn, British champion featherweight, 23 pounds in weight, inch in height and reach, and then win in a walk in 12 rounds.

Although Conn is a tall fairly clever, good, cool defensive boxer, and counters well, he was outclassed by the terrible Welshman. Of the 12 three-minute rounds the fight went Conn did not have the advantage in a single round and was on the defensive nearly all the way.

Every time Conn opened up and tried to fight with Wilde, the diminutive battled, would drive his larger adversary to cover.

Wilde has everything. He is marvel and a freak. He might be compared to the late Fitzsimmons. He carries terrific punching power, hits with either hand and is the fastest hitter I ever saw in a ring.

Dame Nature did a unique thing with Wilde Although she gave him a diminutive stature, 5 ft 3 in. tall, weight 105 pounds, she made up for the shortage in height and lack of weight by giving him the strength of a giant and lightning-like speed.

Wilde carries the punch of a heavyweight and is one of the speediest mortals that ever trod the resin.

In the Conn bout he sent Conn to the canvas 12 times, and the strength of his punches were such that Conn was black and blue, puffed and cut when the bout was finally stopped.

After the bout I was talking to the marvelous Welshman and his manager, Ted Lewis, also a Welshman, hailing from Ponty Pridd, South Wales. I asked Wilde to show me how he handed his first knock-out punch, a right hand to Conn's jaw.

"Lead your left to my stomach," said Wilde. I did so, at the same time throwing up my right to block a right cross. But I was far too slow: Although I stand just six feet, little Wilde snapped his right to my law, and I certainly saw stars though he did not try to hit hard.

The sports of the United Kingdom are wild over the fighting Welshman, and one can find many backers here that he will win three world's titles after the war.

If Wilde meets champion Pete Herman, I am of the impression that Wilde will win. In my estimation, and I have seen all our best fighters and managed many, Wilde will beat anything in the United States up to 120 pounds.

He is eager to visit the States and will come over as soon as he can after the war is over. He is more than anxious to meet the American champion Herman, win a world's title in the bantam class, and then get a chance at Kilbane.

At present Wilde is considered the world's flyweight champion. He wants to try and add the world's bantam and featherweight title to his list.

"Conny" Murphy is Dead of Pneumonia

Played With Peterboro Team Before Canadian League Days.

TORONTO, Oct. 22 — Cornelius James ("Conny") Murphy, well known local ball player, has played his last game. At 3.30 this morning at his home, 104 Tecumseh street, the Wellingtons' good outfilder passed away.

"Conny" was a great favourite with the fans wherever he played. His antics on the coaching line always amused, and as a player he was one of the best outfielders and utility players in the city.

"Conny" first played pro. ball for Peterborough ten years ago, when they won the Midland League, and from there he went with Edmonton when "Dummy" McGuire managed that team. He then joined the Hamilton team in the Canadian League and make a host of friends in that city.

Was in Brilliant Form.

After starting out this year with the Wellingtons in the City League it looked as though he was to have a great year. Against the Toronto Internationals at the Island in his first game he played third base and garnered three hits. The following Monday, when the Wellingtons lined up against the Torontos, Murphy was again at third, and played a great game both in fielding and hitting, and then when the City League opened, "Murph" was going great for three games, and then the "crash." "Conny went to his bed with pneumonia and was reported in bad shape, but the wiry athlete pulled through, and in a couple of weeks was again in uniform with the "Dukes." But the old "pep" was missing. He did not seem to strike his gait.

His Final Game.

In the final game for the Mack Cup he broke loose for the first time and played a great game, and then shortly after complained of not feeling well. On Saturday evening, October 12th, he went home feeling very ill, and on Monday was reported very ill with pneumonia. Since then it was feared he would not survive.

"Conny" was a leather worker by trade at the Langmuir Company, was 30 years of age, and is survived by his parents and three sisters, Mrs. Henry McGowan, Ottawa; Miss Ioline and Miss Reta, who is also critically ill.

Increase in Armaments

Secretary Daniels Wants a Three Year Navy Building Programme.

(Special to The Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23. — War and peace developments to date fail to give definite promise of a limitation of armaments after the war.

This was taken to be one of the meanings behind Secretary Daniel's request for a new three-year navy building programme — ten super-Dreadnoughts, six battle cruisers and 140 smaller craft at an estimated cost of $600,000,000.

While Daniels is a strong advocate of limitation of armaments after the war, he holds that while the war proceeds it is well to look out for the future. He pointed out in asking the new appropriations that they would tend to allay fears that the major ships were being overlooked in the pressing haste for destroyers and other anti-submarine craft.

The new battle craft will be the last word in big ship construction with new ideas in drive, fire control and other phases.

Will Not Alter the Decision

Publicity or Bankruptcy?

Bradstreets statement that 84 per cent of all failures are among non-advertisers is significant.

Intelligent advertising has become absolutely essential to every modern industry—

But what shall the advertiser do in the face of war conditions, when he finds it difficult to get goods to fill his orders?

First of all, remember that the fundamental purpose of advertising is to fix indelibly the trade mark or the trade name in the public mind.

A let-up in that campaign must be fatal to any product.

The American Rolling Mill Company declares its purpose to continue its advertising, although for two and a half years it has been unable to supply the demand for its product.

"We are building," they say, "a permanent business edifice, and some day we would have to spend millions of dollars buying back the business and goodwill of our clients if they are forsaken in this emergency."

Unless advertising is kept up without break the advertiser loses the results of all previous effort.

Here is a warning to the advertizer who neglects the dull season in summer—

When advertisements are fewest is the very time when a message to the public may get the most attention, providing, of course, that the character of the advertising deserves it.

Peterboro Soldier Says Hun is Very Treacherous

Pte. Melville Wilson Was Wounded in the Head—Helmet Saved Him.

Mrs. T. J. Wilson, General Delivery, Peterborough, has received the following interesting letter from her son, Pte. Melville Wilson, who is at present in hospital suffering from wounds in the head. He describes the treachery of a German trooper who pretends he is surrendering, but later shoots a British officer by drawing a pistol from his boots:

France, Oct. 1, 1918.

Dear Mother and Father, — Well, here we are in hospital but I am going out to-morrow to a convalescent camp as my wound is O.K. I don't think I will get back to the battalion before the middle of November. I was stunned for a few minutes by the hit. My steel helmet had a nice hole in it, and I made a nice half circle turn before I knew it, but when I found out what had happened it did not take me long to get shelter in a shell-hole and get dressed. I had to stay in the shell-hole an hour after being dressed as he was still playing his gun around, and once was enough for me. He shelled us pretty heavy with gas when we went out, but I had my mask on and got out without any more mishaps. We sure advanced on him and it was good to see the Germans coming out with their hands up. They are a treacherous lot though. They were sniping the wounded and three stretcher bearers in our company when hit, and I saw with my own eyes one of them come up with his hands above his head, and just as he passed an officer of ours he about-turned and shot him through the head. He pulled his gun out of this world with a bayonet out of the world with a bayonet through his body. I guess this is all for now, so I will close with best regards to you all.

Your loving son,

MEL.

OFFICERS MAY DANCE

(By United Press.)

LONDON, Oct. 3. (By Mail.)—Sir Francis Lloyd, general officer commanding the London district, graciously though tardily has lifted the ban on dancing for officers.

The order prohibiting dancing was issued originally with a view to protecting the young officers home on leave from those pitfalls which abound in certain parts of London. Under camouflage of "dancing" dens of vice and infamy are conducted by those who are out to make a "good thing" of the young men's spending propensities.

However, the military authorities cannot keep thousands of young officers in leading strings while they are on leave, and in place of the public dance there sprang up the entertainment known as the "private" dance. After careful inquiry and painstaking efforts to ascertain truth Sir Francis found that worse went on behind closed doors than could possibly take place in public rooms.

So the order is rescinded. Officers on leave may dance in public places and in clubs.

Many of the young officers declare themselves disappointed at the removal of the ban. "Half the fun is gone", they grumble. The fear of being raided by the military police gave the pastime the necessary tang of adventure—but now that they may dance they don't particularly want to!

The "flapper" is mightily pleased about it though.

There was no fun in going to dances where men were conspicuous by their absence, but now she will be able to go to dances without having the chagrin of seeing her partner "grabbed" before the evening is half through.

NEVER RECEIVED AN OFFER OF OFFICES FROM THE COUNTY, MR. HATTON DECLARED TO-DAY

Council Officials, on the Other Hand, Stated That No Request Had Been Received From the Crown Attorney Since the Court House Was Burned—East Side Rooms Were Prepared for Officials.

Crown Attorney Hatton's case against the County of Peterborough for $1600 office rental occasioned by the defendant's alleged failure to provide him with adequate accommodation at the Court House since his appointment ,and his further demand that such quarters be furnished him in the future, opened before Hon. Mr. Justice Latchford at the Assizes yesterday afternoon. Mr. E. D. Armour, K.C. with Messrs. Peck, Kerr & McElderry, represented the defendants, and Mr. Daniel O'Connell was solicitor for the plaintiff.

In his evidence, Crown Attorney Hatton told of his efforts to secure the quarters he considered adequate and suitable.

"After my appointment I spoke to members of the County Council from time to time asking for better accommodation and furnishing," Mr. Hatton said.

"Did you see the County Clerk about it?" Mr. O'Connell asked.

I did. Mr. Elliott is County Clerk and Treasurer.

What response did you meet with from these requests.

Nothing definite. Mr. Elliott said he would bring the matter to the attention of the County Council.

Was any room every offered you as the result of your petitions?

Never.

On March 10th, 1916, Mr. Hatton wrote the County Clerk asking for proper offices with modern fittings, or that the county make allowance for rental for the three years then closing and to provide for it in future.

Mr. O'Connell— After the fire, did the Council provide you with quarters?

Mr. Hatton—No room or accommodation was ever provided for me by the County Council.

Mr. Hatton told of having purchased certain furniture needed by him as Crown Attorney. He submitted the account to the Council for payment, but it was ignored.

Mr. O'Connell— Then you caused a letter to be written on May 9th, 1918, to the County Council before this action was instituted.

This letter was read, reviewing Mr Hatton's requests and giving notice of the contemplated action.

A minute from the Council's reports showed that no action was taken with this letter at the June session when it was formally presented for consideration.

Storeroom Suggested.

Mr. Hatton, explaining an offer that had been made to him of a room on the third floor of the Court House, said that County Clerk Elliott had suggested it one afternoon, but Mr. Hatton thought he was joking. It was an old storeroom, the simple mention of which was regarded as a pleasantry.

Needs Four Rooms.

Referring to the office accommodation required for the performance of his duties as Crown Attorney and Clerk of the Peace, and his private practice besides, Mr. Hatton stated that he had three rooms in the offices at the corner of Hunter and George streets and actually needed a fourth room for the proper attention to his work.

To Mr. O'Connell, he explained why the room next to the library in the Court House was inadequate, also the room on the north-east side, which he stated was not commodious enough. stared blankly upon a stone wall and never received the sunlight.

Mr. Hatton recalled a conference which a committee from the Law Association of which he was a delegate, held with the Building committee of the Council. It was for the purpose of trying to obtain better accommodation in the restored building for the County officials, including the Judge, Sheriff, Clerk, Crown Attorney, Magistrate and others. This was a specific application that included the Crown Attorney's request.

Mr. E. D. Armour, cross-examining the plaintiff, asked why he had rendered a bill to the county for $200 a year rental of his offices down town, whereas he sublet one room to Ald. W. H. Taylor for $120 a year.

"I had overlooked that," Mr. Hatton replied. "When I discovered the oversight, in a discussion with Mr. O'Connell, I notified the Council."

The plaintiff declared that he used Mr. Taylor's office practically all the time. It represented the third room of Mr. Hatton's suite.

Mr. Armour—Did you know that in 1916, the Council passed a minute to equip a room for you?

Mr. Hatton—No.

Witness said he would not have accepted the room annexed to the library if he had known it.

Mr. Armour—Did you ever put in a written requisition for furnishings?

No.

You knew the Council would supply the items thus requisitioned?

They might if they saw fit.

How do you know that if, as you say, you never made the requisition?

A discussion of an account rendered by Mr. Hatton against the County showed that an item for a typewriter had been disallowed, but the price of a typewriter chair was pressed on the ground that it was a piece of furniture and was not named in the statute as was the typewriter.

Reverting to the question of rooms, Mr. Hatton stated that his objection to the north-east room was not simply the high jail wall that shut out the view, the accommodation was inadequate. Two adjoining rooms might be linked up satisfactorily to form a suite, but there remained the dissatisfactory condition of obstruction by the jail, which shut out the sunlight.

Mr. O'Connell, re-examining the plaintiff, brought out the fact that he did not make requisition for stationary and similar supplies, but simply forwarded his accounts for these materials. Hence the method of requisition was the customary procedure.

Mr. J. E. Farewell, Crown Attorney for Ontario County, was called yesterday afternoon, and described the ample accommodation provided for him. He is also County Clerk.

This morning the County opened its defence by calling Mr. E. M. Elliott, clerk and treasurer, Warden Anderson, and other officials. It was shown that a request had been received from Mr. Hatton in 1916, but the room suggested was unacceptable.

A room on the ground floor was then proposed, but before anything definite was arrived at the Court House was partially destroyed by fire. Since then, Mr. Elliott said, no communication had come from Mr. Hatton respecting quarters.

Warden Anderson.

To Mr. O'Connell, Warden Anderson stated that in the visit to six Court Houses in western Ontario the council's committee had not paid special attention to the accommodation for Crown Attorneys. The committee was reconsidering quarters for all the county officials. In four of the cities the offices for the Crown Attorneys were in the Court Houses, and were in connected suites. In Brantford these rooms were at the rear of the Court House, Woodstock at the front, Stratford had an end and rear view.

Mr. O"Connell—Do you remember the meeting of the Council and the Law Association?

Yes.

Did he make an appeal for accommodation for the Crown Attorney and Clerk of the Peace?

No, not that I remember.

You received a copy of the paper with his letter dealing with the rebuilding of the Court House?

Yes. I don't know where it came from. Our papers come regularly.

Mr. Anderson said he didn't pay much attention to the newspaper article.

Would you stay in a room that was poorly lighted all day with the view shut off by a high wall?

I could do it.

Would it be desirable for a professional man?

It might not be. We farmers often have to put up with conditions we don't like.

Warden Anderson stated that he would not consider any rearrangement of the Court House that would cramp the quarters of the Clerk and Treasurer.

Ex-Warden Brown.

Reeve Max Brown of Asphodel corroborated the evidence of Warden Anderson. He stated that the Council had not received a request from Mr. Hatton, and added that the Council was not disposed to refuse anything reasonable he had asked.

Mr. Brown admitted that he was not in a position to know what the Crown Attorney ought to have.

"Why did you undertake to select a room for him, then?" Mr. O'Connell asked.

The ex-Warden recalled the Council's offer of the northwest corner room upstairs which Mr. Hatton told him he would not accept, after a visit to this room.

"He said it was a junk room," Mr. Brown quoted.

"So it was, wasn't it?" Mr. O'Connell asked.

Mr. Brown recalled that it was full of furniture, which might have been interred there in disuse.

Mr. Brown affirmed Mr. O'Connell's suggestion that the council evidently intended to distribute the three best rooms on the ground floor between Mr. Hatton, Mr. Lees and Mr. Langley.

Ex-Reeve Fred McKee.

Ex-Reeve Fred McKee of Smith, said that up to the end of 1917 ,the Council had not received a request from Mr. Hatton for accommodation.

Mr. O'Connell pressed Mr. McKee for his opinion of what the duties of the Crown Attorney and the Clerk of the Peace were.

He replied that certain facts and records would have to be kept on file.

You don't know how many filings he has to make during a year?

No; but I think he had plenty of space.

How do you decide that when you don't know what filing he has to make?

Mr. Hatton Re-Called.

Mr. Hatton being recalled said he had no recollection of the meeting and conversation with Mr. Brown. He reiterated that he had never received an offer of any rooms from the Council, and had not told any county official that he would not accept any room.

CANADA FARMERS' PUBLISHING SYNDICATE

"Rural Canada," the well-known farm home monthly, formerly owned by the Continental Publishing Company, Limited, Toronto, will for its next issue and thereafter be published by the Canada Farmers' Publishing Syndicate of Toronto. Chas. C. Nixon, B.S.A., has severed his connection as Vice-President with the Continental Publishing Company to take over the general managership of the new farmers' syndicate.

The aim of the new syndicate is to organize agriculture for the betterment of Canadian rural conditions, and the uniting of the farming community along advanced educational lines, so that the farmers will take their rightful place in a thorough reconstructive policy for "after-the-war" trade conditions.

Afternoon Tea at the Parsonage

Mrs. Howson Was Presented With Bouquet of Flowers.

NORWOOD, Oct. 23—On Tuesday, Oct. 15th, an afternoon tea was held at the parsonage, under the auspices of the W. M. S. of the Methodist church, in honour of one of their members, Mrs. T. Howson, who is leaving to reside with her daughter, Mrs. Lisle Mills, Sudbury.

Mrs. Howson was presented by the President, Mrs. W. T. Buck, with a beautiful bouquet, in behalf of the members of the Society, and Mrs. E. C. Squire read the address.

The Epidemic In Peterboro is Still Serious

Lid Still on Public Gatherings.

The epidemic of Spanish influenza is still so serious that Dr. C. H. Amys, M.O.H. does not anticipate any immediate hope of amending the law prohibiting public gatherings. No more cases of "Flu" have been reported to the doctor, but he says it is literally all over the town. He has not yet decided about the opening of the churches for Sunday services.

WILL NOT ABANDON SIBERIAN PROJECT

Political and Military Reasons Justify It, Peace or No Peace

OTTAWA, Oct. 22. — Despite the growing evidence of an early peace and the news that the Bolsheviki have been driven out of Siberia, the Government is proceeding with the organization of its expedition to Eastern Russia. The Imperial War Cabinet and war authorities have been consulted and it is understood they advised that the expedition be despatched.

There are two reasons for the decision not to change at present the original plans. One is political and the other military. The political reason is that even if peace is made with Germany at an early date it will be some time before order will be restored in Russia. Great Britain, with her extensive Oriental interests, feels that the Empire should be represented even if by a small force as well as the United States and Japan during the period of reconstruction. It would be unwise not to have a military representation of the Empire in Siberia until order is completely restored.

The second reason is military. It is still far from certain that the war is over. The military authorities both in Great Britain and the United States are making preparations for next year's campaign as if the war was only fairly started. To slacken efforts it is felt would be disastrous. The same is true as to the Siberian and Russian campaigns. While the Bolsheviki are for the present driven out of Siberia, they may, if Germany decides to continue to fight, resume the struggle and cause serious embarrassment to the Allies unless they are well prepared.

Farmers Form New Political Party

CANDIDATES MUST PLEDGE FEALTY TO U.F.O. OR GET OUT.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—Members of the United Farmers of Ontario in session at Adelaide town hall enacted a set of regulations which is regarded as the first step into politics with a farmers' party. The rules drafted, which are soon to go before all divisions of the United Farmers of Ontario, make hard and fast the obligations of candidates and are supposed to prevent any farmer member forsaking his ruralist principles in favor of any of the existing political organizations. Over his head from the day of his nomination hangs his resignation from his Parliamentary seat signed on a form which the executive of the United Farmers is standardizing.

Each candidate must subscribe in writing to the following conditions:

That he will prosecute his candidature without regard to the convenience of other political parties or candidates. That he will advocate the objects and programme and adopt the policy of the U.F.O. That if elected he will sit in opposition and vote with the party on all questions coming within the scope of the principles of the U.F.O.

That he sign a resignation form to be prepared by the executive calling for his immediate resignation should he at any time fail to live up to the foregoing conditions, the said form to be signed before nomination.

MUST WEAR MASKS.

Alberta Makes Anti-Flu Measure Compulsory.

EDMONTON, Oct. 23. — The Alberta Board of Health has passed a regulation compelling all passengers all the trains in the province enforcemasks. Sanitary inspectors are on all the trains in thep rovince enforcing the regulations. Coughing and sneezing without covering the nose and mouth is made punishable. Fifty eight new cases of influenza were reported to-day. Sevety five cases were reported at Youngstown, with several deaths.

The New Better and Safer Way to Wash Your Hair

Dandruff is the primary cause of falling hair. This disagreeable condition of the scalp and hair glands is almost certain to cause temporary or permanent baldness.

Loss of hair may also be ascribed to the use of improper shampoos containing irritating substances, animal oils and alcohol, any of which may produce gradual decay of the hair.

Don't use a stale liquid preparation that contains too much alkali (a harmful irritant). The surest, safest and easiest way is to make your own liquid. Buy a carton of Velnor at any drug store. Dissolve one of the small packets into half glass of fresh water and you will have an abundance of non-injurious liquid that will relieve itching of the scalp, falling hair and dandruff also improve the natural color of the hair. Velnor being in concentrated form never spoils and will keep forever.

Bandit Held Up Toronto Train

Got Away With Twenty Thousand Dollars.

Canadian Press:

TORONTO, Oct. 23.—One lone bandit entered the Toronto-Hamilton Grand Trunk train leaving the Union station at six-twenty this morning and held up the express messengers, G. W. Williamson and W. Wilson, and got off when the train slowed up at Sunnyside, just inside the city limits, with a satchel containing twenty thousand dollars. In High Park, close by, he held up an automobile with a revolver and compelled the occupant to get out and then cleared away with all the loot. There is no clue.

Police were rushed to the scene. In the meantime the citizen, with the assistance of another motorist, chased the highwayman, but the robber outdistanced his pursuer, but he threw some of the money out of car, and it was recovered by the detectives, who brought the packages to the city hall. Just how much has been recovered is not known. Inspector Kennedy declined to give the name of the citizen whose car it was, and also did not care to state where the money was found.

According to Williamson and Wilson the Express messengers, the robber walked into the Express car from the train shortly after it left the Union station, whipped out a gun, and covering the two men, tied them up and then stole the package of money, worth $20,000, and then left the train. The robbery is one of the most daring that has ever been pulled off in Toronto.

Later it was announced that the police had recovered most of the money stolen from express messengers. It was found in pockets of clothing in a rooming house near the scene of the robbery. No arrests have been made yet.

IMPROVEMENT IN INFLUENZA EPIDEMIC

Canadian Press:

TORONTO, Oct. 23. — Reports for Ontario with the exception of Ottawa and surrounding district to-day, show considerable improvement in the influenza epidemic situation. In Toronto a record of deaths which yesterday was somewhat alarming, indicates to-day a much smaller number for the twenty-four hours. On the whole, Health Officials are fairly confident that the disease is passing its peak in most places of the province.

Fined for Not Carrying Papers

TWO ITALIANS APPREHENDED BY THE MILITARY POLICE

Antonio Stingianna, who appeared in police court this morning on the charge of failing to carry necessary military papers, tossed the $5.10 fine across the table to the chief with a disdainful air.

Antonio Minnecola, Stingianna's comrade in misfortune also paid $2 and $3.10 costs to the police court exchequer. Both men were apprehended by the Dominion Police yesterday for failure to carry papers, Birth certificates, passports, etc., were produced this morning. They are Italian subjects and not liable under the M.S.A.

STRANGE INSANITY CURES.

Extraction of Diseased Teeth One of the Means.

TRENTON, N.J., Oct. 22.—Cure of insantity by extracting diseased teeth, removing infected tonsils and clearing the gastro-intestinal tract, was announced here to-day by Dr. Henry A. Cotton, Medical-Director of the New Jersey State Hospital, in a report to the State Department of Charities and Corrections.

The report gives the results of eleven years of experimentation on a number of deranged patients, and states that recoveries are not only speedy under the new treatment, but that sanity has been restored to some who had been in the hospital for as long as nine years.

CONCRETE SHIP ENDS LONG TRIP VIA PANAMA.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23. — The concrete ship Faith, the first of its type built for ocean carrying and hailing from San Francisco, has arrived safely at a Gulf port, according to word received by the agents of her owners here. The vessel after carrying 2,000,000 feet of lumber from California to Chile, took on a load of 4,000 tons of nitrate and came through the Panama Canal.

The Faith, which was "poured," rather than built, stood the sea experience without damage, her agents said, and is ready to sail for another port as soon as her unloading and reloading is finished.

TANK BATTALION'S WORK SAVED THOUSAND CASUALTIES EACH DAY OF WARFARE

LONDON—Thirty-six tanks, one battalion, save at least a thousand casualites every day they are in action.

The British war expert who has made this statement while discussing the present Allied offensive, continued:

"We have used in the fighting to date only a fraction of men the enemy has been accustomed to employ for similar offensives and we have made up the difference largely with tanks Since the ultimate victory will fall to the side with the biggest reserves, the more tanks we have the more assured our victory. Tank makers are as much in this fight as their brothers in France.

"Similarly, the more numerous the tanks, the less risk of their being knocked out. A German anti-tank gunner can deal with one or two perhaps, but he is overwhelmed with dozens.

"It has been commonly thought that a direct hit by a shell means destruction. Not always. A fortnight ago a tank received seven direct hits from a German gun but the tank finished its job and trundled back to its lines.

"Another in the Cambrai region went over a rise directly in front of a German howitzer. The howitzer fired from fifty yards away and a shell tore off part of the tank's side But the tank went on driving right over the howitzer and putting it out of action."

Recently Maj.-Gen. Seeley, deputy minister of munitions, said:

"I speak the literal truth when I say that I, and hundreds of others it has been my privilege to lead would be dead now but for the tanks. They probably saved Amiens. They certainly saved us."

THE DR. HONEYWELL MEETINGS

At a largely attended meeting of the Executive committee of the Evangelistic Campaign, which was held on Friday evening, Oct. 18th, in the George street Methodist church, the following resolution was moved, seconded and unanimously agreed to;

"We, the representatives of the churches, united in special evangelistic work under Dr. Honeywell and party, deeply regret that it has been found necessary for public safety, on account of the epidemic of Spanish influenza, to discontinue the meetings of the campaign. It is our sincere conviction that under normal conditions the meetings would have been a great success, both in the deepening of the spiritual life of our churches and in the salvation of the lost.

"Dr. Honeywell and his party brought with them a spirit of enthusiasm and consecration which was contagious.

"Dr. Honeywell came to us as an accredited evangelist who had been greatly blessed in his work in the United States. It was soon evident that God had called and equipped him for this special work. During the short time he was with us he impressed us with his earnestness, sincerity and reverence for holy things. Passing by the non-essentials, the trifling episodes in church history that have divided us, the symbols upon which we do not agree, he exalted the great essentials of Christianity, and lifted us into the realm where unity and love reign. He exalted Jesus Christ as the Saviour of men, as the secret of peace, growth, manhood and influence. Had he been permitted to continue his evangelism amongst us, we are confident a great work of grace would have been wrought in this city. As the result of the few meetings he was permitted to hold, we hope and believe that the lives of many men and women will quietly and secretly be different, and that the pastors of the churches will discover many who will be ready to declare their faith in Jesus Christ and join His church.

"Our prayers follow Dr. Honeywell in his future work, and we believe that God will give him a large place amongst the evangelists of this continent.

"The work of Dr. Honeywell's assistants also was much appreciated.

"Mr. and Mrs. Dixon are lovers of music, and being artists in their line, their work was well done. Through the melody of song they presented the gospel in such a way as to appeal to the imagination and emotion of the people, and thus win them for Christ.

"Mrs. Russell's work amongst the women and business girls was of a high order. Her Bible readings gave to those who were privileged to attend them, a new vision of truth and life.

"Our best wishes go with these devoted Christain workers, and we pray the Lord that He may bless them and keen them, and richly reward them in their labors of love."

Signed on behalf of the Executive committee,

A. B. Cunningham, Secretary.
A. J. Thomas, Chairman.

Easy to Make This Pine Cough Remedy

Thousands of families swear by its prompt results. Inexpensive, and saves about $2.

You know that pine is used in nearly all prescriptions and remedies for coughs. The reason is that pine contains several peculiar elements that have a remarkable effect in soothing and healing the membranes of the throat and chest.

Pine cough syrups are combinations of pine and syrup. The "syrup" part is usually plain sugar syrup.

To make the best pine cough remedy that money can buy, put 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) in a 16-oz bottle, and fill up with homemade sugar syrup. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you make 16 ounces—more than you can buy ready-made for $2.50. It is pure, good and very pleasant—children like it.

You can feel this take hold of a cough or cold in a way that means business. The cough may be dry, hoarse and tight, or may be persistently loose from the formation of phlegm. The cause is the same—inflamed membranes—and this Pine and Syrup combination will stop it usually in 24 hours or less. Splendid, too, for bronchial asthma, hoarseness and ordinary throat ailments.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and is famous the world over for its prompt effect upon coughs.

Beware of substitutes. Ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

CHEESE TOUCHED A NEW HIGH PRICE THIS MORNING

Lindsay Buyer Took the Entire Peterboro Offering.

At the Cheese Board this morning the highest price ever paid in Peterborough, and probably in Canada, was paid by Mr. Wm. Flavelle, Lindsay who bought up the board of 1,185 boxes at 24 7-8c.

Bidding Brisk.

Bidding was very brisk amongst a number of men, but as the 24 1-2 mark was reached Mr. Gillespie dropped out and left it to Mr. Flavelle, of Lindsay and Mr. H. R. Free, of Coldsprings.

The reason stated for the high price is that it is for local market and they don't care what they pay when it is for home consumption.

THE BRITISH TROOPS ARE REPORTED IN VALENCIENNES

Haig's Men Advanced a Mile on a Front of From Five to Six Miles.

ENEMY AIR RAID

PARIS, Oct. 23.—The British are in Valenciennes it was learned to-day. Field Marshal Haig opened a new attack this morning between Le-Cateau and Solesmes. The British advanced a mile on a front of from five to six miles, according to despatches from the battle front.

Recaptured.

(By Fred S. Ferguson.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, Oct. 23.—Brieulles has been recaptured, the important defence point on the Meuse, south of Dunv, was entered by American patrols to-day, after the Germans had evacuated, the enemy following their withdrawal from the village began shelling it vigorously.

Fired On Refugees.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Oct. 23.—Burning the Anglo-American three-days' battle in the Le-Cateau region a thousand civilians from St. Souplet were driven by the Germans into Lahaied-Mennerese which was then in no-Man's land.

For two days the children and aged men and women tried to find shelter in the tiny village from the shells of both the Germans and the Americans. The latter were not aware of their presence until the advancing Yanks cautiously inspected the village to find the meaning of a white flag on the church steeple.

Meanwhile, fifteen of the poor refugees had been killed.

German Air Raid.

(Special to The Examiner.)

PARIS, Oct. 23.—A German air raid in the largest force since the Americans assumed the offensive, was made last night in the vicinity of Mont Faucon, Clermont, Ligny and Barecourt. The American hospital in Barecourt was bombed, while explosives were dropped on the front and rear areas in the other places.

Shortage of Help in Peterboro Says Health Officer

Not Enough Volunteers to Form a Class—A Case in Point.

The need of voluntary help to nurse Spanish influenza is extremely pressing and the six young ladies who have registered so far at the City Hall have all been placed. The stories told at the City Hall of sickness show that there is a shortage of help Last night after the six registrants had been placed the City Clerk received an urgent call from the south end and upon investigation found that father and mother and four small children were all sick with on young woman to wait upon them. Other calls told of a whole family laid up with no one to nurse them, two families with one person going between the two houses, looking after both families etc. Dr. C. H. Amys, M.O.H., hoped that there would be enough volunteers to form a class in the city but as yet the enlistment has been very slow. Mrs. Fraelick 176 Edinburgh St and Miss Alford are the two additional volunteers who have reported since yesterday.

MILLBROOK, Oct. 23.—An automobile from Peterborough met with an accident last evening while climbing a steep grade near Ida post office. The car backed down the hill a short distance and landed up in the ditch, The occupants were Mr. and Mrs. J. Stewart, Mrs. Gilgour and Miss Margaret Kidd, of Peterborough. The latter sustained a scalp wound. Dr. H. A. Turner, of Millbrook, was summoned and rendered medical attention.

SWORD FOR KING ALBERT.

Citizens of Brussels Ready For His Coming.

PARIS, Oct. 21.—During the earliest days of the German occupation of Brussels in 1914 a project was formed to present to King Albert a sword of honour upon his return to the city. The model was made and the artist who designed it carried it through the barrier into Holland, and from there came to Paris.

The sword has been made here The hilt is of gold and platinum set with precious stones. It represents the Belgian lion overcoming the Teuton eagle. It will be sent to Brussels and will be there in time for the King's entry into the city. The names of the Brussels committee in charge of the project will be kept secret until the Germans have retired from the country.

POINCARE VISITED LILLE YESTERDAY

Alsace and Lorraine Must be Returned to France, Says President.

PARIS, Oct. 23.—President Poincare visited Lille yesterday and received an enthusiastic ovation. In reply to an address of welcome, the President said that, "The hour of defeat for the enemy will strike soon." The party then went to Roubaix. During an address there M. Poincare said that no peace was possible without the return of Alsace and Lorraine to France. At Douai the President was met by the British Prince of Wales.

FLOUR FIRM PUNISHED.

New York Dealers Made an Unreasonable Profit.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23. — Lang & Co., flour dealers, members of the Produce Exchange, were yesterday suspended from transacting business for thirty days by the Federal Food Board for failing to regard the ruling of the United States Food Administration that any margin of profit on flour above 75c a barrel would be considered an unreasonable profit. The firm is alleged to have taken "an average difference between cost and selling price of $1.04 per barrel." The Board it is said, refused to accept the firm's plea of ignorance.

Items of Interest From Hastings

HASTINGS, Oct. 23.—An interesting social event took place on Wednesday evening (16th) at the home of Mrs. N. Beavis, the occasion being the marriage of her only daughter, Bertha Mae, to Lloyd W., eldest son of Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Hess, town. The ceremony, which was performed by Rev. Isaac Snell, was witnessed by only the immediate relatives of the contracting parties. At the close of the ceremony, customary congratulations were extended, after which the guests repaired to the dining room, where a wedding lunch was served and much enjoyed. The gifts were varied and useful, testifying in some degree to the esteem in which the young couple were held. The Epworth League of the Methodist church, of which the young people were active members, presented them with a chair, in recognition of service rendered. Their many friends extend congratulations and join in wishing them a long and happy wedded life.

Obituary.

There passed away on Friday morning at the home of her sister, Mrs. John Oliver, of Percy, Mrs. Fred Brown (nee Annie Stinson) at the age of 28 years. Deceased had been ailing for some time with a form of heart trouble. The funeral was held on Monday afternoon to Trent Valley cemetery and was largely attended.

Schools Closed.

The schools are closed owing to the great amount of sickness prevalent. Some families have three or four cases, with no one to care for them.

The members of the I.O.D.E. met in their rooms on Wednesday to pack the comfort boxes for the boys overseas.

Mr. Tom Learmouth, of Ottawa, was the guest of his mother, Mrs. T. Learmouth, recently.

Mrs. Peterson of Warkworth, visited friends in town during the week.

The sad intelligence reached here during the week of the death while on active service of Pte. Albert Peters, who has only been at the front for a few months.

The use of bread-and-butter plates is economical, because every bit of unused butter can be saved this way.

President Wilson Replies To Last German Note

There Will be No Further Peace Negotiations Without Surrender—Heavy Fighting on the British Front.

THURSDAY MORNING BULLETINS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—President Wilson sent his last note to Germany last night, in which he says there will be no further peace negotiations without surrender. He will transmit all correspondence to the Allied Governments and if they care to accept the proposals, then the military advisers will draw up an armistice.

Women to Sit in Commons.

LONDON, Oct. 24.— The House of Commons adopted a resolution by a majority of 249, permitting women to sit in the House of Parliament.

ROME, Oct. 23.—Italian naval aviators have bombarded an enemy submarine from a low altitude and believe they sank the U boat.

Poppies and Battlefields.

Apparently there is a strange relation existing between battlefields and wild flowers. Macaulay tells how after the battle of Landen, in the Netherlands, in 1693, between the French army and the British under King William III., where more than 20,000 men were left unburied on the field, the soil broke forth the following year into millions upon millions of scarlet poppies, covering the entire battlefield as if with a vast sheet of rich blood.

An identically similar occurrence is reported to have taken place 120 years later in the same region, when in the summer of the year following the victory of Waterloo the entire battlefield was ablaze with scarlet poppies.

There is the Mending to Do

WHEREVER there are children there is plenty of mending to do, and what mother does not dread the mending of clothes and stockings ?

It may seem easy work, but there is no more severe strain on the eyes, and eye-strain is nerve-strain.

Unfortunately, it is usually necessary for the busy mother to leave the mending until some quiet hour when the children have been got off to bed. This necessitates working by artificial light, with unusual straining of the eyes..

It is this straining of the eyes which makes one feel so tired after mending, sewing, shopping or doing fancy work.

When you think of how constantly the eyes are employed, and of the continual changing of the focus to suit the distance of the object viewed, you may not be surprised to know that the optic nerve consumes an enormous amount of nervous energy.

For this reason straining of the eyes brings on fatigue, and often leads to nervous breakdown.

There is no magical way by which exhausted nerves can be restored.

It takes time and patience in order that the depleted nerve cells may be nourished back to health and vigor, but you may be sure of satisfactory results if you use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food regularly.

We know that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is composed of the vital substances which go to the upbuilding of the nervous system. We have the utmost confidence in its curative properties, because we have seen it tested in so many thousands of cases. But how are we going to prove this to you unless you try it ? You are the one to be benefited, so it remains for you to make the test.

Try it when you feel tired out and discouraged. Try it for sleeplessness and irritability. Try it for nervous headache and indigestion. It is not a mere relief, and for this reason you must persevere in its use until the lost vigor is restored to the nerves. The fact that the results are both thorough and lasting will encourage you to continue the use of this food cure until you feel strong and well.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.75, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto. The portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., are on every box of the genuine.

ROYAL YEAST

Has been Canada's favorite yeast for over a quarter of a century. Bread baked with Royal Yeast will keep fresh and moist longer than that made with any other, so that a full week's supply can safely be made at one baking, and the last loaf will be just as good as the first.

Memorial Service Delivered in Gilmour Baptist Church

On Saturday last a memorial service was held in Gilmour Baptist church. Reference was made to the death of Miss Violet May Sanderson. The following sermon was delivered by the pastor, the Rev. John Galt

"She Hath Done What She Could" Mark XIV.

During the past four years, the war with its vast interests and still more vast issues, has claimed, and rightly claimed, our constant attention. In all our churches the honor rolls containing the names of our brave boys who "heard the call and answered:" who valiently and readily placed themselves, their fortune, their limb, their life, between us, and between our children and the greatest danger that ever threatened the world, have been the centre of our deepest interest and admiration. Our prayers on week-day and Sunday have been for them; that the great God, our Father would keep them, and bless them, and recompense them for their noble self-surrender. From time to time our hearts have been lifted up in adoration of praise for that it has pleased God to preserve our boys so that to-day not one is missing. Once again we would acknowledge our debt to God and to them, and pray that we may be made worthy of so much of the Grace of God and the sacrifice of our young men.

A NOBLE ARMY

The outstanding events of recent days remind us, however, that there are others besides the noble boys who have gone overseas to block the way of the destroyer; who for our sakes have heard the call and answered; and that not for a campaign, or for the duration of the war, that cannot be indefinitely continued; but for life. A noble army of men and women, who have devoted themselves to the task of fighting disease and death in every place, and at all times pledged to be ready to respond to the call of suffering by night or by day; ready to face all weather conditions and every hardship with a cheerfulness at which we would be compelled to marvel were it not so splendidly common among us. From end to end of the land we are blessed in having a splendidly trained and fully equipped army of doctors and nurses, the value of whose services is so great that it would simply be an impertinence to even suggest that it might be estimated. Only those who have endured the agony of seeing loved ones suffer and pine before their eyes till hope seemed all gone, can even imagine what it is worth to see the man who has fought death in a thousand forms come to the bedside, and with skill and courage, rare in other professions, to take charge of the campaign against illness and death. It is not without reason that society has for generations accepted the "Noble Profession" as a true description. Possibly more doctors have been true, even to death, to the high ideals of the profession than it is possible for any of us to believe, but assuredly the Judge of all the earth "will do right" and that day will declare it. And what shall we say of the sisterhood of mercy, of the women who have given themselves to the lifelong campaign of care and pity? Not to conduct the campaign, but to fight it its battles, To live and to work day by day, year in and year out in the presence of suffering and loathsomeness; to lift her woman's hand to push death back inch by inch; to dispute her claim to the very last; to be calm when all others are beside themselves. To be beaten often, but still to pass on to another conflict with the grim enemy, the hireling of sin, and the last enemy that shall be destroyed by the Prince of Life who has already given pledge of the coming glorious victory. What shall we say of these? When we think of them we surely feel that a voice might say to us "Cast off thy shoes from off thy feet, for the place on which thou standeth is holy ground." Do we not feel to-day that this church might well have another honor roll on the other side of the pulpit, also to be embellished with the legend: "They heard the call and answered" and bearing the names of those who, wherever they may be, and on whatever church roll their names appear, are still our people, and always will be. There are times when delicate restraints are to be put out of the way, and such a time is the present, so I will mention the honored names of those of ours to whom homage is due, for that they are engaged in the divinely accredited ministry of healing: Dr. Scott of Peterboro; Dr. Mann of Toronto; Dr. Mann of Peterboro; Sister Martha Mann, now with us; Sister Mildred Mann of Toronto; Sister Blanche Mann of Baltimore, and last, because most to be honored of them all, Sister Violet Sanderson, who has just sealed her devotion to the high calling of her choice, by laying down her young, strong, hopeful life; and that in no grudging manner, but as nobly and as cheerfully as any soldier engaged in the execution of a orlorn hope. It was my privilege to be of some small service to our sister when she was looking or an entrance to her profession, and at that time I made it my business to point out some of the hardships and difficulties of the calling, not with the wish that she might turn aside, but to secure that she should take up the cross, knowing that it was a cross. As I expected, from past experiences with other cases, anything I said only tended to increase her determination Her face was set like a flint and I felt sure that whatever might come she would not be found wanting in the hour of trial. Nor was she. The testimony of the Lady Superintendent of hospital is to the effect that in all her long experience she never had, may I say in her command, a nurse on whom she could more fully depend to go through with anything she was asked to undertake. It was, however, the prevailing epidemic that fully proved her quality and devotion and which opened our eyes to the fact that we never really knew the bigness of the soul inherent in our sister, who has just fallen on the "Field of Honor." Her last task was that of caring for two all but hopeless cases, given to her because it was known that she would do what she could, and how well she did it! It was both night and day care. It was a call for all the strength of the body and all the devotion of the heart. Her last battle and it was a victory. Like Nelson, she fell in the hour of her triumph. Nelson died, but Britain and liberty lives. Our sister died, but her patients live as tropies of her last and best fought battle.

Nor is this all, our sister died splendidly as a Christian. The enemy death, had no triumph of any kind in her case. When Edith Cavell faced the German firing squad we are told that she refused to be blindfolded, saying that there was nothing that they could do that could make her afraid That was in far off Belgium and it may be that some are not quite sure, that particulars have been truly reported. We are, however, the more able to believe that the stories of the heroic behavior of Edith Cavell are true because one of our own number has just shown us how open-eyed and calm a woman can be in the hour and circumstance of death. Our translated sister knew from the beginning of her last short illness that the call had come and with a calmness past all praise began to set her house in order, giving directions in detail as to her wishes. How deeply she had put her life into the calling of her choice may be partly judged from the request that she should be laid away to await the further call of the Great Master Healer in her uniform. In relation to spiritual things, her mind was clear and her faith strong. She sent for the minister under whose pulpit ministrations she usually sat and once again heard the words whereby we are saved and then just waited for the call to come.

If we weep to-day it is for her loved ones whose sorrow is also ours. We cannot but believe that long ere this the Saviour, in whom alone she trusted, has announced her coming among the white-robed throng and told of all that she did and would have done for his sake and for the sake of suffering humanity.

God has spoken to us again, calling us to judge our lives and our motives, reminding us that the call may come to any one at any time, calling us to live in such a way that when the call does come we, too, shall be ready to answer without fear or hesitation.

Food Board Flashes

A sad little story comes in a letter from France. Of all the dreaful sights of war nothing had touched the Canadian soldier who wrote more than the sight of a poilu with one arm and one leg guiding a plough drawn by a strange team—his wife and an ox.

Yet we think we have to undergo hardships here and we murmur because we have to use substitutes and to eat less sugar.

GRAIN MARKET

With the price fixed on October oats and prohibition as to trading in force, the option market was limited to the November and December options. With persistent reports that the government is in the market for oats the market acted strong, advancing to 1 3-8c to 1 5-8c at the close. The movement of corn is restricted by the scarcity of cars, and there are heavy premiums for the cash article. October corn closed 5c up.

Manitoba wheat—In store, Fort William, nominal (not including 2 1-2c tax); No. 1 northern, $2.24 1-2; No. 2 northern, $2.21 1-2; No. 3 northern, $2.17 1-2; No. 4 wheat, $2.11 1-2.

Manitoba oats—No. 2 C. W., 86 1-4c in store, Fort William; No. 3, 82 1-2c; extra No. 1 feed, 82 1-2c; No. 2 feed, 80 1-2c.

American corn—Not quoted.

Ontario wheat—No. 2 winter, $2.11 to $2.19; No. 3 winter, $2.07 to $2.15; No. 2 spring, $2.06 to $2.14; No. 3 spring, $2.02 to $2.10, f.o.b. shipping points, according to freights.

Ontario oats—No. 2 white, new crop, 75c. to 78c.; No. 3, 74c. to 77c., according to freight outside.

Barley—Malting, new crop, $1.00 to $1.05.

Peas—No. 2 nominal.

Buckwheat—Nominal.

Rye—No. 2, nominal.

Ontario Flour — War quality, $10.75, Toronto-Montreal, $10.75, new bags.

Manitoba flour—War quality, $11.65, old crop, Toronto.

Millfeed—Car lots, delivered Montreal; shorts, $42.25; bran, $37.25; feed flour, not quoted; middlings not quoted.

Hay—Baled, track, Toronto, car lots—No. 2, $22 to $23; No. 2 mixed, $20 to $21.50 per ton; straw, car lots, $9.50 to $10.50.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards — Receipts yesterday were 110 cars, with 1292 cattle, 150 calves, 1472 hogs and 2721 sheep and lambs.

The market continues dull and draggy for the common butcher cattle and for stockers and feeders. For the latter class there seems to be no demand—for the farmers. Among the packers the demand is confined practically to the best butcher steers and heifers of good weight, to good fat cows and canners, and to heavy steers when there are any available. For the rest there is scarcely any demand, and prices go steady in the downward direction.

Calves steady to firm.
Lambs 25c to 50c lower.
Sheep steady.
Hogs steady.

Dandruff Soon Ruins The Hair

Girls—if you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

Ruth Tells Brian She Has Accepted a Position. He Objects.

CHAPTER XX.

Ruth's feet were winged as she returned home. Twenty dollars a week to commence, and a promise of more as soon as she proved her worth! No fears as to being able to satisfy an employer entered her mind. She was no inexperienced girl, going to study the principles of something she knew nothing, but she was to do the thing she loved—the thing she had studied for years, just for the love of the study. Her fingers had itched to handle the beautiful stuffs; to be where they were, would be a delight—would be almost recompense enough, she thought, as she looked around her little home with a feeling very near to disgust.

What would Brian say? Would he be reasonable about it, or would he be disagreeable? Long before he had come home she had determined to go, no matter how much he objected. But she hoped he would look at the thing sensibly.

Her home had never seemed so mean, she never had felt so discontented as she did that afternoon while she waited for Brian to come home. She tried to have the things he liked for dinner. It put him out when his meals were not fairly good.

She noticed at once that Brian was in an unusual good humor. He ran up the stairs whistling.

"I collected that ten dollars to-day Ruth. We'll go to the movies after dinner!" pleased as a child that he had ten dollars, and ready to spend it at once although he had declared they must have cheaper quarters.

Ruth waited until they were nearly through dinner. Then she said:

"Let's stay home, Brian. I want to have a good talk with you."

"My how serious! well fire ahead. I guess you can say all you want to and we can go to the movies too."

"No—" then: "Brian, I have decided to take a position—in fact I have already taken one."

"What? What in the world are you talking about? A position!"

"Yes" her heart thumped so she was sure he must hear it, but she kept her voice steady. "I have taken a position in an interior decorator's shop."

"But—Ruth—why? I don't understand."

"Brian, there is no use pretending! I can't live this way any longer. I hate housework, dish washing, sweeping and dusting. We can't afford a maid; you even claim we can't afford to live here, even when I do all the work. I have had twenty dollars a week offered me with a promise of more doing work I love. Why should I do work I hate for nothing—and do it badly at that? Wait"— as he started to speak. "I shall hire a good woman to do the work, and we will be far more comfortable than we are now, and I, at least, will be happier."

"But I don't understand yet, Ruth. I can take care of you. Why should you humiliate me by taking work outside of your home?"

"Why should you humiliate me by making me, wanting me to do a servant's work when I am capable of earning, even to start with, almost as much as you do?" then, more quietly, "Be sensible and be fair, Brian! Had it not been for aunt's check, given me for work of the same kind I propose to do, you would not have been able to pay your debt."

"That was very different!" Brian got up from the table and paced back and forth, "Very different. To do things for your aunt is the same as doing things for me I won't allow it, Ruth, so you may is well give up the idea."

"No, Brian, I shan't give up the idea. I hoped you would be sensible and see my point of view. But you will, I am sure, later, if not at once. Suppose you had for months, done something that you hated, from which you recoiled with disgust, and then you found a way to earn money at something you enjoyed doing—enough to pay someone else for doing the disagreeable work; wouldn't you do it?"

"That's different. I'm a man. A woman's place is in the home."

"Yes,, Brian, under certain circumstances I agree with you. But not as we are situated. With what I can earn, and what you DO earn, we can keep this flat and hire a woman to do the work. When I am able to earn more—which will be soon—we can perhaps have a more attractive place to live."

"Have you thought what my friends would say?"

"Have you ever thought what MY friends would say, could they see me cleaning and scrubbing?" she retaliated. "Forgive me, Brian," she saw him wince at her words, "but it is no time to mince matters. If I am to be happy you must let me do this, feeling you are not opposed to it, otherwise—"

"You mean you would do it anyway!" he interrupted, his face flushing angrily. "How you must love me, to want to leave me before we have been married six months!"

"It is because I love you and want to keep that love, that I have done it, Brian. Believe it or not. Come, be sensible. It will make life easier for us both; and you won't have any more badly cooked meals."

She talked until long after midnight, but Brian was still unconvinced.

Catarrh Of The Stomach Is Dangerous

"Thousands Have It and Don't Know It," Says Physician. Frequently Mistaken for Indigestion—How To Recognize and Treat.

"Thousands of people suffer more or less constantly from furred, coated tongue, bad breath, sour burning stomach, frequent vomiting, rumbling in stomach, bitter eructations, gas, wind, and stomach acidity, and call it indigestion when in reality their trouble is due to gastric catarrh of the stomach," writes a New York physician.

Catarrh of the stomach is dangerous because the mucous membrane lining of the stomach is thickened and a coating of phlegm covers the surface so that the digestive fluids cannot mix with the food and digest them. This condition soon breeds deadly disease in the fermented unassimilated food. The blood is polluted and carries the infection throughout the body. Gastric ulcers are apt to form and frequently an ulcer is the first sign of a deadly cancer.

In catarrh of the stomach a good and safe treatment is to take before meals a teaspoonful of pure Bisurated Magnesia in half a glass of hot water as hot as you can comfortably drink it. The hot water washes the mucus from the stomach walls and draws the blood to the stomach while the bisurated magnesia is an excellent solvent for mucus and increases the efficiency of the hot water treatment. Moreover the Bisurated Magnesia will serve as a powerful but harmless antacid which will neutralize any excess hydrochloric acid that may be in your stomach and sweeten its food contents. Easy, natural digestion without distress of any kind should soon follow. Bisurated Magnesia is not a laxative is harmless, pleasant and easy to take and can be obtained from any local druggist. Don't confuse Bisurated Magnesia with other forms of magnesia, milks, citrates, etc. but get it in the pure bisurated form (powder or tablets), especially prepared for this purpose.

Love's Mission

By LILLIAN MORSE ATTERBURY

"I am going away for a month Winnie," spoke Sidney Marsh, and his earnest eyes viewed with ardent longing the lovely face of his companion. He had found her seated on a rustic bench in the home garden, her eyes fixed on vacancy, with a suddener far-away expression.

"Oh, I am so sorry!" She spoke quickly, making way for him on the bench beside her. "You know I shall miss my very truest and most cherished friend."

"You are kind to say so," he murmured. Friend! The word struck his heart with a chill.

They had been great chums. All through the royal summer they had paired off at social functions as naturally as would a boy and girl brought up as neighbors.

For the past month, however, Sidney had not seen so much as usual of Winnie. A young man named Alger Ward drove over in his automobile from the next town at least twice a week, and was the guest of Winnie and her family. Then rumors became current that they were engaged.

"Where are you going?" Winnie asked.

"To Springfield. My uncle has some business investments I shall look after. Why!" he exclaimed, as at the announcement made there came to her eyes tears, and both her hands clasped his arm in an appealing way.

"Oh, Sidney! If you are going to the city, won't you try and see Ned?"

"Your brother? Yes, indeed. It has been in my mind all along. Dear old Ned! How is he getting along, Winnie?"

"You must know—you, only, Sidney," almost whispered Winnie. "I am afraid Ned is not doing well. You know father gave him quite a sum to start out right until he got placed. At first Ned wrote every week. Then once a month only. Two weeks ago I received a letter from Ned asking me to send him quite a sum of money. The address he gave me was not the business house where he was at first employed."

"Winnie, don't worry," he said soothingly. "Give me the address you spoke of. I'll find Ned, never fear."

His arm had stolen around her in a protecting way. She named the address. Then there was the buzzing of an automobile at the street. "You have company, Winnie," he said gravely. "Please let me leave through the side path."

She, too, had noticed the newcomer. Her hand clasping Sidney's arm, she drew him into the shade of the denser foliage.

"Oh, first good-by, best of friends," he whispered. Sidney, dear Sidney, kiss me before you go."

His brain was in a whirl as her lips met his. He hurried away in a delirium of emotion.

"I have found him at last!" Sidney Marsh spoke the words, crouching in the corner of a wretched hallway.

It had taken him a full week to discover the whereabouts of his missing friend, and now he was in a den infested by thieves and drug users.

Later he knew that Ned Brooks had become addicted to the use of an insidious drug. Those who administered it harbored him, influencing him to secure more and more money. Sidney watched a dusky Mongolian come from a cellar room carrying some dishes, as if he had been taking a meal to the inmate of an apartment beyond a great iron door. Towards it Sidney glided as the man disappeared. It was slightly ajar. He pulled it open. It slammed to and he was a prisoner, too, for upon a wretched mat, pale, attenuated, under the influence of his customary drug lay the man he sought.

Sidney tried to rouse his friend, but failed. Then he planned to get Ned and himself away from the place before his presence was discovered. The iron door was immovable. Near the ceiling was a window. He leaped to a gas pipe to reach it. He came down with a crash, as his weight parted the pipe, to discover a new appalling menace. The escaping gas was poisoning the air of the room.

Sidney knew that he must work quickly. He picked up some dishes and flung them at the window, smashing out the panes and lessening, through ventilation, the deadly fumes. Then, pulling a table under the window, he lifted Ned in his arms. It cost prodigious effort, but in an hour they were out in the open air of a narrow court.

It took over a week to nurse Ned Brooks back to normal health and reason. Sidney wrote Winnie then. She came to continue the good work for her brother and to reward Sidney with loving gratitude.

"Yes, I must go back next week," Sidney overheard her say to Ned one day. "There is the wedding, you know."

"Then Mr. Ward and your friend, Miss Folsom, are to be married at our house?" observed Ned. "Winnie, dear, what about this royal, glorious friend who has done so much for us, Sidney Marsh? I fancied once you two would make a match of it."

"But he has never asked me," submitted Winnie, with a dreary little sigh.

Sidney Marsh did, the next day. He had his cue and acted upon it, and the result was all that his heart desired.

Aramaic, one of the languages which are used in the Old Testament, was the Semitic dialect spoken by the people north of Canaan when the Israelites took that country. From the days of the Babylonian exile Aramaic was used as the medium of communication between Jews and other Semitic people and gradually supplanted Hebrew even in Palestine, where it became the common language about B. C. 200.

A Woman's Whims

By Augustus Goodrich Sherwin

"The house needs to be shingled and painted. We'll put a new porch in front and it will be as cozy and pretty a nest as any one wants," declared Irving Bortell.

"Oh, Irving! You don't mean to say you are thinking of making this old wreck our home?" exclaimed Minna Reed, pettishly.

Her honest, whole-hearted companion was cut to the quick, but he showed no resentment or disappointment. The old family home he had inherited was the dearest spot on earth to him.

"You think you would rather live in town, Minna?" he asked indulgently.

"Oh, I know I should!" cried Minna. "I've lived among hay fields and loneliness all my life, and you promised I should have what I wanted."

"Don't worry, little one," spoke Irving, with a patient smile. "Town it shall be. I own a whole block of ground on Main street and all you have to do is to plan out the house you want. All I want to boss is the garden," pursued Irving. "I'd like to move that pretty summer house my father built, for it is a cherished memento."

"Oh, Irving! we must have better than that. I just dote on a pergola."

"What's that?" questioned Irving.

"An antique classical structure. It looks so stylish."

"I'd like to move the old cast-iron statue, too—" began Irving.

"A sundial and a crystal globe would be more appropriate for a new, up-to-date mansion," submitted Minna.

Irving sighed inwardly, but nodded assent to the substitutions suggested. It was less than a week before their wedding day. Minna was like a bird set free and pluming its wings for lofty flights. She had been brought up under the supervision of strict parents on a small farm.

"You're spoiling that child," Mrs. Reed had told him, but Irving lightly laughed away the menace indicated.

"After all, it's quite natural that Minna should prefer a home in the town," he reflected. "She loves variety and action; she will soon settle down to more practical issues, and she so enjoys having her own way."

At the end of three days Minna submitted her idea of a house. There were many odd corners to the interior and a good deal of gingerbread work suggested for outside ornamentation. Then she was all engrossed with preparation for the wedding. Irving gave orders to the contractor as to the new house and the happy pair started on a month's honeymoon.

Minna certainly enjoyed the lovely trip, the gayeties of the city, the indolent, luxurious hotel life. They came back to the home town for a day's visit at Minna's old home. They were to spend a few weeks with a married sister of Minna at a little distance. By that time, it was calculated, the new house would be ready for them. Already it was up to the attic story in the rough.

"Why, Irving!" exclaimed Minna as she came in sight of the framework, "You have faced the house away from the town!"

"Why, yes," assented Irving. "You see, there were two possible frontages. This one gives us a porch facing the lovely valley scenery. Why, Minna, we can sit here in the gloaming and see our old place, and even the lights in your home. We get the very sniff of the wild flowers, with all the noise and bustle of the town behind us."

"But I love the noise and bustle of the town," demurred Minna. "Why, my great delight has been to look on houses and people."

"All right, dear," solaced Irving quietly. "We'll see what we can do to fix things."

"Why, Irving!" almost screamed forth the delighted Minna six weeks later, when they returned to Ridgeton, "the house faces the main street!"

"Oh, yes. It was money and trouble, but I had it turned around to please you."

For the first moment probably in her heedless career the young wife realized the vast patience and sacrificing spirit of this king among men. Almost submissively she clung to him, quite overcome and sobbing out her contrition for making him so much trouble.

He would not have it that way, and declared that he wished solely to make her happy. The home was a pleasant one and Minna was glad to settle down after all. Within two months, however, she began to detect flaws even in her apparently ideal environment.

Their nearest neighbor was a purse-proud aristocrat who disdained the humble acquaintanceship of "common farmer folks." A family with mischievous children, two goats and a noisy parrot cooped them in on the other side. A street car line secured a franchise and was a nuisance. The dust was intolerable.

One evening Minna, a good deal subdued, led their stroll past the old Bortell homestead. It had been fixed up prettily and looked inviting with its new coat of paint and other improvements. Minna clung close to her husband's arm.

"Irving, dear," she murmured appealingly, "couldn't we sell the town house without a loss?"

"Why readily," was the prompt reply.

"Then—then—oh, Irving!" burst forth Minna, "do it; I am just longing for—home!"

THAT SON-IN-LAW OF PA'S——Pa'll Do Most Anything to Help Cedric Gain Weight - - By Wellington

On them the Shadow fell

THESE, our little Canadians, born to freedom, to a heritage of happiness, Germany's greed would enslave!

For they were heirs to Canada's boundless wealth—our mines, our forests, our teeming fields—the Hun hungered for these riches of Canada.

In his plans for world power, Canada was not overlooked in the German scheme of plundering the nations.

Doubtless there are to-day in Berlin plans for the apportionment of concessions of Canada's natural resources, plans for the government of Canada, for the policing of our cities, the levying of taxes, for enforced adoption of the German language as was done in Lorraine after 1871, and all the other systems of government by German methods.

And a brutal German soldiery would have enforced those systems by which the people would have been enslaved and every vestige of freedom and independence destroyed.

If Prussian plans had carried the smile would have passed forever from the happy little faces in our homes.

Our boys and girls—heirs to Canada's riches—would have worked as slaves in their own mines, in their forests, their fields and factories.

The fruits of their toil, the wealth of Canada, theirs by right, would have been borne across the seas to fatten the German beast.

While the beast lives, his venom, his gall, his merciless, monstrous ambition threaten our homes.

Canada — young, high-spirited, independent—must stand firm.

Canada must use the wealth the Hun lusts after to crush him to earth.

Canada's strength, the united strength of each and every true Canadian, must raise the shield of protection for the generations to come.

The call will soon come for more of Canada's wealth. It is your money that is needed—every cent that you by cheerful sacrifice and loving self-denial can lend to your country.

PLEA FOR POLITENESS.

Lady Opines That It Is Now a Lost Art.

War is having a bad effect on the temper and manner of the people in countries that have been long engaged. Lady Trowbridge, writing in the London Daily Mail, discusses the situation.

"Why have we all grown so terribly uncivil of late; so much ruder as a nation than we were before the war?" she asks.

"Go where you will, you meet the same curiously hostile demeanor, and you see it on all sides. What can the reason be? Is it the war bread, or the rations, or the coming of the luxury tax? It really is most puzzling.

"It—the particularly aloof manner I speak of—used to be the special prerogative of highly favored individuals like post office young ladies and taxicab drivers; now it is the privilege of all who deal with the public in any fashion whatsoever, and the attitude of the unfortunate public is obliged to be one of grovelling submission — and even then you've wrong, as the humorists say:

"It is an honor now to be allowed to send a telegram or register a letter, and a greater to be taken on at a high rate by the driver of a taxicab ostensibly plying for hire—in reality, a monarch dispensing favors. It is also, apparently a favor to be allowed to buy a ticket at a Tube; and as for the Teutonic methods whereby discipline is maintained inside an omnibus, space is not available for me to describe them, and it is regrettable that the conductorettes who started so well have become imbued with the same spirit.

"Is it not a pity to spoil the austere wonder of this great historic time with snapping and snarling? Will not some influential person found a League of Politeness before it is too late? Let us shut our eyes and fancy that it has come to pass and that some mystic letters — say the L.O.P. — would designate its existence! A badge, of course, to go with it! And the wearers to pledge themselves to make one civil speech a day to someone — out of uniform of course. They might even have a flag day to defray expenses. Can you spare a penny? Just one.

"'Oh, thank you, so much.' * * *

"'Of course I will.'" * * * ! 'Delighted!'

"* * No trouble, I assure you.' * * 'Quite a pleasure'."

"Is it only a beautiful dream, or could such a thing come to pass?"

Not Called "Sultan" In Turkey.

The new Sultan of Turkey, whose Government is causing Berlin so much worry of late, is the fourth of the sons of Abdul Medjid to ascend the throne. The four brothers—Murad V., Abdul Hamid II., Mohammed V., and now Vahid-ed-Din—have succeeded one another in the sovereignty; a circumstance unique in the history of the Ottoman dynasty.

The title of Sultan which western people give to the Turkish monarchs is never used by themselves or their subjects. They are styled officially Padishah, the high-sounding Persian term "Father of Kings," and their ancestral Tartar title Khan is always affixed to their names. The unamiable epithet Hunkiar — Manslayer—is an occasional title. That of Khalif, a purely religious title, is not allowed to them by considerable sections of Islam. The term Sultan is applied only to the sovereign's daughters, and invariable affixed to the name, as Fatimen Sultan. The word Sultana is never heard in Turkey.

As a term of address "Son of a Slave" does not sound complimentary, but it was much used formerly to Ottoman monarchs, and it is literally true. The early Sultans married Christian princesses, but for some centuries they have contracted no regular marriages. Legislation is restricting them to slaves in their matrimonial relations. This is aimed at eliminating family influence and feminine ascendancy. It did not do the latter. The Venetian Safiyeh, the Athenian Vasilike, and the Russian Voxelina are evidence to the contrary. All ruled the land, for good and evil, through their imperial spouses.

Reception to Soldier at Keene

Interesting Programme Was Arranged—Keene News of Interest.

KEENE, Oct. 23.—On Monday evening, at the Town Hall, a reception was given to Sergeant-Major J. G. Moore, upon his return from France, where he has been the past two years. A very pleasing programme was arranged by local talent interspersed with addresses by Colonel Johnston, Rev. McEachern, T. A. Esson, G. Howson and others, following which a presentation was made to Major Moore of a handsome solid gold locket by the people of the community.

Miss Agnes Lumsden returned home on Friday from Lakefield, where she spent the past week with friends.

Reported Wounded.

Official word was received by Mr. and Mrs. Daniel McCarthey on October 15th, that their son, Pte. Joseph McCarthey, driver for the 38th Heavy Battery, had been wounded in action and taken to a clearing station on the 11th of October. A later message was received on Monday of this week that Pte. McCarthey had been admitted to a hospital in France and was dangerously wounded, having gunshot wounds in his head, neck, arm and leg, on the left side. Pte. McCarthey was a former Keene boy, being born and raised here, and was well and favourably known. His many friends will regret to hear of his being wounded.

Services Postponed.

The anniversary services of Bethel Church was postponed last Sabbath owing to Rev. Honey, who had been attending conference at Hamilton, being down sick at Greenwood, where his family were visiting friends, all being ill with the influenza.

Miss Katie Skinner is home from Kingston, where she was attending Queen's University.

Miss Mabel Edwards, of Ottawa, is visiting at the home of her grandmother, Mrs. William Nelson.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Thompson on Monday, October 14th.

Messrs. George McIntyre and William Fletcher motored to Peterborough Thursday evening and spent the evening with friends.

Mr. and Mrs. John Moore spent a few days the past week with Peterborough friends.

The farmers of the community have organized a farmers' club and will hold their first meeting in the Town Hall on Thursday evening of this week.

A son was born at Nicholls Hospital, Peterborough, on Friday, October 18, to Mr. and Mrs. Roland Booth, of Minnesota. Mrs. Booth was formerly Miss Katie McFarlane, daughter of Mr. Duncan McFarlane, of the village.

Miss Lillian Moore, who is attending High School at Norwood, is home on account of the schools being closed owing to the influenza epidemic.

Mr. Andrew Lumsden returned home on Wednesday from Lindsay, where he spent the past week with friends.

The Keene Public School is closed until Monday, October 28, owing to so much sickness in the community.

Mr. Michael McCarthey, who has been quite sick for the past month, we are pleased to report able to be out again. He is visiting Keene friends this week.

OPERATION FOR APPENDICITIS.

Mrs. J. A. Ballantyne, Sturgeon Falls, Ont., writes: "My husband was treated for appendicitis and the doctors ordered an operation. But he would not consent to an operation and began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Since doing so he has had no need of an operation or even of a doctor as the trouble has completely left him. I cannot find words to speak our gratitude for his cure."

Chilean Won Marathon.

As a result of the recent Olympiad held at Buenos Aires, the Athletic Federation of South America has been formed, with headquarters at Santiago, Chile. The president of the new organization is Leopoldo Falconi and the secretary is Carlos Fanta, both of Santiago. The next Olympiad will be held at Montevideo in April, 1919.

The chief event of the recent Olympiad was the Marathon race in which there were nine entrants from Chile, Uruguay and Argentina. The event, 42,000 metres, was won by Juan Jorquera, a Chilean, in two hours, 23 minutes and 5 3-5 seconds, which is reported as a record. Jorquera is a noted runner and has won many matches in Chile.

On his return from Buenos Aires with the record he was acclaimed throughout the republic and given an ovation equal to that of a national hero.

ALL CHILDREN LOVE "SYRUP OF FIGS" FOR LIVER AND BOWELS

Look at tongue! Move poisons from liver and bowels at once!

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious "fruit laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside" cleansing. Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

Let Canada's Answer to Germany Sound Like 500 Millions

NEW DRIVE SUCCESSFUL

British Have Taken More Than 6,000 Prisoners and Many Guns in New Attack.

OFFICIAL DESPATCHES

(Special to Examiner.)

LONDON, Oct. 24. — The British have taken more than 6,000 prisoners and many guns in their new attack, begun yesterday morning, on the front below Valenciennes.

The British have occupied the Raismes Forest, north of Valenciennes also the villages of Thiers, Haute Rive and Thun. Local fighting is still in progress.

ON THE FRENCH FRONT.

PARIS, Oc. 24. — South east of Le Cateau, French troops have crossed the Sambre Canal, east of Grand Verly. The French have maintained their gains east of the canal in spite of strong counter attacks from the Germans. South of Montcornet, further to the east, the French have increased their gains north of Nizy-Le-Comte. Along the Serre there was lively fighting north of Mesbre Court.

Special to The Examiner:

WITH AMERICAN ARMY, Oct. 24. —American patrols early to-day penetrated deeply into German lines in the region of Grand Pre and north of Verdun. There has been little change in the situation since last night.

LONDON, Oct. 24.—Hard fighting is in progress all along the line in Flanders and France.

CANADIANS ARE NOW CLOSING IN ON THE ENEMY

Sun is Shining To-day for the First Time.

By J. F. B. Livesay, Canadian Press Correspondent.

With the Canadian Forces, Oct. 24. —Our troops which occupied the line of the Scheldt canal immediately north of Valenciennes, have begun closing in on the area contained within the sharp bend the canal makes northwest of Conde. We are now only a few miles from the Belgian boundary. Since we crossed the canal De La Sensenee, south of Douai, many of our troops have marched over 30 miles over almost impassable roads, and in miserable weather.

To-day the sun was shining for the first time in ten days. Despite the bad weather our troops have been consistently cheerful, for in their progress they have witnessed at last the fruits of four years of fighting. They have seen tens of thousands of French people released from slavery and immensely valuable property in the way of coal mines and factories restored to the French nation. Our aim has been to prevent the enemy from getting away at leisure, and we have trod on his heels day by day. Our outposts feeling their way along and driving in his rearguards.

Thus his main body has never been more than four to six hours ahead and we have prevented him wrecking the country in his progress. The villages are intact, although systematically sacked and looted, while the dirt and stench the Hun leaves behind him are indescribable. Everywhere he has blown up the railway and road bridges and left huge craters at the corners of the roads.

The Germans everywhere are offering stubborn resistance. Many German prisoners are being taken.

Turkey Must Surrender or Succumb to Allied Drive on Constantinople

Allied Forces Are in Readiness for a Quick Drive on Turkey—Definite Developments.

THE TERMS

(United Press.)

(By Raymond Clapper.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.— Turkey must surrender unconditionally or succumb to an Allied drive on Constantinople. Turkey's agents in Switzerland are in touch with Allied representatives, according to an authoritive diplomatic service here. Complete surrender is being demanded of the government. Unless this demand is complied with on certain order, Allied forces will move on Constantinople.

Are Prepared.

Greek and Allied troops have prepared themselves for a rapid push across the Dedeagatch-Adrianople line. They are being held in readiness and are amply equipped for a bold fight. The occupation of Constantinople would only be a matter of days it was stated in diplomatic quarters.

"We expect definite developments from these negotiations within a few days," the United Press was told. If the Allies' conditions are not met with shortly we will move toward Constantinople. With the Danube under Allied fire, Turkey's chief means of getting supplies and munitions from Germany is seriously threatened.

Tekfik Pasha is holding out from guarantees that Turkey be permitted independent existence in Asia Minor. The Allies insist that Constantinople and Palestine be severed from the Turkish Empire is also proving a bitter pill for Tewfik to swallow. This apparently reconciled, however, to the loss of Greek islands in the Mediterranean.

Left With Generals.

Allied representatives will accept only terms equal to those imposed on Bulgaria, it is stated. Details of an armistice will be left to Gen. Allenby and General Desperey. The formation of a joint Allied Commission to supervise demobilization in Turkey and to assist in restoring order is being insisted upon in Allied quarters. Pillage and massacre would be likely if disgruntled and hungry Turk soldiers were turned loose upon the country, diplomats say. The Greeks, with the Allies, will continue to make war on the Turk until they can impose a fate like that which came upon Bulgaria, semi-official advices to the Greek Legation here stated.

"The enthusiastic Greek troops are waiting for the order to continue their successful advance to stab the heart of the Turkish Empire," one cable declared. It described the valour of the Greek troops in Macedonia. Testimony from various Allied leaders, lauding the fighting quality of the Greek forces, have been received at the Legation.

GLEANINGS FROM BATTLE FRONTS

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Oct. 24.—The Allies have agreed to terms of an armistice, according to information obtained here to-day.

HAS RESIGNED.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Oct. 24.—The entire ministry of Ukrainia has resigned, according to a wireless despatch received from Berlin.

SEPARATE ARMISTICE.

PARIS, Oct. 24.— According to despatches from Vienna, Hungary will shortly apply to the Entente for a separate armistice and peace, and Austria is so threatened with famine that unconditional capitulation to the Allies is imminent.

ROME, Oct. 24. — The Italians have started another offensive against the Austrians. The French troops in this sector penetrated several important positions and took almost a thousand prisoners.

VOICES DEMAND OF AMERICAN PEOPLE

Canadian Press:

NEW YORK, Oct. 24. — Comment of the United States papers on President Wilson's latest reply to Germany, as so far received, is unanimously commendatory of Wilson's attitude. Typical of all opinion is the following from the New York Herald:

"In his plain notice that Prussianism must surrender, the President accurately and clearly voices the demand of the American people."

Wide Results Are Expected

Enemy Resistance is Stiffening—The New Drive is Progressing.

(United Press.)

(By Lowell Mellett.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Oct. 24.—The new drive between the Scheldt and the Sambre is expected to have wide results, the most important of which will be the complete turning of the Valenciennes line.

On the front from Valenciennes northward to the frontier of Holland German resistance is stiffening. British patrols have managed to push across the Scheldt at several parts. Although the strongest opposition since the enemy's withdrawal began was looked for south of Valenciennes there are no signs so far of any great defensive preparations beyond the slender, new trench and wire systems. The Germans are relying largely upon the strong natural positions behind the canal and the Raismes forest and the flooded area between Douai and Valenciennes.

Advised Surrender.

During the past four days the Germans have withdrawn about three kilometers (two miles) every night, after holding on all day, the British at daybreak occupying the advanced ground and resuming their pressure. An example of the forces preying on the minds of the German troops is found in a letter which a captured private received from his brother in Samburg, written October 21. The letter reiterates five times that peace is certain with in a few days, and urges the soldier to surrender to avoid death in some other way. He surrendered to the Americans near Bazuel.

Comment on Peace Note

Marshal Foch May be the Next to Reply to Germany.

(United Press.)

(By William Philip Simms.)

PARIS, Oct. 24.—Let Marshal Foch and the Allied leaders reply to the Germans.

That sums up the opinion here regarding the latest German note to President Wilson.

Otherwise, the press and the public are curiously divergent. Some consider the note a clumsy, though virtual surrender. Some think that it is a step forward. Others say it is a mere trap, but everybody seems to agree that Germany's situation, both internal and military, is such that a respite is absolutely necessary, and therefore, that the next words to Berlin ought to be from Foch.

"It is a great pity that Marshal Foch has not already been authorized to send the following ultimatum on behalf of the Entente, declares La Liberte: "Acceptance integrally by 'yes' or 'no.' The Temps says: "More than ever Marshal Foch ought to be given the lead."

Pope Deplores the Dissension

(Canadian Press.)

OTTAWA, Oct. 24. — A pastor l letter from Pope Benedict, the fifteenth, dealing with the bilingual question throughout the whole dominion, but particularly in Ontario, has just been made public. It states that the appeal made by French-Canadians that Roman Catholics be appointed for Separate Schools, are just, and that during the first years of tuition, French-Canadian pupils should be granted the use of their own language for certain subjects, notably teaching the Christian doctrine. His Holiness deplores the dissension in the matter, however, and counsels prudence and concord among all Roman Catholics.

NEWSPAPERS OUTSPOKEN

"If Kaiser Must Go Let Him Go at Once," Declares One Paper.

STORMY CONFERENCE

Special to Examiner.)

PARIS, October 24. — Emperor William conferred on Monday with all the members of the government, talking at length with each individual, and then harangued them in a body, says a despatch from Zurich to the Journal. Thus far the German newspapers have printed nothing concerning the Emperor's speech.

The Socialist newspapers, the Zurich despatch continues, are particularly outspoken. The Fraenkischs Tagespost of Nuremburg, Bavaria, says the Emperor must not think the German people are going to continue the war for months to please him. "If the Emperor must go," it adds, "let him go at once."

"A JUST PEACE."

LONDON, Oct. 24. — The exclusion of passenger ships from submarine attacks means the end of unrestricted submarine warfare, declares the Cologne Gazette, commenting on the German reply to President Wilson.

The Cologne Volkszeitung says: "It remains to be seen whether the humiliating peace conditions imposed by the enemy contain the germs of future wars instead of a just peace."

PTE. FRED BARRETT

Fred Barrett, 75 Park street has been officially notified that Pte. Fred Barrett, infantry, was admitted to Royal Herbert Hospital, Woolwich, October 17, with gunshot wounds in left leg.

PTE. A. N. CONLIN.

Mrs. Gertrude Conlin, 587 Sherbrooke street, has received word from Ottawa that her brother-in-law, Pte. Augustus Nicholas Conlin, has been admitted to No. 22 General Hospital, Camiers, on Oct. 13th, suffering from gun-shot wounds in the left buttock. Pte. Conlin left for overseas last spring.

ARMISTICE CONDITIONS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—No armistice except under conditions of surrender. No peace with the Kaiser and his war lords, now or later.

Thus President Wilson has given in advance his own final decision in informing the new spokesman of Germany that he has acceded to their request that he take to the Allies their plea for an armistice and peace negotiations. The President's reply to the latest German note has gone on its way to Berlin.

The British Cabinet met this morning, presumably to discuss President Wilson's reply to Germany.

THE TRAP IN FLANDERS—This map shows how the British and Belgians have trapped a large German force against the Dutch frontier. The dotted area is held by the Allies. President Wilson Hog Ties German Chancellor

The German Note Scribbler Has Been Turned Over to Marshal Foch for Judgment.

UNCONDITIONAL SURRENDER

(By J. W. T. Mason.)

(United Press.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—President Wilson has tied Prince Maximilian hand and foot and turned him over to Marshal Foch for judgment.

The new German Chancellor, put into office by the Kaiser to challenge America to a peace offensive, has been as ignominously defeated by the pen as Von Hindenburg by the sword. Attempting to overmatch President Wilson at note writing has proven a costly failure. The German government now stands revealed before the German people as unable to negotiate a peace that can save any part of Germany's military machine.

An understanding of this fact is absolutely necessary in the part of the German people before a safe peace is possible.

American Answer.

The American answer to Prince Maximilian means the German nation must itself become civilization's hostage for righting the wrong that Germany has done to humanity. This is the basic result of the epistolary exchanges between Berlin and Washington.

The German nation's responsibility for the acts of its autocratics is thus fixed. That is why Germany will not be permitted to enter a peace conference until Marshal Foch and the Allies' naval advisers have imposed conditions that will differ in no respect from unconditional surrender.

The only way the German people can save any part of the wreck of their fortunes is by overthrowing Kaiserism of their own will and power. Up to the present there has been no democratic movement in Germany, because the tenative reforms have been staged by the Kaiser from above and have not been made secure by popular uprisings. Instead of demanding their full democratic prerogatives, the German people are waiting to take as few rights as the Kaiser thinks safe to give them in the interest of saving the Hohenzollern dynasty.

FOURTH DEATH IN ONE FAMILY

STRATFORD, Oct 23.—Several more influenza victims are reported to-day. Industrial plants report a return of some of the employees. May Bishop, ten-year-old daughter of William Bishop, died during the night, making the fourth victim in the family. Other deaths were: Olga Endcox, Arthur E. Aikens, Margt. Burleigh and Mrs. C. E. Powell. Mrs. Powell lost a son on Sunday and three others are quite ill. All are under 14 years.

WAR SUMMARY

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.— The Associated Press this morning issued the following summary:

Crashing into the German offensive system south of Valenciennes, the British are tearing away this barrier to the Allies' pursuit of the retreating enemy. Progress made there during the twelve hours following their attack seems to indicate that the line of the Scheldt, which, further north, has held up the British, French and Belgians, may be broken and outflanked. Just ahead of the British are two very important strategic points, Mons and Maubeuge. It is reported that even now, British heavy guns are almost within range of these two towns, which are the principal German concentration and supply points along the Ardennes front. British forces are fighting in the streets of Valenciennes, having entered it from the west. They do not seem to be making much progress against the stubborn defence of the enemy, however. Further north, toward Ghent, the French and Belgians appear to be stopped, at least for the moment. East of Le Cateau the Americans and British are still fighting their way through the German lines, but they are moving very slowly. East of Argonne, however, American forces have worked their way further towards the enemy trenches and have compelled the Germans to abandon Brieulles, on the west bank of the Meuse and just south of Dun.

United States Press Comment

Can Have No Dealings With the Kaiser.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24. — The New York Herald says: "Germany is not going to be allowed to withdraw her troops in safety from France and Belgium, to be reformed at the German frontier as a wall of safety and to use Prussian loaded dice at peace table."

The World says: "With language plainer and more solemn than was ever before used in communication of this kind, the President repeats his assertion that the Government of Germany which instigated this war is not to be trusted."

The Times say: "The acceptance of these terms of surrender, as the President points out, will be the best concrete evidence of Germany's equivocal assent to principles and conditions of peace he has set forth in his successive addresses. The President uses the plainest of words and leaves no room for doubt anywhere in Germany that the United States can have no dealings with the Hohenzollern save for surrender."

HUNS MUST SURRENDER

Germany Can Have Peace If She Elects to Accept the Allied Terms.

AN OFFICIAL VIEW

(Robt. J. Bender.)

(United Press Service.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24. — Germany must "quit cold" now or fight the war to the bloody finish. She can have peace if she choses to accept the Allied terms, but, in any way the situation is viewed, here, quitting will be a surrender.

That was how the national capital to-day interpreted generally the joint announcement of President Wilson's peace answer to Germany and the official fact that over two million yanks had been embarked to aid in finishing the war by force should Germany elect to fight on. The next move is up to the Allies.

Two Alternatives.

If they are disposed to act on the basis of the President's peace principles the Allied commanders will frame an armistice which would constitute in effect a surrender for Germany. Probably war aims and peace terms will be cleared in a conference soon wherein President Wilson will have a representation. The armistice terms are probably already stated through the Versailles conference and are expected to be announced soon. Germany has two alternatives, the first is that the Kaiser abdicate. If that is done, Germany can be free to accept an armistice, which will make her powerless to fight on, but which does not carry with it the demand "surrender." The second is, according to Wilson, that if the Kaiser and his masters, "the present German government," remain in power, and if the Allies must now or later deal with them, then, "surender" alone can be accepted. "Surrender" would carry with it such terms as to nullify the autocratic power of Germany.

THE RED CROSS.

The response so far to the Red Cross appeal has been gratifying to the committee. Everywhere the canvassers have met with a cordial reception and the subscriptions are generous. The only difficulty in the way of the success of the campaign is the epidemic of influenza raging in the city, which has made it impossible to interview many citizens who in the past have been faithful supporters of the Red Cross, and who can still be counted upon to extend a helping hand. For this reason the campaign will not be terminated in three days as was originally planned, but will be extended in order that every citizen may be given an opportunity to subscribe.

The canvassers report that everywhere the citizens are enthusiastic over the work of the Red Cross and that there is found no spirit of criticism or carping. This is as it should be. As long as the war lasts, and indeed for some time after, the Red Cross is an absolute necessity, and its activities must be supported. Give as they fight and all will be well.

A PATH OF GOLD.

"It is ordained that we shall not reach the blessed era of peace sabe along a path of gold cemented with human blood," so says David Lloyd George, premier of Great Britain. For Canada the path of gold is represented by the Victory Loan. It is along that path that we must proceed to victory, and unless the people of Canada realize that fact, and invest accordingly, the coming of peace must be delayed. The cement—the human blood that Lloyd George speaks of—has been poured out freely by Canada's manhood. Shall it be said of Canada that while her men went forth gallantly, even gladly, to try the great adventure in a far-off land, the people whom they went forth to fight for, proved unworthy of the trust and failed when the acid test was applied? Canada cannot fail. She has made a pledge to her sons fighting far away that must, and will, be redeemed, and next Monday will see the beginning of that fulfilment. The path of gold to victory must be built, and five hundred million dollars of Canadian money are required. There is a personal responsibility for every Canadian in this task. All cannot fight, but nearly every one should be able to save and to invest in Victory Bonds.

Every citizen of Peterboro should decide to fall in line with the local committee and go over the top with the Loan next week. Clinch an honour flag for Peterboro in the first week of the campaign, and then let us see how far we can pass the objective. Every dollar will be needed, so let us invest to the limit.

THE CIVIL SERVANTS' BONUS.

The employees of the Canadian Government number approximately 50,000, not including postmasters. The average salary received by all from the $5,000 to the $500 men and women, as shown by the Civil Service Memorial of October 8th, is $3.60 a day! This is forty cents less than common day-laborer pay in Ontario to-day. For the Government to continue paying such wages to the men who are engaged in the job of running the country, from the heads of great departments like those of agriculture, mining, fisheries, customs, finance, and public works down, without providing a general measure of emergency relief, is unexplainable.

Inaction by the Government, in the face of such a condition of affairs and a soaring cost of living, which makes the situation more acute every day, would be unbelievable if it were not true.

The request for a war bonus of $350, so temperately yet so firmly presented to the government by its employees on the 8th, gives the government an opportunity to prove the sincerity of its expressed belief that Civil Servants should be so treated that they will be proud of their occupation. Since the War Measures Act gives Council power to deal with such cases at once, the people of Canada will see no reason or excuse for any postponement in granting the full measure of so moderate a request until the next session of Parliament.

THE SILENT NAVY.

In the rejoicing over the good news from the Western front, Canadians have allowed to go by unnoticed the anniversary of the greatest naval victory in British annals, that of the Battle of Trafalgar, which fell on Monday last. Nelson's famous signal, "England expects that every man will do his duty," flown at the beginning of the action in which he met his death, but which culminated in glorious victory for the English forces, is still being lived up to in the British navy, and the anniversary of Trafalgar offers an opportunity of paying a just tribute to the men who have kept the seas open. The greater part of the work the navy is doing is necessarily shrouded in mystery, and we will have to wait until the war is over before we will be able to read the full history of what has been done, but every now and then the veil is lifted a little, and an opportunity is given of seeing a little of the navy's work. The recent wreck of the Otranto and the gallantry of Lieut. Craven, destroyer commander, who at great risk of losing his own vessel, saved the lives of nearly six hundred men, was an incident that the public was allowed to hear about. There are hundreds of such dashing exploits, of which nothing is heard about outside of official circles.

The navy and the mercantile marine have had a large share in the success of the allied armies in the field, and will therefore be in a large measure responsible for the ultimate defeat of the Teutonic allies. The mercantile marine has transported troops, food and munitions from all parts of the world to the various scenes of hostilities, while the navy has convoyed these vessels in safety so that the two branches have played a big part in the success of the forces of liberty.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Give as they fight.

The Victory Loan is of national importance—that is why the campaign is going on in spite of the epidemic.

Don't forget that every day the war goes on the Canadian soldiers in France are facing a much more dangerous foe than Spanish influenza. Canada's Victory Loan may help to shorten the war. Invest to the limit.

Every concern in Peterboro should resolve to win a Victory Loan honour roll.

Eastern Ontario led the province last year. That is a good omen for this year's Victory Loan campaign.

VICTORY LOAN NECESSARY IF PEACE COMES OR NO.

Don't let the German peace propaganda interfere with the success of the Victory Loan.

Canada's war expenditure to-day is greater than ever before. There are 75,000 more Canadians overseas than there were a year ago.

They are still going over as fast as Canada can send them.

Even if peace came to-morrow, it would probably take from 12 to 18 months to bring all the Canadians back.

They would have to be kept in the meantime.

Pay and allowances alone cost over $14,000,000 a month.

Transportation expense would probably amount to $15,000,000.

To demobilize the Canadian troops would undoubtedly cost over $250,000,000.

$500,000,000 are needed through the Victory Loan no matter what comes or goes.

Canadian industry and the Army both need strong financial support.

RADIUM SUBSTITUTE FOUND

MESOTHORIUM ADAPTABLE FOR MANY USES OF RARE ELEMENT

MILWAUKEE.— Mesothorium, a substitute for radium, the world supply of which is only about three ounces of radium element, has been found, the convention of the American Institute of Mining Engineers learned from Dr. Richard B Moore of the United States Bureau of Mines.

The radium substitute, Dr. Moore said, could be used efficiently as luminous paint on airplane dials, compasses and gunsights.

The convention closed after discussing many conservation and production measures.

Judgment Reserved in Crown Attorney's Case Against County

Judgment was reserved by Mr. Justice Latchford in the case of Crown Attorney Hatton vs. the County of Peterborough.

Reviewing the evidence, Mr. O'Connell stated that when Mr. Hatton was appointed County Crown Attorney in 1914 there was apparently no room available for him. Up to 1912 the room adjoining the Law Library at the Court House was occasionally used by the late R. E. Wood. But at a meeting of the Law Association in that year he moved that the County Council be requested to add this room to the Library. This would have no effect on his successor, who Mr. O'Connel continued, frequently asked the County Clerk and members of the Council for the proper accommodation.

Ex-Reeve McKee said in his evidence that the question had been brought up before the Council in 1915, but no action was taken.

Then in March, 1916, Mr. Hatton wrote the Council that he must demand suitable offices in the Court House. The Council decided to give him the room upstairs, but did not communicate to him their decision. Then in October they changed their minds and chose the room adjoining the library. But again Mr. Hatton was not notified, and the matter went on apparently without action until the fire in December. In the reconstruction of the Court House the duty was still incumbent upon the Council. Mr. O'Connell traced the progress of the affair to the present year and said that as a conclusion Mr. Hatton was entitled to damages and suitable offices in the future. Mr. O'Connell emphasized that according to the statutes Mr. Hatton was not required to make a demand upon the County Council. But as a matter of fact a demand was made. "Even now it is not known what accommodation the Council is prepared to give him," Mr. O'Connell said. "The fact that there are certain rooms now which may be available on the east side can have no bearing for the reason that they were not offered to Mr. Hatton."

In his summary, Mr. Armour said that Mr. Hatton had not shown to the Council that the room known as the Crown Attorney's was unsatisfactory. It had been accepted by the previous officials, and the Council must have believed that Mr. Hatton was satisfied at least until 1916. After that the Council was bound to provide some measure of accommodation. While they decided to equip a room in 1916. Mr. Brown says, Mr. Hatton refused the one the Council intended to give him. They were not then bound to equip it since he would not accept it. Then the fire occurred. Mr. Armour said that in Mr. Hatton's letter he did not notify the Council that he wanted more than one room. There were some inconveniences about the old Court House to which Mr. Hatton should have been prepared to submit. The Council was under no obligation to provide all the modern facilities for the Crown Attorney. If that were so, most of the Court Houses in the country would have to be greatly altered. The Council's letter to Mr. Hatton, asking him what furniture he would require in the general refitting of the Court House indicated that the Council was not overlooking the Crown Attorney.

MILLBROOK PERSONALS

MILLBROOK, Oct. 24.—Dr. S. W. Clark, of Lindsay, spent Sunday in town.

Miss Hazel Jones of Orillia, is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. A. Brown.

The many friends of Mrs. Bentley, Sr., will be pleased to learn that she is improving.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Miller and family left town to reside in Peterborough.

Mrs. Goodfellow and son, of Hamilton, are guests of her brother, Mr. R. T. Adams. Mrs. Goodfellow's husband is Sergt.-Major Goodfellow. He was gassed and wounded in France, and at present he is training men in Hamilton.

Mr. Thos. Armstrong, assistant station agent at Omemee, was home for a couple of days this week.

Miss Bertha Hatherly, teacher at Selwyn, is spending a few weeks at the home of her parents, her school being closed on account of la grippe.

Miss Reta Luxon spent the week end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. Luxon.

Miss Betty Lee, Oshawa, is the guest of her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Lee.

Mr. H. Stinson, Peterborough, spent Sunday with Millbrook friends.

Miss C. Trembeth, Port Hope, is visiting her friend, Miss Eva Gillott.

Miss Emma Francy is spending a few weeks with her mother, Mrs. J. Francy. Miss Francy's school is closed owing to the la grippe epidemic.

Mr. R. W. Clarke, of Weyburn, Sask., was the guest of Mrs. Ferguson and Mrs. S. E. Eakins, over Sunday.

Mrs. G. W. Sayles was in Peterborough Friday calling on friends.

Miss Jessie Fallis, of Toronto, is visiting her mother, Mrs. D. Fallis.

MILLBROOK, Oct. 24.— Mr. G. A. Duncan received the very sad news that his nephew, Mr. Andy Duncan, had died of pneumonia at Brantford. 'Andy,' as he was familiarly known, was a man of sterling qualities, and very highly respected by a host of friends, and his early demise will come as a shock to his acquaintances. His remains were laid to rest in the family plot at Collingwood.

GLOVE OUTPUT RESTRICTED.

Makers Must Eliminate Many Styles and Colours.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—The War Industries Board has announced that manufacturers of light leather gloves and mittens had been instructed, beginning with the 1919 spring season, to eliminate many styles, restrict the number of colours and limit the length of the gloves to 12 1-2 inches.

Each manufacturer is to restrict his output to the following colours in the various classes of leather: All gloves cut from dipped grain leather to be restricted to black, dark tan, gray and khaki; gloves cut from brushed leather to be restricted to black, white, tan and gray; gloves cut from mocha leather to be restricted to gray and beaver; gloves cut from suede or flesher leather to be restricted to gray, beaver and khaki; gloves cut from so-called doeskin or chamois leather to be restricted to white and natural; gloves cut from deerskin to be restricted to gray and khaki.

FIFTEEN MEN ON BAIL

CHARGED WITH BEING MEMBERS OF THE SOCIAL DEMOCRATS

STRATFORD, Oct. 23.—Fifteen men from North Easthope were allowed out on bail in the Police Court yesterday, where they were charged with being members or officers of the Social Democrats. They were Edward Berf, Aaron Cook, Wilson Cook, Edmund, Schmidt, Charles Quehle, George Schoenhals, Wilmot Doering, Sibert Schneider, Theo. Wagner, Fred. Quehle, William Dahlmer, Albert Becker, John Lantz, Gordon Doerr, and Harry Cook. Bail was fixed at $2,000 each except Harry Cook's, $5,000. Wm. Cook was charged with allowing his premises to be used as a meeting place or the organization had been at a standstill since the order in Council was passed. The penalty is not less than one year and not more than five years' imprisonment. They were remanded until Tuesday.

Good Serviceable Silk Frocks $25.00

The war has brought women to think seriously that it is only fitting and proper that whatever they wear be in keeping with the spirit of the times; that a dress should not be elaborate and in a style that can be worn for more than one season. American designers, with a view to this, have produced these practical, wearable silk dresses, and although the arrangements incline to simplicity, you would never believe such youthful dresses could have been developed along these lines with such effectiveness.

Meetings Called Off in Otonabee

Steps Taken to Prevent the Spread of Epidemic.

At a meeting of the Otonabee Board of Health it was decided to recommend the closing of the schools and temporary suspension of public gatherings. The churches will also be closed for at least one Sunday. Several cases of Spanish influenza are reported in the township and all necessary precautions have been taken to check the spread of the epidemic.

William Batten Seriously Hurt

Fell From the Side of a Silo.

William Batten, Hall's Glen, was seriously injured on Tuesday evening, when he fell fifteen feet from a silo. He was making some repairs on the side of the silo when the board on which he was standing broke. As he fell he struck another board attached to the silo about six feet from the ground, breaking four ribs on one side, and he was otherwise badly shaken up. The hired man who was with him, carried him to the house, where he is still confined. Mr. Batten, as agent for the Massey-Harris, is well known about the county by a host of friends, who will learn with regret of his mishap.

REV. F. E. MALOTT AT MILLBROOK

MILLBROOK, Oct. 24.—Rev. F. E. Malott, of Trinity Methodist church, Peterborough, conducted the anniversary services in the Methodist church, Millbrook, last Sunday. His eloquent sermons, both morning and evening, were listened to with rapt attention by large congregations.

The music was excellent and the choir rendered splendid anthems. A mixed quartette also sang most acceptably.

Employers Are Held Responsible

Sergeant Ward of the Civil Branch of the Canadian Military Police Corps states that the manufacturers in this city are very lax in keeping a check on the men they employ as regards military exemption papers. It would apepar that they have the impression that the fact that a man has a registration card only is all that is required. All factory owners and other employers of labour are warned of the risk they are running and the heavy penalty to which they are liable. In all cases men of military age must carry either the original or a copy of their marriage certificate if married men, if under military age they must carry either a copy or the original of their birth certificate. If unfit or exempted to work on munitions or machinery they must have the necessary documents to prove this. These regulations are distinctly stated in the Military Service Act.

THE STORAGE OF POTATOES

Many have grown potatoes this year who never did so before, and consequently will be unfamiliar with the best methods of protecting the crop.

Owing to the excessive rains this autumn, potatoes in some districts have become infected with rot, and many have been harvested under unfavourable conditions. In many instances they have been stored in cellars before being properly dried. Potatoes showing any indication of rot should not be stored with sound ones This is especially true if there are abnormal conditions of moisture, as such conditions will cause a greater activity of the fungus and, consequently, quicker rotting of the potatoes.

Potatoes should be stored in as dry and cool a place as possible without freezing. The drier they can be kept the less rot will develop.

This year, especially, potatoes should be carefully sorted within from three to four weeks after storing in the cellar, those showing any signs of developing rot being discarded. This will protect the remainder of the crop.

Food is badly needed, and it is our positive duty to take good care of what we have produced.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE MRS McCAMUS

The Floral Tributes Were Many and Beautiful.

The funeral of the late Mrs. T. W. McCamus took place yesterday afternoon from the family residence, the old McCamus homestead, Cavan township. The service was conducted by the Rev. Canon Allen, rector of the parish, assisted by Rev. McConnaghie, pastor of the Presbyterian church at Centreville and former pastor of the deceased. Reference was made to the life and character of the late Mrs. McCamus. Interment was made in the family plot, St. Paul's church cemetery. The floral tributes were beautiful and very numerous. The funeral was largely attended and many friends from a distance paid their last respects to the deceased. The pallbearers were close and intimate friends of the late Mrs. McCamus.

Funeral Took Place in Lakefield

Mrs. J. E. A. Moore Was Victim of Influenza.

LAKEFIELD, Oct. 24. — The funeral of the late Mrs. J. E. A. Moore took place from the Lakefield station on Tuesday afternoon, on the arrival of the noon train. Mrs. Moore was one of the victims of the Spanish influenza. Her brother-in-law, Mr. J. W. Cornish of Toronto, accompanied the body to Lakefield. The late Mrs. Moore (nee Lily Down) was born in England, and was married in Lakefield thirteen years ago. One child, Eric, and a sister, Mrs. J. W. Cornish, survive. Mrs. Moore left Lakefield about ten years ago to reside in Toronto. Interment took place at the Lakefield cemetery.

EVEN THE JUDICIARY URGES THE PEOPLE TO PRECAUTIONS

Mr. Justice Latchford Referred to the Serious Epidemic That is Scourging the Countries and Advised That Every Precaution be Taken.

GRAND JURY AVOIDED HOSPITALS

"I doubt whether there were ever such serious conditions existing in Canada, at least not since the cholera scourge of '46," said Mr. Justice Latchford replying to the Grand Jury's report yesterday afternoon. "There have been so many deaths and so much suffering that it behooves every person to take the utmost care and precautions against this epidemic, at once so infectious and fatal, in so many cases." His Lordship thanked the Jury for their kindly reference to himself, and said that he fully appreciated the responsibility resting upon him and was sensible of the duty he was called upon to perform.

"I rejoice with you in the successful efforts of the allied armies, and especially of our Canadian soldiers. If there is anything we have reason to be proud of, it is the magnificent spirit, the courage, discipline and initiative of our sons. Whatever may be said of the other units, no objective has been set before Canada's soldiers that they did not obtain. While our sacrifices have been heavy, it would apepar that they have not been in vain. They have been fighting for the only thing worth while in life. That can only be attained by blotting out the men who sought to subject the free nations of the world to their brutal domination. Canada loves freedom, and so loves it that she is fighting with her allies to make it secure and lasting."

The Jury's Address.

The Grand Jury's address was presented as follows:

To His Lordship Justice Latchford,—

We the Grand Jury of the Fall Assizes of the County of Peterborough, beg leave to report as follows:

Before presenting our observations and recommendations we feel that we should refer to the topic that is uppermost in the minds and hearts of the people of Canada and of the Empire at large, "The Great World War."

We trust the end is approaching and we rejoice in the success of the Allied Army and look forward to a peace of lasting effect which has been and is the great objective of the Allies.

Our gallant Canadians have proved that they are worthy to be called sons of their ancestors and their native country Canada.

It is a matter to be recognized as a great factor in the same conflict that the bountiful harvest just gathered in must be attributed to the hands of a kind Providence.

We have endeavoured to comply with your directions in the performance of our duties, the same having been made plain by you.

We desire to congratulate the County Council on the adequate provisions made in rebuliding the County building.

Our visit to the jail revealed every comfort administered and of a sanitary nature. There are several men and one woman in the jail at present. With reference to the three old men referred to by Your Lordship, we found two from the city who had been in the Protestant Home and one has been in the County House of Refuge, all for some reason now in jail and they appear anxious to remain.

At the County House of Refuge there are twenty-five men and ten women, all apparently happy and enjoying all the comforts that could be supplied in such an institution.

Avoided Hospital.

As the result of the influenza the hospitals are conjested and the staff of each overworked and on the advice of Dr. Scott we decided to ask the Court and all those concerned to rest upon the report of the previous Grand Jury until such time as the epidemic has abated.

We further wish to express our appreciation of the interest you have taken in the performance of our duties and the course we should pursue and trust that you may long be spared to fill the exalted position to which you have been appointed, knowing that it means as time rolls on, the uplifting of the Courts and Society in general.

Respectfully yours.
(Sgd.) P. McNULTY,
Foreman.

Music -- Nature's Great Tonic

WHEN evening comes and finds you weary, with jumpy nerves and the whole world out of tune, put on your slippers, pull up your favorite "comfy" chair in front of your own cosy fire, load the good old jimmy pipe and then turn on your Pathephone.

Away flies the haunting care, gone are the morbid fancies, soothed are the ragged nerves and in their place are comfort and sweet contentment.

In these Mighty Times an extra drain is placed on our endurance. We owe it to Ourselves, to our Country and to our Boys at the Front to keep smiling. MUSIC will help take the sting out of our worries and anxieties. An hour of music each day and we tackle our problems with new vigor and freshened outlook.

The Pathephone

The Pathephone is the supreme achievement amongst music makers. Through its beautiful art cases comes the combined record libraries of the world, for the Pathephone plays all other records as well as the famous Pathe' record itself which requires no steel needles. Although the most beautiful phonograph made—being copies of famous period furniture—it costs no more than the ordinary talking machine.

MUSIC IN THE HOME

MUSIC CEMENTS THE RURAL COMMUNITY.

Helps Keep Young People on the Farm.

A vital question facing our country, one in which every class is more or less ultimately interested is the keeping people on the farms. Young folks will continue to crave for city life as long as there are bright, enjoyable and instructive pleasures to be had in the big centres if life on the farm is dull and cheerless. Modern houses and labour-saving devices are taking a great deal of the drudgery from farming but the social life of rural communities is neglected. There are numerous country sides where about the only regular musical attraction is the Friday night choir practice. Unfortunately that only interests a few. What is wanted is plenty of music for the parents, the little folks and the youth who are not in the choir or who are not in touch with music in anyway.

To get to the very practical side of this great art—music, there are few attractions that would work so directly in keeping the young people satisfied with the country as to interject into every rural district a few dozen player pianos and phonographs so that music might hold sway without let or hindrance. A few times at noon-hour during harvest makes a pleasing break in the day. An evening of music is the finest incentive to stimulating a social life in the community. To entertain or to be entertained, music is the easiest and most acceptable help here is. It has been charged that the old-fashioned visiting among farmers' families is dying out. If that be true, music would be a great antidote for a falling-off in visitation.

Perhaps the winter months need music the most. Dancing is a popular country winter-pleasure and with modern musical instruments anyone can play for a dance. Furthermore it is not necessary to have a big affair with an orchestra for the player piano and phonograph facilitate the holding of a dance when just a few families get together, even if arranged on the spur of the minute. With music available every day, the boys and girls do not grow up in the feeling that their environment is lonesome. Their school days are spent more profitably on account of the zest that comes from a joyous home life. Parents and grandparents, too, are refreshed by lots of music. So let the old farm-house resound with music in the rural community reminds one of "the glue" in George Eliot's Silas Manner — "when I come to think on it, meanin' goes but a little way i' most things, for you may mean to stick things together and your glue may be bad, and then where are you? And so I says to myself, it isn't the meanin' it's the glue.'"

Meanin' to promote a keener interest in farm life is taking in something most important if the glue prescribed to stock rural communi-

Representatives From Churches Wait on Fuel Commission

Coal Conservation Was Discussed But No Definite Understanding Arrived At—Fuel on Hand in the Churches.

Representatives of the churches of the city met the Fuel Commission last evening to consider ways and means of fuel conservation. All present reported upon the amount on hand but no definite scheme for saving was decided upon. The representatives who met the commission were R. F. G. Sutherland and J. Hanna, Bethany Tabernacle; Reverend Robt. Pogue, St. Paul's Harry Goodwin, Park St Baptist; W. B. Campbell, Trinity; H. C. Stabler, George street, R. Mulligan, Knox, Peter Mulloy, Sacred Heart, J. J. Turner, St. Luke's L. J. Petit, Murray street, E. B. Fowler, St. Andrews, G. Copping, All Saints, Mr McCartney, St. Peter's, A. Fife, St. James. In the absence of Mr. Jos. Wearing, Mr. W. Stocker occupied the chair.

FUEL ON HAND.

The report of fuel on hand given by the representatives was:

St. Luke's would use about 9 tons of coal and 4 or 5 cords of wood. They have the coal on hand

Murray street uses 60 tons which they have not all in. St. Paul's has some hard and some soft coal. George street has 70 per cent. of the required quantity on hand some of this run of mine. They are using wood now. Mr. Stabler said that as it is a brick building if the fire were left out one Sunday it would require nearly as much coal again to heat on the second Sunday.

At the Sacred Heart they have have perhaps enough soft coal to see them through the winter. At Trinity Church it is believed the hard coal on hand will see them through with special care.

Park Street Baptist church is curtailing some of the weekly meetings. They have 2 tons of hard coal and require 12 more.

Bethany Tabernacle with 12 tons and some wood have the needful supply

Knox church has a car load in.

St. James has 16 tons in and uses about 30 tons.

St. Andrews have their supply of 35 or 36 tons in and are burning wood in the Sunday School room.

All Saints have 25 tons of the 30 used normally but will make it do with wood.

The representatives were thanked for the information they brought in.

CASE OF ILLNESS

A request from a man whose wife is ill and who had a certificate from Dr. Galvin to that effect will be permitted to buy another ton of coal.

MUST KEEP REGULATIONS

A letter was received from Everybody's Coal Company asking permission to sell hard coal to those who have soft on hand and permission to deliver it from cars. They do not want to be held to restrictions unless the commission had enough applications to enable them to get rid of it. The Secretary was directed to reply that regulations cannot be varied and must be applied to all dealers. That reports must be made every day that coal is received or delivered, that the regulations as to coal on hand, did not apply to soft coal and that they were welcome to obtain [illegible] commission any information as to persons who have no coal as far as shown in their records

Awarded $200 to Mrs. McElhiney

Mrs. McElhiney Resigns as Police Matron.

The appended resolution was passed at a meeting of the Board of Police Commissioners held yesterday afternoon:

"The Police Commissioners of Peterborough in accepting the resignation of Mrs. McElhiney, as police matron, do so with great regret. Mrs. McElhiney has for four and a half years faithfully and efficiently performed her duties—often not of the most pleasant character—but in her case conscientiously rendered with a motive to do good and serve her Master.

"She is a woman of large sympathies and very approachable and acceptable to the class of women with so many of whom she was brought in contact.

"Her home was a refuge for them, and she never let one of them want for a bed or a meal.

"She was a peace-maker where peace was needed, especially in family matters.

"The Commissioners allotted each year for Mrs. McElhiney the sum of four hundred dollars, but she only took up three hundred dollars a year and this sum she mostly expended in and about the performance of her work.

"Mrs. McElhiney and her family have recently passed through severe sickness from the Flu., which entailed considerable expense.

"Under all these circumstances this Board recommends and awards to Mrs. McElhiney the sum of two hundred dollars, and their grateful acknowledgment of her fine services during the last four and a half years."

New Home Treatment for Banishing Hairs

(Beauty Topics)

With the aid of a delatone paste, it is an easy matter for any woman to remove every trace of hair or fuzz from face, neck and arms. Enough of the powdered delatone and water is mixed into a thick paste and spread on the hairy surface for about 2 minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed. This completely removes the hair, but to avoid disappointment, get the delatone in an original package.

Fined for Not Carrying Papers

Number of Cases Dealt With This Morning.

Robert R. Mahood, 590 Sherbrooke street, paid $6.10 this morning, because he did not carry a certificate of birth. Mahood is only 16 years of age, according to his birth certificate.

'Have you shaved yet?" asked the Crown Attorney.

A RETURNED SOLDIER.

John Cahill, an honorably discharged soldier, was allowed to go with the warning to carry discharge papers in the future.

A. J. Nesky did not appear at court to answer to the charge of not carrying military papers. He will receive an unpleasant reminder that the law must be respected.

"I've got a lawsuit on my hands, your worship,' smiled Mr. Hatton, when asked if he would like his fees included in the fine of John Watkins who was fined $12.50 because he did not carry his military papers yesterday.

"I'm trying to get proper accommodation for the city officials," said Mr. Hatton on second thoughts.

TAKEN TO OTTAWA

William Fresck, an Austrian, who was arrested yesterday for failure to carry the required military papers was charged in police court this morning with not reporting to the Chief of Police although being an enemy subject. He has lived in this country seven years part of the time at Fort William and part in this city at the Quaker Oats. He was directed to report to the police every week and to pay a fine of $10 and $4.10 costs for not carrying military papers to show that he is exempt for service.

He will be taken to Ottawa to-day where his case as an alien enemy will be dealt with.

Peterboro Soldier Died in Hospital

Pte. Herbert York Passed Away After Lingering Illness.

The death occurred at Mowat Hospital, Kingston, yesterday, of Pte. Herbert York. He enlisted in 1916 in the 93rd Battalion, but was later transferred to the 52nd Battalion. He served several months in France, but being severely shell shocked, he was sent to England and then to Canada.

He was in Kingston hospital for over a year, but his immediate death was due to pneumonia. He leaves a sorrowing wife and four small children, residing at 36 Lafayette avenue.

His remains are expected on the 5.30 Grand Trunk train, and the funeral will be held from the above address on Friday at 2.30 o'clock.

CUBAN CROP ESTIMATED AT ABOUT 3,400,000 TONS.

Trade Still Awaiting the Details of New Cuban Contract.

The International Sugar Committee has announced the further purchase of 14,000 bags of Cubas for 4.985c. c. and f. and it is expected that more will come along as soon as shipping space permits. As there is now only one central grinding in Cuba the final outrun of the crop should be known in a short time and it is believed that the figures will be close to the original estimates, or about 3,400,000 tons. In the meantime the trade is awaiting details regarding the contract for the new Cuban crop.

In many sections of the west the harvesting of the new beet crop is well under way and the reports are favorable. Some refined is arriving in Chicago and is being absorbed as fast as received.

LIPTON'S

It stands to reason that a firm that owns its own plantations and grows, blends, packs and sells its own Tea can guarantee its quality better than a firm that does not have these advantages.

For this reason, therefore, if you wish to get perfect quality Tea, buy Lipton's, because it is the only guaranteed quality Tea obtainable in Canada.

The very fact that "Lipton's" is synonymous with "Tea" is because we have made Lipton's worthy of this association of ideas.

Stick It, Women of Canada

(By Marjory MacMurchy)

(By Marjory MacMurchy.)

Strong to endure, tireless in activity, wise in decision, united in spirit and organization, resolute in sacrifice, proving that love is the most powerful force in the world, the women of freedom have shown that when a nation calls its men to its most sacred service the call rings like a trumpet for our women too. Every woman in Canada is asked by the Government to help in making this year's Victory Loan by far the greatest Canada has had yet.

Bring in the silver and gold, all the wealth our nation must have to win the war, to care for our soldiers, to make certain a Right Peace, to keep away the desolation of widespread unemployment from Canada, to assure safety and plenty for our homes. Subscribe yourself. Secure as many other subscribers as possible. The goodwill and help of one hundred thousand women can break any record that we have had yet.

Whoever you are, this call is for you. Home woman, business woman, munition worker, woman of the farm, professional woman, national service girl, wage earner, household helper, member of a national organization, university student, girl at school, Mother, daughter, sister, wife, sweetheart, take your part in Canada's 1918 Campaign. Your enthusiasm, your pluck, your influence, your belief, can bring in the greatest proportional total of subscribers for any Victory Loan yet, British, Canadian or American. The help of our women will build that path of gold without which our soldiers' supreme sacrifice may fail in its final glory of an ultimate, complete, enduring Victory for Righteous Peace.

Your "exact" figure

It would be folly to try and fit your figure with a Type A Suit if you were tall and weighed over 170. It would be ludicrous to attempt to fit a Semi-ready Type B Suit on a man who is short and stout.

There are Seven physique Types—seven distinct and separate designs; we have added an eighth, called a "stub" figure.

The purpose is to fit all men in Semi-ready Tailored Clothes—to give a fit as perfect as can be made to measure after a try-on by the best custom tailor.

THE COST: The label price in the pocket is the same here as at the door of the Semi-ready shops—the same price everywhere.

Story of Stabbing Fray as Told to Jury at the Assizes

Luigi Marcotullio Related How He Tried to Wrench a Knife From Nicholas Beirodine, Who Is Being Tried for Attempted Murder.

PRISONER'S DENIAL

Charged with having wounded Lintar Marcotullio on Sunday, July 21st with intent to commit murder, Nicholas Beirodine pleaded not guilty at yesterday afternoon's session of the Fall Assizes before a jury, with Mr. Justice Latchford presiding. A similar plea was entered on two minor counts, one of having unlawfully wounded, and the other of having stabbed and done grievous bodily harm with intent to maim. Mr. G N. Gordon appeared in behalf of the prisoner, and Mr. Norman Sommerville of Toronto with Mr. G. W. Hatton represented the Crown

The jury was empanelled as follows: Peter Doherty, John Darling, Wm. Montgomery, F. W. Lean, Wm. Hopkins, F. B. McKenty, Alex. Mahood, John McAuliffe, Ira D. Moore, David Jordan, George Metcalfe and Fred Guerin.

INTERPRETER REQUIRED

Lintar Marcotullio was called as the first witness, but his limited knowledge of English necessitated the use of an interpreter, and Mr. D. M. Minnecola was summoned from his business. Lintar's story of the attack was corroborated by his cousin Luigi (Louis) Marcotullio, whose recital was more detailed, with a graphic touch here and there that colored it in spots beyond the judicial requirements. Louis spoke English with comparative fluency, but at times his command of English failed his memory and swift narrative so that the interpreter was required to fill the gaps The cousins Marcatullio, the prisoner and several friends had been playing cards on Sunday afternoon, July 21st, in Lougi's store on George street. The losers paid for the refreshment of two per cent. beer. The play ended about 5:30 p.m. and the men departed good friends. Beirodine apparently thought that he had to pay too often. He threw down a quarter, and went off without waiting for his change.

That night after 10 o'clock, Lintar Marcotullio was sitting on the steps of his house at 471 Parnell street. His wife and other relatives were present including his cousin, Louis, and a friend with the familiar of "Patsy" who had sat in at the card game.

In his evidence Louis said he saw Nick Beirodine coming along the street. The latter called out "Hello" and Louis went out to the sidewalk to give him the change from the quarter

Nick said that if I had not been there he would have whipped Lintar that afternoon. Lintar heard his name spoken and asked what it was about. The subject was Lintar's ability to play the Italian card game.

Lintar said, "Are you right or am I right."

Nick answered, "You don't know enough, you'd better go to school."

Lintar told him he had better go to school.

Nick said, "If you have anything to say come forward." He threw his coat on the ground, and they grabbed each other.

"I ran between them, gave Liutar a swing to one side and grabbed the prisoner.

"I pulled him away and said 'Stop pa the fight. What's the use of making the people laugh at us.' His arms were loose and he began to search in his back pockets"

"He pulled out a knife. I saw it in his hand. He struck at my cousin. I caught the arm that held the knife. With my right hand I grabbed the blade.

SAID HE WOULD NOT USE IT

Nick shouted, 'Let me go.' I twisted his hand and he began to cry. He said "Let me go and I won't use the knife."

"Then he twisted the knife in my hand, and cut me. The knife then slipped through my hand like snakes. He rushed past me up the steps and stabbed Lindar in the back. I saw the blood spurting like from a ap. I picked up a chair and hit him on the head Nick got up and said "I'll write to my brother in Toronto and make him come and kill the whole bunch."

Lougi told how his cousin picked himself up and stumbled into the house. His wife and relatives were all around him.

HELPS IN THE STORE.

Cross-examined by Mr. Gordon, Lotigi said that Lintar helped him in his store on George street. The only game played in the store was on that Sunday.

The witness maintained that Beirodine did not use the knife in the first encounter, which he separated. While he was trying to wrest the knife from the prisoner, the man "Patsy" and several of the women were leading Lindar towards the steps. When he was stabbed he fell back on the ground and on top of Nick, whom Louis had felled with a blow on the head with a chair. In the midst of the uproar and the dark Lindar was helped up and into the house. Nick revived, and gathering himself together disappeared.

TWO WOUNDS.

Dr. Malcolm McCulloch and Dr. Gallivan described the wounds that kept Marcotullio in the hospital for three weeks. One was below the right shoulder, and the other, the more serious, was under the left arm. The latter wound penetrated the chest wall into the pleural cavity and pierced the lining of the lung. It was a few inches from the heart. The scar had caused adhesions which gave a certain amount of pain when the arms and the upper part of the body were moved. The doctors believed that this condition would impair the man's strength for working, but in time would ameliorate, to some extent at least.

P. C. McINTOSH.

His foot temporarily crippled with rheumatism, Police Constable McIntosh dragged himself on crutches into the court room.

He said there was quite a crowd in front of 471 Parnell street when he arrived there. Marcotullio was inside on a chair. Two women were supporting him. Witness removed the blood-soaked shirts and rendered first aid.

"I went to Nicholas Febbo's house and placed the prisoner under arrest. He was washing his hands. There was blood on them. He had a lump and cut, the one wound on his head."

Mr. Gordon produced the prisoner's shirt and indicated bloodstains on the front of the left sleeve; also under the right arm, and a patch almost in the centre of the back.

"Are there any bloody finger marks on it?"

P. C. McIntosh—"I can't see any."

"There was no blood on the collar," Mr. Gordon indicated and brought out that the stains on Beirodine's shirt would correspond with the wounds on Marcatullio's body, if they were in contact.

"Was the wound on the prisoner's head bleeding freely?"

"There was some blood clotted in his hair, and streaks on his face."

"You found no knife?" "No."

"Did you go back and search for it?" "Yes."

P. C. McIntosh said that there was also blood on Louis Marcatullio's short.

"Did you ask him if he had a knife?"

"He said that he had none."

SAW THE KNIFE.

Lintar Marcotullio in his evidence said that he met Beirodine only once or twice before July 21st. When he was stabbed that night he turned and saw the prisoner with a knife in his hand. Lintar thought that he had been stabbed four times. It was a dark night. There was one light but it was on the opposite side of the street and farther west.

"Did you see the prisoner when he was struck by your cousin Louis?" Mr. Gordon asked,

"I heard the crash of the chair or something, but did not see it."

"Did your cousin separate you?"

"Yes."

"Whom did he take hold of?"

"Louis caught hold of the prisoner."

"Another man grabbed the witness about the arms."

"Did the two try to fight again?"

"No; I started to go in the house."

"How far did you walk?"

"I got to the third step."

Prisoner Denied Wounding.

Nick Beirodine, giving his version of the midsummer night's fray, said that Lintar was angry at him in the afternoon for breaking up the game. There was a disagreement between Lintar and Alfredo Serafino, and to avoid trouble the prisoner persuaded Serafino to leave the store.

Passing Marcotullio's home, the prisoner called out good night, and Louis stopped him to give him ten cents.

His story was the same as the others up to the point of the fight. He said Lintar told him he ought to learn how to play cards, and at the same time struck a blow at him. A scuffle followed and the prisoner said he went down. Lintar and several others were on top of him. The prisoner said that all he remembered was the blow on his head with the chair.

Beirodine said he didn't have a knife. He reached into his pocket for a handkerchief to wipe the blood from his head.

"Who stabbed Lintar," Mr. Sommerville asked, in cross-examination.

The prisoner replied that he didn't know.

Did Louis grab your wrist?

No; he caught me around the chest.

Prisoner said he had no idea how Lintar was wounded.

To Mr. Gordon he said that he had borrowed a small knife during the afternoon from a companion to fix a camera box, because he had none of his own. He returned it.

Alfred Serafino testified that he saw this knife. It was a short one with a blade about an inch and one-half long.

The witnesses called by the Crown this morning supported the principal account given by Luigi Marcotullio and Lintar. All the evidence was in at noon when the Court adjourned.

Presentation to Mr. Davis

Imperial Munitions Board Chief Inspector Honored by His Staff.

An interesting event took place in the office of the Eastern Ontario District of the Imperial Munitions Board this morning when the members of the staff of the Board in this district gathered to say farewell to Mr. F. M. Davis, the district chief who is leaving to occupy a similar position in the Hamilton district.

Mr. Clark, assistant chief acted as chairman of the gathering and called upon Mr. Sidney Whatley to speak on behalf of the members of the staff.

Mr Whatley remarked that it was with mingled feelings of regret and satisfaction that the staff had heard of the departure of Mr. Davis, regret because it meant the severance of the pleasant relationship that had always existed and satisfaction because Mr. Davis' going meant promotion for him. As the head of the staff in this district Mr. Davis had by his never failing courtesy and kindness and the impartial manner in which he discharged the duties of his responsible position endeared himself to everyone and they felt that in his departure they lost a personal friend. They could not allow Mr. Davis to leave without expressing their appreciation of his many good qualities

INFLUENZA HITS THE RAILWAYS.

Local Business is Seriously Affected.

While there are no definite figures of those suffering from Spanish influenza in the Peterborough division of the G.T.R., which extends from Belleville to Midland, Mr. McNab stated this afternoon that the business is held up by employees being laid up. Belleville, he said, is seriously affected by the Flu, while Midland so far has lost two operators.

In Peterborough the sidings are full of cars, both empty and full, with no one to handle them. The sick so far in the Peterborough branch are an operator, a freight agent, a janitor, a conductor, a driver, a brakesman.

CROTHERS GOING SOUTH.

Labour Minister Feels Need of a Rest.

OTTAWA, Oct. 24.—Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labour, is leaving shortly for a holiday in the South. When questioned yesterday morning in regard to labour conditions in Canada, Mr. Crothers said:

"I have had nothing like a rest since the beginning of the war which has greatly added to the onerous work and trying worries of the administration of the Labour Department. I have kept constantly on the job and it has been stated in the press that 'Capital and Labour have got along in Canada with less friction than in any other important belligerent country.'"

"I now feel the need of a rest and propose to go South for two or three months."

Buy Victory Bonds.

Happy Bond Holders When Rates Come Down

Aside altogether from the element of patriotism involved in the purchase of the next Victory Loan, its potentiality as an investment security is of outstanding importance. This is particularly true of the fifteen-year maturity.

Not only is the 5½ per cent. rate of interest which it yields much higher than it was possible for an investor in the securities of any stable Government to obtain in pre-war days, but the Victory Loan is gilt-edged in the fullest sense of the term. True, there has been a substantial increase in the public debt of the country during the past four years, but, on the other hand, there has been even a greater increase in the annual productive value of the Dominion. Taking the sum total of agriculture, live stock, manufacturing, mining, fisheries, and lumbering, it is now approximately four billions. In other words, the annual production of the Dominion exceeds by more than four-fold, the increase which has taken place in our public debt, since the outbreak of the war. And, further more, back of it all are the present and potential resources of the country.

Advantages as Investment.

Prior to the outbreak of the war, the normal spread between the interest rate on Government securities, and first-class mortgages was approximately 2 to 2½ per cent. During the last two or three years the spread has narrowed down to about one-half. To ordinary investors,—that is those who have sums of from five to twenty-five thousand dollars to invest—the meaning of this is obvious.

When war ceases, and the money markets of the world again return to normal conditions, the spread in interest yield between Government bonds and loans on mortgages must necessarily again widen, because of the higher character of the former type of security.

The holder of the fifteen-year Victory bonds will, however, still be drawing the high rate of 5½ per cent. on a security of the highest grade. And one, too, that will be free from taxation.

Red Cross Campaign Will Continue All Week

Results Satisfactory But Difficult to Reach a Number of People Through Illness.

The Red Cross campaign, despite the handicap of so much illness in the city disorganizing the list of collectors, as well as making it difficult to see all the contributors, is getting along in good shape. Up to last evening more than $13,000 had been given in cash and promises. If possible $35,000 is to be raised this year and it will all be required.

The teams are working hard to get results and are greatly pleased at the reception everywhere. If the canvasser has not called he will do so some time this week, and if by any chance you are missed, just leave your contribution at Headquarters, 338 George street, and it will be taken care of.

OBITUARY

ERNEST HAMILTON

Ernest Hamilton, only son of Mrs. R. D. Hamilton, 290 Hunter street, died this morning at the residence of his uncle, Andrew Park, Toronto, after an illness of five days. He was born in Peterboro and had resided in Toronto for a number of years.

The funeral which will be private will take place to-morrow afternoon from the family residence to the Little Lake Cemtery.

MRS. JOS. THEBAULT.

Mrs. Joseph Thebeault died last evening at six o'clock, at her residence, 54 James street.

She leaves to mourn her loss besides her husband, four daughters, and two sons: Mrs. C. Valois, Mrs. J. Higgins and Mrs. A. McCallum, city, Mrs. A. Pappas, Toronto; Pte. Ed., overseas, and Fred at home. Pte. George Thebeault, a third son, was killed in action on August 28th.

Funeral on Friday morning at nine o'clock to the Church of the Immaculate Conception, and St. Peter's cemetery.

THE LATE DONALD POWER DENHAM.

The death of the late Mr. Donald Power Denham, briefly announced yesterday, came with a shock to the many friends of the young man and has aroused deep feelings of sympathy for his sorrowing parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Denham.

Donald Denham was born in Akron, Ohio, some 27 years ago, and came to Peterborough in 1904, when his father was appointed manager of the big plant of the Quaker Oats Co. here. He attended the Peterborough Collegiate Institute, and went on to Cornell University, where, after a successful course, he graduated in 1914. While at college he was a member of the "Semiphor" and Sygmanu Clubs.

After graduation he became a junior member of the American Society of Engineers, and entered the service of the Leonard Construction Co., of Chicago, as Field Engineer. As such Mr. Denham assisted in the construction of manufacturing plants in Cedar Rapids, Franklin, N.J., Kansas City, the immense Quaker Oats Buildings in Peterborough, and in Saskatoon, Sask. Throughout his short career he was a most conscientious and painstaking worker and strained himself to the utmost to finish his work at Saskatoon, having accepted a government appointment with the Roger Freeman Bureau of Yards and Docks, in Charleston, W. Va., to which place he was on his way when he arrived at his home considerably exhausted. He was taken ill here and pneumonia supervened in an intensified form, from which he died yesterday, in spite of all that the best care and medical skill could do.

Mr. Denham had gone through several severe illnesses in former years, the effects of which had prevented the gratification of his heart's desire to serve in the army, and he hailed the opportunity recently presented to assist war work in naval construction.

Mr. Denham while in Peterborough was a member of St. John's congregation and was the painstaking secreary-treasurer of St. John's Sunday school. He was a most devoted son and a thoughtful and obliging young man.

The funeral will be held on Friday afternoon, the 25th inst.

SIDNEY ARTHUR MARTIN

Sidney Arthur Martin passed away in the Belleville Military hospital on Monday. He was a son of Mr. James Martin of Douro township. He leaves to mourn his loss two brothers, John of Hope township and Luther who is in the Northwest also one sister Mrs. Charles Johnston of Nassau. The late Pte. Martin was well known through out the district and his death will be regretted by a wide circle of friends.

MARY O'SULLIVAN.

Miss Mary O'Sullivan passed away in Ennismore to-day following a brief illness. She leaves to mourn her loss a sorrowing mother and one brother and one sister, namely, Mr. Patrick O'Sullivan and Mrs. Harry Kyle. The funeral will take place to-morrow at ten o'clock to St. Martin's Church, and thence to St. Martin's cemetery.

FREDERICK HOCKEY.

The death occurred last evening of Frederick Hockey at his late residence, 270 Rogers street. The deceased was forty years of age and had been ailing for some time. The funeral, which will be private, will take place to-morrow afternoon from the family residence at four o'clock. Service will be conducted at the house at three-forty-five o'clock by the Rev. Mr. White.

MRS. JOHN A. HALL

After a short illness of one week's duration the death took place last night of a highly respected lady, in the person of Mary Hart, beloved wife of Mr. John A. Hall, Lindsay. Death was due to influenza, followed by pneumonia.

The late Mrs Hall was born in Manvers Township, and was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hart, of Manvers and was 50 years, 9 months and 8 days of age. She was well known in Peterboro. She is survived by her loving husband, who is employed with Mr. Chas. M. Squier, and two sons, namely, Henry and Thomas.

MRS. R. E. WEGG.

Mrs. R. E. Wegg, 223 Antrim street, aged 25, daughter of Mr. David Anderson, Lock No. 3, died at Nicholls Hospital this afternoon following a short illness. Mr. Wegg has been overseas with the 93rd Battalion. She leaves to mourn her loss two children, one 2 years old and the other 5 years of age, also a father and mother and seven sisters and two brothers, Mrs. W. G. Lockie, Mrs. Gordon Moore, Mrs. Roy Dunbar, May, Ethel, Viva, Stewart and Alex., all at home.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

The many friends of Dr. Lacey will be pleased to learn that he has recovered from his recent illness and will be able to resume duties at his office to-morrow.

Acting Inspector Harry Ward of the Dominion Police Corps at present operating in Peterboro County has been congratulated by the Dominion Police officials for his activity and perseverance in this county and has been promoted to be a full inspector.

Mrs. J. S. Coon, 597 Gilmour street, left to-day on a ten days' visit to Brantford.

Mr. A. McCrimmon, Crown Attorney, St. Thomas, is visiting his daughter, Mrs Dickson Davidson.

Mr. Gordon Miller returned last night to Ottawa after visiting Col. and Mrs. Miller, McDonnel street.

Miss Helen Beck has returned after several years in England, and is at present visiting in Toronto.

Mr. G. W. Morrow was in Toronto yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Rae were called to Toronto to-day by the illness of their son Allan, and will probably proceed to Regina, where their daughter Mabel is seriously ill.

WEDDING BELLS

BOYD—STANGER

Quietly last evening at 8:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's mother, 311 Stewart street, the wedding was solemnized of Hazel Isabel Stanger, and John S. Boyd, son of T. L. Boyd of Lisburne, Ireland. Reverend Mr. Rowand performed the ceremony. They will reside in the city.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of Joseph Henry Breault, who died Oct. 24, 1917:

His pleasant smile and kindly face,
His fond, true heart is still,
The lips that spake so kind to all
Are closed, forever still.

Hun Governor of Belgium Hastens to Issue Pardons.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 24. — Baron Von Falkenhaysen, the Governor-General of Belgium, according to an official telegram from Brussels, has pardoned all Belgians and neutral residents condemned by the military tribunals or military commanders under his jurisdiction, except those convicted of common crime.

The Governor-General also has ordered the release of all Belgians and neutral citizens interned in Belgium or Germany. A limited number of persons whose freedom would be undesirable while the fighting continues, will be realeased after the evacuation of Belgium.

RIVETERS' BIG WAGES

Riveters at the plant of the Submarine Boat Corporation, according to Speed Up, are commonly earning around $100 a week. In three days recently one of the star riveters drove 2,375 flush rivets in a shell, earning $172.69 for the gang, of which he received $75.59.

On one Sunday, another crew drove enough rivets to earn $101. Still others earned, respectively, $87, $72.52, $70.84, $65.68, and $64.44.

Piece work in reaming was started at the Submarine Boat Plant recently Under this system one man has reamed 1,328 holes, earning $23 44 for a day's work. The average pay of the reamer ranges form $14 to $24, which brings them practically up to the level of the riveter.

Son of Shiloh Drummer Boy Carries On.

(By United Press.)

LANCASTER, Pa., Oct. 24. — The same spirit that steeled the nerve of Joseph D. Brientnell, drummer boy of Shiloh, has been responsible for the breaking down of the barrier of conscientious objection in the Amish church, and the permission granted liberty loan workers to speak from the church pulpits.

George D. Brientnell, son of the little hero of Shiloh, who was crippled in the Spanish-American war, spent an entire afternoon when Bishop Beiler of the Amish church before the divine would allow patriotic addresses to be made from his pulpits.

As a result, farmers with their broad-brimmed hats and hook-and-eye trousers have accepted the liberty loan as a duty, although it is a war loan, and have invested thousands of dollars, according to official figures just made public by the Amish church.

Ever since his visit to the home of Bishop Beiler, Brientnell has led all patriotic campaign into the Amish sections.

What about butter?

We must be economical with it, of course, but there is no reason to feel any alarm. We have about 25,000,000 pounds of creamery butter in cold storage in the country now. The quantity liable to be taken under the new commandeering order is about 120,000 packages of 56 pounds each.

The Canadian butter allowance could easily be cut by 25 per cent. without anyone suffering in consequence. This would release 56,000,000 pounds a year for export. The national consumption of butter in Canada averages 28 pounds a year. In Britain the ration is 1 ounce a week. In France little is obtainable and the price is 90 cents a pound. In Italy butter is rationed locally.

CLAY'S FIRST SPEECH.

It Began In Confusion, but Ended In a Brilliant Triumph.

Henry Clay as a young man was extremely bashful, although he possessed uncommon brightness of intellect and fascinating address, without effort making the little he knew pass for much more. In the early part of his career he settled in Lexington, Va., where he found the society most congenial, though the clients seemed somewhat recalcitrant to the young lawyer. He joined a debating society at length, but for several meetings he remained a silent listener.

One evening after a lengthy debate the subject was being put to a vote when Clay was heard to observe softly to a friend that the matter in question was by no means exhausted. He was at once asked to speak and after some hesitation rose to his feet. Finding himself thus unexpectedly confronted by an audience, he was covered with confusion and began, as he had frequently done, in imaginary appeals to the court, "Gentlemen of the jury."

A titter that ran through the audience only served to heighten his embarrassment, and the obnoxious phrase fell from his lips again. Then he gathered himself together and launched into a peroration so brilliantly lucid and impassioned that it carried the house by storm and laid the cornerstone to his future greatness, his first case coming to him as a result of this speech, which some consider the finest he ever made.

Knights Templars.

The name "Knights Templars" was first assumed by a semireligious, semimilitary order founded in the twelfth century for the commendable purpose of protecting the scattered and disbanded crusaders. At first they were merely Knights, but after they were assigned quarters at the palace in Jerusalem called Solomon's temple they became known as Knights of the Temple, or Knights Templars. The ancient order finally became so powerful that it was suppressed in the fourteenth century, and the continuity or identity of the modern with the ancient one of the same name has been warmly disputed

GRAIN MARKET

Cash oats are firmer, with receipts still running very light. The result is high premiums and a tendency to alleged exorbitant high prices. So far has this gone, that a movement has started in the West for a fixed price on all grades of oats, in order to keep prices within reasonable limits. There is a little better demand for barley, and an advance of 2 cents is quoted.

Manitoba wheat—In store, Fort William, nominal (not including 2 1-2c. tax); No. 1 northern, $2.24 1-2; No. 2 northern, $2.21 1-2; No. 3 northern, $2.17 1-2; No. 4 wheat, $2.11 1-2c.

Austria's Cruel Treatment of Italian War Prisoners

Austrians Hold 400,000 Prisoners—While Austrian Prisoners in Italy Are Well Treated, Italians in Austria are Starved, Beaten, Killed.

Rome, Oct. 14.—Austria's systematic and unbelievably cruel treatment of Italian war prisoners is attracting wide attention.

"No nation that respects itself would so treat human beings, nor should any nation dare to lay up itself for the future such a debt of hatred," says Henry Nelson Gay, the American historian of certain phases of the war, who has made a special investigation into the conditions, and has undertaken to secure better treatment from Austria of these prisoners.

Contrast in Treatment

It is estimated that there are about 400,00 Italian prisoners in Austria with somewhat less that number of Austrian prisoners in Italy. Austrian prisoners in Italy are treated will. It has even been charged in parliament that they fare better than the Italian soldier at the front. In many cases the skilled mechanics among them are given employment in industrial establishments and paid good wages, while the others are used on farms or in construction work They are neither beaten nor starved, and the sick or wounded are placed in hospitals.

Worked When Ill

In contrast to this Italian prisoners are forced to work for a few cents a day. They are starved, beaten, wounded or killed at the whim of any guard, and, most inhuman of all, it is charged, they are forced to work when ill. Tuberculosis often develops and death follows. When prisoners refuse to give military information, after capture, they are starved and tortured and sometimes shot.

Sworn Statements

Thousands of sworn statements containing these facts are on file at the war and state departments. They have been gathered from prisoners who have escaped or from those exchanged. By a convention established between the Italian and Austrian Red Cross, totally unfit prisoners are exchanged each week by way of Switzerland. Italy receives about 350 weekly. "Thirty-five per cent of the men arrive in the advanced stage of tuberculosis," said Dr. Oswald Polimanti, the surgeon in charge.

AFTER THE WAR.

When the last of our heroes has fallen,
When the victory is finally won
What will then be your word to the German,
What then will you say to the hun?
Will you welcome him back to the city
Make him free once again of the plain?
Saying, Brother now war time is over
Please to take of our bounty again:
For in this is the nation made greater
Magnanimity raises its rank
And the fellow who ill-treated your sister
Shall be working with you in the bank.

When the last little village has crumbled
And all air raids have ceased from the land,
Will you then have a smile for the raider
Will you offer the German your hand?
Saying, Brother our country now needs you
For your labour is cheaper than ours,
'Tis our duty to succour the vanquished
And be morally first of the powers.
Oh! then won't it be pleasant at meal times
It will add extra spice to the dish
When the fellow who murdered the wounded
Shall come in with the soup and the fish.

When the bomb destroyed homes are rebuilded
And the graves of our loved ones are green
Shall we then link our arms in the German's
And pretend to forget what has been?
Saying, Brother our markets are open
Now our jobbers are needing your trade
(For our margin of profit is greater Upon all goods in Germany made)
It will surely make Christmas more joyful
If we buy Made in Germany toys,
And forget that the fellow who made them,
Dropped the missile that murdered our boys

When the last ship is sunk without warning
And the last fleeing boat load is shelled
When the pastime of shooting the drowning
For the very last time has been held,
Then, once more we'll be able to travel
By the German-American line.
They'll be cutting the rates for the season,
And economy wins every time.
Then make friends with the Liners blonde captain
Late commander of U33
And perhaps he will show you the photo
Of your brother's last struggle at sea.

When our regiments of war-shattered heroes,
Have completed their work overseas,
When we've welcomed them back with rejoicing,
And enthused for a fortnight, maybe,
Shall we put up that "Shortness of labour"
Old excuse for employing the hun
Shall we make foreign labour the lever
For oppressing the men who have won?
Take heed and decide on your answer
E'er the conflict shall finally cease
For the army which conquered the battle
Shall not be defeated in peace.

VICTORY LOAN NEEDED EVEN IF PEACE COMES

"Victory Loan will be required to full extent, even if peace should come within a few weeks or months, as nations will be on a war basis for a long time, and it will take Canada a year or more to demobilize; also credits will still have to be given to imperial Munitions."—Sir Thomas White in a special message to the people of Canada.

Life Blood of Prosperity.

THE WIFE

BY JANE PHELPS

Brian Is Jealous of Arthur Mandel, Ruth's Employer.

CHAPTER XXI.

The next morning Brian made no allusion to the subject which they had discussed the night before. But he was rather quiet, for him, answering in monosyllables when Ruth spoke.

"He doesn't believe I'm going to do it," Ruth said aloud, as she went into the kitchen for some more cream for his coffee. "But I am!" she added with decision.

"Brian, I am going to take my position this morning," she said quietly, as she put the cream jug beside his cup.

"You are determined to do this, when you know I am opposed to it?"

"Not because you are opposed to it, dear. But because we need the money. You will see how much more comfortable we will be, after a few weeks, than we are now. It will give us more to go out with, too—to the theaters, etc.," she knew his passion for the theater.

"I should rather never go, than to have you disgrace yourself and me by letting others see that I can't support you. It is galling even to talk of it," he finished impatiently as he rose from the table.

"The hours are short, from nine or half-past until five," she told Brian. "I shall be home when you get here. Why, unless I had told you, I might have worked there indefinitely and you would never have known it!" The thought flashed across her mind that perhaps she would have been wiser had she kept quiet until she had proved herself.

"So you are going?" he asked again.

"Yes, Brian," her voice was very gentle.

"I hope you may never regret it."

Brian Hackett saw that her mind was made up; that she would at least try her wings as a wage earner—and all because he could not give her all the luxuries to which she had been accustomed. He scoffed, in his heart, at a love that could not endure privation, when that privation meant only the going without of things he never had had. He took no stock of her bringing up; of the disgust she must feel at doing work she had always seen relegated to the many servants her aunt employed. He had no thought of how it affected her when she saw her hands reddened and roughened with menial work; or how she longed for the flesh-pots—the comforts she had in the South. She was a married woman, his wife. It was only her part he had asked her to do. To make a home for him. He would earn the money.

Yet, even as all these things ran through his head, he flushed as he remembered how very little he had earned. Perhaps, had he not told her they would have to take a cheaper flat, she would not have done this thing. But what could a man do? He scarcely ever was able to bring home more than a hundred dollars a month. Thirty-five was too big a proportion to pay for rent. No wonder he had been obliged to borrow.

That thought recalled the check Mrs Clayborne had given Ruth, and which he had used. It was a big check; she of course, hd not been quite truthful when she had told Ruth that it was no more than she would give a professional; but as long as she had declared she would not help them, she had saved her pride by giving it to her in this way. I was all nonsense for Ruth to think she could earn such checks as that; it was preposterous. But—twenty dollars a week and the promise of more. He knew the firm by reputation, had heard Arthur Mandel spoken of as a keen business man. They were not paying people more than they earned—not nowadays.

Suddenly another thought came. This man Mandel had seen Ruth. He had thought her attractive. Perhaps that had something to do with it. Once more he asked, this time in a voice tinged with his latest emotion.

"You have dtcided?"

"Yes, Please don't be angry, Brian Believe me, it is for the best."

"What kind of a looking man is this Mandel?"

"Oh, just an ordinary man as far as looks go, perhaps better looking than the majority. Khy?"

"Maybe he has fallen in love with you and that's the reason he is willing to pay you—raw help—twenty dollars a week."

"Nonsense! As to my being 'raw help,' I am not. I have studied for years just the things that will help me in that position. I know many things that it takes years to learn about period decorating, etc. You never have been interested in the subject or you would have realized that I did."

"Well, all I've got to say is that you do it against my wishes! That I am unalterably opposed to your doing anything outside of our home. If you weren't so impatient, and would give me time, I would soon be able to give you all you wanted. That's what it amounts to! Giving you the gew-gaws you want; and letting you play lady with servants to wait on you."

When Brian finished his tirade he flung himself out of the house, for the first time neglecting to give Ruth a parting kiss.

Sawing the Wood.

It was only on rare occasions that Mrs. Cutler, a kind faced old lady, accepted invitations to dine out. Upon repeated invitations of her friends, the Joslins, however, she consented to attend a little informal dinner they were giving, accompanied by her daughter.

Unfortunately Mrs. Cutler was quite deaf and consequently could not enter into the general conversation. She was engaged in cutting a piece of steak when her daughter turned to her and said:

"Mother, dear, why are you so quiet?"

"I'm all right," responded mother, with a sunny smile. "While you talk, Mabel, I say nothing and saw wood."—Buffalo Express.

The Polar Star.

As is well known to most readers, the north star marks the point in the skies toward which the axes (poles) of the earth point. But the poles have another motion called "precession" (much like the secondary motion of a spinning top), by which the ever changing poles describe a big circle in the sky, reaching from the present north star across to Vega. It requires over 25,000 years to complete that circle, and during that time numerous stars will in turn inherit the title of north star. Eleven thousand years hence the job will fall to Vega, and a most worthy holder of that most important position in the skies he will be. When that time comes Polaris will be almost forgotten.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Its Only Guise.

New diseases or new cures are always of interest to the reading public. Therefore an enthusiastic reporter believed a story lay in waiting because of a rumor that germs of a new disease had been discovered. He located the doctor responsible for the find and questioned him.

"In what guise," he asked, "do these germs appear?"

The doctor smiled. "You needn't be afraid," he said. "This is to be a fashionable disease and will appear only in the guys with money."—New York Tribune.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural colour and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients for about 50 cents. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

An Eye to the Future.

The late Wilson Barrett possessed a valuable old dresser who had the good fortune to be built on the same classic lines as Barrett himself, and accordingly inherited his master's cast-off clothes. One day something had upset Barrett at rehearsal, and he lost his temper. Every one stampeded out of his way. He strode into his dressing room with flashing eyes, and so indignant did he feel that he incontinently dashed his hat with great violence into the corner of the apartment. The faithful dresser, who knew every mood of his master, was quite unperturbed. He merely exclaimed, in bland tones, but with a touch of reproach:

"Here, steady, gov'nor; I've got to wear that some day!"

Francis Bacon.

The death of Francis Bacon was caused by his devotion to the cause of research and scientific investigation. During one of his excursions to the country he conceived the idea that animal substances may be preserved by means of snow. He procured a fowl and conducted the experiment himself. A severe cold was the result, and in his already enfeebled condition he was not able to withstand it and died of what we now know as bronchitis April 9, 1626, aged sixty-five, at the home of Lord Arundel. He was buried in St. Michael's church, St. Albans.

Make Appearances Count.

A good appearance is always an entering wedge when a man seeks an interview, but all the clothes in a king's wardrobe won't sell a bill of goods. It takes human intelligence to do that. Vanity sometimes leads a fellow to bedeck his person like a five storied wedding cake, and some men do it, I suppose, because they believe in the foolish aphorism that "clothes make the man." It's the other way. Man makes the clothes, and just as often clothes unmake the man. Fine feathers may make fine birds, fine hats or fine dusters, but the best that fine clothes ever did was to make fine looking men. No doctor ever prescribes for himself, and by the same token you'll notice that the men who own the clothes foundries don't wear their own styles—not publicly, at any rate. —Maurice Switzer in Leslie's

A Swimming Grindstone.

Some of the fishermen on the river Tyne, in England, are not only ignorant, but stupid. On one occasion two of these fishermen were caught by a heavy freshet and driven out of the river to sea. As the story goes, one of the men saw in the dusk a hoop floating by. The hoop was full of foam.

"We are saved!" exclaimed the man. "Here's a grindstone swimming!"

BE READY FOR EMERGENCIES.

The best way is to always keep a bottle of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine in the house, ready for emergencies. Then when croup or colds come suddenly they can be promptly cured before they have time to reach an acute and dangerous stage. To meet this requirement we have put the syrup up in family size bottles which contain nearly three times as much as the 25-cent bottle and sell at 60 cents.

War Efficiency and National Prosperity

More than a billion and a half dollars distributed in Canada for exported agricultural produce and the products of labor in the fiscal year ending March 31, 1918, has kept Canada busy and prosperous in spite of the war.

CANADA'S production in such enormous quantities was made possible only by the money received through Canada's War Loans. Canada thus was enabled to assist the Allies in their purchases here by establishing financial credits for their use in this country.

CANADA'S war loans not only have sustained Canada's war effort, but they have kept the wheels of production turning as they never turned before.

This is the flood of cash which poured in to Canada's farms for their exports in the fiscal year 1918, for:—

Butter	$ 2,000,000
Cheese	36,602,000
Eggs	2,271,000
Oats	37,644,000
Wheat	366,341,000
Flour	95,896,000
Meats	76,729,000
Vegetables	19,034,000

Over six hundred and thirty-six million dollars for exported farm products alone!

\+ + +

AND the workers of Canada also shared greatly in Canada's export trade.

For their products there was distributed in Canada, during the year:—

Munitions	$450,000,000
Metals	92,083,000
Vehicles	22,776,000
Wood Pulp and Paper	59,599,000

These huge sums were spent in Canada by the Allies.

Canada's own war expenditure for the fiscal year 1918 was $342,762,000.

And the bulk of all these expenditures, the foundation of Canada's prosperity and war effectiveness, was made possible only because the subscribers to Canada's war loans furnished the working capital.

\+ + +

CANADA must keep this great work going—must produce as never before; must work, fight, save and lend as she has never yet done to bring victory and a lasting peace to a war ridden world.

But Canada to-day (thanks to her great export trade), is in a better position now than ever, to carry on.

The Victory Loan 1918 will keep Canada busy, will enable her to maintain her great export business; and it will make Canada more efficient than ever, because her prosperity will not be diminished and her determination to work, fight and win will be stronger than it has ever been before.

Some Impressive Facts Concerning British Efforts in the Great World War

What Great Britain has done in this war is made the subject of an appreciative leader in the "Scientific American," based on figures supplied by the British War Commission in the United States.

The total enlistment throughout the British Empire during the past four years (says the Scientific American) has been 7,500,000 soldiers; and of these, 60 per cent., or 4,500,000 were raised in England itself; the proportion for England and Wales combined being 70 per cent.

The greatest contribution that can be made for any cause is that of one's life and limb. In the four years of the war the British casualties have amounted to over 2,500,000. Of these, over 500,000 have been killed, and at least at equal number so terribly wounded and broken that they will never be able to support themselves. So that over 1,000,000 British have been sacrificed in the four years of the war.

What this means will be understood by those citizens of New York, 100,000 strong, who took part in the famous Sound Money parade some 20 years ago. The men went by, 16 abreast, at a good swinging gait and without any considerable pause; nevertheless it took over 12 hours for that host to pass the reviewing stand.

Hence, if those 500,000 slain Britons could be called back and were joined by their still-alive but crippled compatriots, and the whole were to parade through the same streets and avenues of our city, it would take a week and a half of daylight for the sad procession to go by.

Furthermore, since the first four-and-a-half million soldiers of the British armies were volunteers, it is certain that they included the keenest young manhood of the Empire. From the universities alone at the outset of the war there went into service, we are told, some 8,000 under-graduates. Among these losses must be included practically all the officers and men of the small but highly efficient Regular Army which Great Britain threw into Flanders at the outset of the war to engage the right wing of the German army.

THE MOTHER COUNTRY LEADS.

That the mother country has led rather than followed the children of her Empire in sacrifice, is shown by the fact that—

One man out of ever 7 1-2 of the population of England and Scotland is in the army.

One in every 10 1-5 in Wales.

One in every 26 1-3 in Ireland; and

One in every 15 in the overseas dominions.

Again, no surer test can be found of the service and sacrifice of a people than to compare the percentage of casualties suffered with the percentage of enlistment. On this basis we find that England and Wales provided 70 per cent. of the enlistment and suffered 76 per cent. of the casualties.

Scotland's enlistment was 8 per cent. of the total and her casualties 10 per cent.

Ireland provided 6 per cent. and her casualties were 6 per cent.

The Dominions and Colonies provided 16 per cent. of this Empire's forces and suffered 8 per cent. of the total casualties.

"WHERE ARE THE BRITISH TROOPS?"

In answer to the frequent question (which originated, by the way, in Hun propaganda), "Where are the British troops?" the War Commission replies that they are fighting on 17 separate fronts scattered throughout the world. Outside of Belgium and France, British troops have been fighting in Italy, in Serbia, in Greece, in Russia, in North, East and West Africa, and in China; while simultaneously they have carried on elaborate, extensive, and, because of climatic difficulties, extremely difficulty campaigns in Palestine and Mesopotamia.

Of the debt of the whole alliance to the British Navy it is superfluous to speak. If Germany could have overthe British Navy it is superfluous to be master of Europe, and her fleets and armies would be thundering at the gates of America. Under the protection of its fleet, the British merchant marine has transported 13,000,000 men, 2,000,000 horses and mules, 500,000 vehicles, 25,000,000 tons of explosives, 50,000,000 tons of oil and fuel, and 130,000,000 tons of food and other stores.

Treating a Corn.

Whether a corn is treated at home or by a chiropodist, the treatment is the same. It consists of applying to the surface an acid (the most commonly used being salicylic) mixed with collodion and ether. The ether evaporates, leaving a layer of collodion to hold the acid while this does its work. After applying this regularly for four or five days the four is soaked in hot water, when the corn can be picked out in one piece, leaving a hole, which quickly fills up. Some chiropodists eat the corn out by repeated applications of nitric acid, picking away the parts of the corn destroyed at each treatment. Every time you cut a corn yourself you run the risk of blood poisoning.—New York World.

Nothing Doing.

A little four-year-old, a most attractive little fairy, suddenly lost interest in Sunday school. She had enjoyed so much learning about Moses that her mother could not understand the change of attitude.

"Why don't you want to go, daughter?" she asked.

"Oh," was the astonishing reply, "I don't like to go to Sunday school since Moses died."—Woman's Home Companion.

ENERGY OF THE SUN.

Intensity of the Light and Heat It Sheds Upon Our Universe.

By a series of curious experiments scientific men have gained a fair idea of the intensity of light and heat from the sun as compared with earthly instruments.

When the sun is at the zenith, or directly overhead, its light is equal to seventy-five electric lights placed only three feet from the observer. Yet an electric light is too dazzling for any one to gaze steadily at it. And as compared with Sirius, which is the brightest in the heavens the light of the sun is 20,000,000 times more brilliant.

The intensity of solar heat on our globe varies greatly, in a way that sunlight does not, the former being affected by locations, altitudes, changes of the atmosphere and many causes.

It has been estimated, however, that the total quantity of heat which the earth receives from the sun each year is enough to melt a layer of ice covering the entire globe and having a thickness of a hundred feet.

But this is only a very small portion of the whole amount of heat given out by the sun. The total solar heat is enough to melt every day a layer of ice ten and one-half miles thick, about the entire sun, or, to take Professor Tyndall's comparison, the sun's heat emitted in one hour is equal to that produced by burning a seam of coal sixteen and one-half miles thick.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

CONCEITED JAILBIRDS.

To Have Been In Prison Is a Mark of Culture In Nigeria.

In the land of the Niger, says Mr. P. Amaury Talbot in the London Times, little or no stigma attaches to jailbirds.

In fact, prison residence is often regarded as conferring the mark of culture and distinction. The last governor of Southern Nigeria once complimented a chief of the interior on his knowledge of English, to which the man replied with a proud air: "Of course I be fit to talk English mouth! I learn all that when I live long time for prison."

Such residence is indeed looked upon as giving a sort of official status. At Calabar some prisoners were out cleaning the road when a clerk, dressed in the height of fashion, high collar, patent leather boots and the smartest of suits, went by. In passing he flicked one of the bending laborers with a little swagger cane he was carrying. At once the aggrieved party sprang erect. "What!" he exclaimed, with splendid contempt. "You dare touch me! You factory man! Look-a me!" Here he pointed to the broad arrows prominently displayed over his simple vest and loin cloth. "I be government man! See here!"

And the dandy passed on thoroughly abashed.

The Fattest Race.

How is it that the Danes as a race are fat? Professor Lyde states that "from one end of Denmark to the other you will not find a really thin man." And he gives rather a quaint reason for it. "The growth of dairy farming in Denmark tends to make men lazy. The private houses adjoin the byres, which are kept at a uniformly warm temperature, and the people are employed in warm buildings, living chiefly on milk and cereals. The men get so lazy that they will not take the trouble to cut up their food." And then comes this delightful conclusion: "This state of things has produced a nation of housewives who excel all others in varieties of sandwiches, which can be munched all day long." And thus is produced the fattest race in Europe, and we get a hint for a real rest cure.—Manchester Guardian.

Aesthetics and Health.

"The connection between individual health and beauty, though seldom recognized in theory, is intimate in practice," says the New York Medical Journal. True, extravagant ideas of what is beautiful have caused much nuisance and harm in the way of absurd and unhealthy fashions of dress, but it is to the aesthetic instinct of people that we owe most of sanitary improvement. The removal of filth, so important to public health, and cleanliness in general, are due in a large part to a dislike for ugliness.

Medical science is coming more and more to the idea of enforcing sanitary measures by fostering a public sense of aesthetics. The Journal concludes with rare sense: "One of the chief means for the furthering of public health consists not so much in preaching the need of sanitary conditions as in awakening the sense of beauty."

ARABIAN JUSTICE.

A Desert Problem the Cadi Had No Trouble In Solving.

Two Arabs stopped at an oasis to have luncheon. One had three dates, and the other had five, which they were to eat together. Presently a tranger came up and asked permision to share their meal, which they heerfully granted. After all had aten the stranger thanked them for he food they had given him, left eight ucats and rode away.

The Arab who had the three dates said, "Here is 8 ducats for eight dates—1 ducat for each date; therefore three ducats are mine." But the other Arab argued differently and contended that he should have seven ducats and the first man one. The case was referred to the cadi of the nearest town, who upheld the second man's contention. This is the way he reached his decision:

The three men divided eight dates. There were two-and two-thirds for each, or eight-thirds. The first Arab had three dates, so he contributed nine-thirds to the whole, but he ate eight-thirds himself, so he gave only one-third of a date to the stranger. The second Arab contributed five dates, or fifteen-thirds; he ate eight-thirds himself and gave seven-thirds to the stranger.

So reasoned the cadi, and he gave the first Arab 1 ducat and the second 7 ducats.—Youth's Companion.

TWO CROPS AT ONCE.

Tree Agriculture an Old Story on the Island of Majorca.

Approximately nine-tenths of the arable area of Majorca, one of the Spanish islands in the Mediterranean, is planted out to crop yielding trees. That makes one story agriculture. Then beneath the trees grain is grown. That makes the second story, which may properly be likened to the cyclone cellar.

For miles and miles in every direction that beautiful island is covered with continuous orchards of almonds, olives, figs and carobs, with occasional grafted oak trees, the sweet acorns of which are prized as highly as the chestnut.

This tree agriculture is nothing new, for many of these orchards are of unknown age, and some of them give evidence of having seen generations of men rise, dig awhile and die before Columbus sailed past on his way from Genoa to Gibraltar, and throughout all the years that the white man has striven in America these same old olive and carob trees have been standing there, handing down their harvests of fruit and beans to the men who raised other crops at their feet—crops of wheat, oats, barley, beans and peas.—From "Two Story Farming," by J. Russell Smith, in Century.

Italy's Deep Blue Skies.

The sky of Italy is noted for its clearness. The blue is deeper not because the dust there is finer than in the northern countries, but because in the countries of the north, due to the greater coolness of the air, the vapor more readily condenses upon the dust particles. The dust particles thus become larger and consequently not so effective in turning back the blue rays alone, but others are also reflected, and a grayish effect is produced. In a single location the blue of the sky may appear bluer at one time than another. The sky is oftentimes said to be very blue when some white cumulus clouds are outlined against it. The sky is then a deep blue by contrast with the brilliant white. After a shower, when the lower stratum of air is washed of its coarse dust particles, a deeper and purer blue is the result.

NEARING A DECISION

MEANING OF RECENT VICTORIES ON WESTERN FRONT.

British and French Are Now Equal In Strength to Their Foe, and the Weight of the United States Troops Will Be an Addition to Their Striking Force.

TWO years ago, before Russia was out of the war and Germany was compelled to keep vast armies on the eastern front, she was able to maintain an apparently immovable defence in France and Belgium. The British and French armies battered away in Flanders, in Artois, in Picardy, and in the Champagne country and made little progress.

Particularly heavy were the Allied losses in Artois, where the French struggled in vain to take Vimy Ridge, and later the British suffered huge casualties at Loos. Lens, the railway and mining centre whose possession was of great value to Germany, offered successful resistance to fierce attacks. The German staff with one hand crushing Russia, and with its foot booting Serbia and Roumania, stayed the French and British with the other hand. Now, despite the addition of seventy divisions from the east to her western armies, Germany is not able to avoid the necessity of giving way.

The great change is so obviously significant that it is hardly necessary to point out the meaning. The German power is crumbling. It is not able to endure against a constant attrition. German unified military power is not equal to the power that France and Great Britain have in France, which at the same time are able to maintain large expeditionary forces elsewhere.

France and Great Britain together on the western line now outmatch the Germans, for Americans have not largely participated in recent operations. The presence of the Americans in reserve is of vast importance as giving confidence to Gen. Foch, but it is being demonstrated that the weight of America is not indispensable to swinging the balance against the Kaiser.

The armed forces of Great Britain are more numerous than at any time, and France has as many as ever before. Italy has larger armies than prior to Caporetto. And the armies of Great Britain, France and Italy are equipped as never before. It has taken four years to overhaul the advantage Germany had in preparedness, but at last the European Allies may be regarded as completely mobilized, and the effect is seen.

British inventive genius and manufacturing power have been able to contribute the tanks, which seem the basis of the Allied successes of the last six weeks. The Germans specialized on gas and flame-throwers, and the Allies specialized on air service and on land battleships, and the superiority of British and French judgment has been vindicated. Winston Churchill, a man of imagination, would have won the war at the Dardanelles if his plan had been supported by Great Britain's professional soldiers. But baffled in one direction he turned to another as Minister of Munitions, and, aided by Lloyd George, has sacrificed shipbuilding power to provide the new weapons of offence. This descendant of Marlborough has been little praised and has been dismissed by many as a swashbuckler, but he has the two gifts of imagination and energy, coupled with a courageous willingness to take risks. He is likely to be remembered long after those who have barked against him are forgotten.

The American forces in France, now approaching a million and a half, although temporarily inactive, are not idle. They are being swiftly forged into an instrument that will smash the German line to bits. The work of preparation nears completion, and when the full truth is known justice will be done to the extraordinary work the Americans have already done in France. The digging of the Panama Canal was a great task, but does not approach in magnitude the American achievement in France in less than eighteen months.

It has been generally taken for granted that the American armies would not go into general action until next spring. But the unexpected piercing of the chief German line by the intrepid British opens up alluring prospects. It may well be we are on the eve of events greater than those which have already occurred. If the Germans are compelled to take up a new and floundering retreat during the soggy weather of autumn not much will be left of the German armies by Christmas. Germany is already plainly in semi-panic, and if her morale further gives way she is absolutely gone.

Gen. Foch has before him a momentous decision, but his past record justifies the faith that whether the decision is to strike now or to wait till spring he will judge wisely.

Dandruff is the primary cause of falling hair. This disagreeable condition of the scalp and hair glands is almost certain to cause temporary or permanent baldness.

Loss of hair may also be ascribed to the use of improper shampoos containing irritating substances, animal oils and alcohol, any of which may produce gradual decay of the hair.

Don't use a stale liquid preparation that contains too much alkali (a harmful irritant). The surest, safest and easiest way is to make your own liquid. Buy a carton of Velnor at any drug store. Dissolve one of the small packets into half glass of fresh water and you will have an abundance of non-injurious liquid that will relieve itching of the scalp, falling hair and dandruff also improve the natural color of the hair. Velnor being in concentrated form never spoils and will keep forever.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Very Bad Moral

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Say, there's a new efficiency man and he's some looker," commented the tall brunette in the "beauty parlor" of Reed's dry goods store to the rather shortish, rather blondish young woman who was laying out her manicuring outfit at the table next to the tall brunette's.

Charlotte Day, the rather blonde, rather short, young woman, made no comment.

"Honest, he's stunning," went on her companion. "I saw him when I went up to the stock room for nail files just now. He's the real thing, I'll tell you—none of your namby-pamby, pale-faced floor walkers, either. He never worked in a store before. He was a college professor or something and went in for this efficiency stuff. He's going to give some talks on selling and success at noon hour. You don't want to miss 'em. The one today is called: 'Know your customer.' You don't want to miss it—he's certainly a handy-looking young man."

Charlotte snorted slightly as a short cut to express her lack of interest in the new efficiency man in general and his good looks in particular.

"Say, I'm through with this efficiency dope," she said. "Ever since I came to this place two years ago I've been listening to that kind of thing. The man they had before gave that same idea of 'Know Your Customer.' I was just young enough and foolish enough to take it all in, and I read uplift talks in the paper at night on 'Forging Your Way to the Front.' They all give the same advice. They say if you tend to your little job the best way you know how, why some day you'll be head of your department, or maybe make a hit with somebody and get married to someone who'll appreciate how hard you've worked and everything. Talk about knowing your customers—don't I know every wart on that fat Mrs. Peabody's old face? And don't I know just how many double chins that Armstrong woman has? And talk about being diplomatic—oh, yes, indeed, Mrs. Armstrong, the facial massage does make one dreadfully pale. Not that you would usually need any rouge, but after the massage I'd better put on a little. Oh, I'm sure you don't usually need it.'

"And then this to Mrs. Peabody: 'Just a little of this tonic, Mrs. Peabody. No, indeed, it isn't dye. But this new electric treatment makes the hair look a little dull and you really need a little of this tonic to bring out the natural color of the hair.' And of course she knows and I know that it's straight walnut dye. And that's what I've been doing for two years, kidding them and studying them and saying what they want me to. Where has it got me? Yes, they smile at me and ask for me when they make appointments—but catch them doing anything more. Why, to hear these efficiency men talk you'd think that they were going to ask you home in their limousines and were going to introduce you to their families and get rich husbands for you, or that you were going to be buyer for the department or something. No, indeed," concluded Charlotte, rising and smoothing her diminutive apron. "I'm through. I'm going to act just the way I feel like acting. I have a feeling that it will get me further than the other way."

So Charlotte abandoned her efficiency methods and proceeded to try different tactics. When Mrs. Armstrong came she bluntly announced the presence of an additional chin, and she referred to Mrs. Peabody's hair restorative as dye in a way that made that lady blink with surprise. She told one woman frankly that she was ruining her hair having it waved so often, and another that she would look far better if she didn't get the expensive "transformation" that she was thinking of buying.

Then a well-dressed young man came to have his finger nails manicured, and Charlotte performed her task with none of the customary play of small talk that was calculated to make the customers return.

"How do they look?" asked the man after Charlotte had put on the final high polish.

"If you really want to know," commented Charlotte, thinking only of her resolve to be perfectly frank, "I think they look like fury on a man. The way they were when you came in is the way a man ought to have his nails kept. Now they are shaped and pointed and polished till they look like a woman's. Somehow you're not the sort of man that looks as if he would go in for that sort of thing."

Charlotte noticed the young man's eyes studying her face.

"Still," he said, "it is rather bad business, it seems to me, for you to give that sort of advice. Perhaps you are right, but your game is to get as many customers as you can for your store, isn't it?"

"You talk like one of those efficiency men," commented Charlotte, with a sigh, replacing her implements in neat array on top of the table, and the man hurried away.

Charlotte did not go to the noon-hour talk, although it was the first advantage of the sort that she had missed since her arrival in the store two years before. Instead, she took a walk in an secluded a neighborhood as she could reach within walking distance of the store. She breathed freer and deeper than usual. She really felt, without knowing why, that she had taken a step toward her own emancipation. What if she did lose her job? At least if she did, something might happen—there might be some adventure connected with the next one, and in the rut she had been keeping for two years there was nothing but monotony. She thought of the man she had just manicured. Really he hadn't disliked it because she told him the truth. He had looked at her with interest. She had at least surprised him and that was more than she had ever done to any other customer in two years.

After the lunch hour, when Charlotte was summoned to the office of the new efficiency man, she thought only that perhaps he wanted to see all those who had not attended his talk. She actually did turn a little pale when she realized that he was the same decidedly good-looking young man whose nails she had recently manicured. She noticed that the high polish had been rubbed off. He asked her to take a chair beside his desk, and then he proceeded to give her a little talk on efficiency purely for her own benefit. It was an A, B, C lesson in salesmanship. He assumed that she had never heard anything of the sort before and assured her that if she only plodded ahead in the way he suggested she would reap her reward. Success would be hers—she would work herself out of the rank and file, etc.

Then Charlotte waxed eloquent in reply. In fact, she rose and stood over Mr. Avery Baker's desk and her eyes flashed as she talked to him.

"I'm through with this efficiency game," she announced. "I've been pegging away at it ever since I came, and I'm shampooing the same stupid people and manicuring the same hands and getting the same wages and telling the same lies and hoping the same hopes that I was two years ago. That is, I went on hoping I'd get my reward till this morning I realized that—that there just wasn't any reward. What do you people mean when you talk about forging ahead? Tell me, Mr. Efficiency Man, where is the golden opportunity you're always holding up as an incentive?"

Mr. Avery Baker evaded the question as tactfully as possible and saved his reputation as an expert by assuring Charlotte that her real trouble was that she was a round peg in a square hole. He said he had made a tour of the store that morning and had got his nails manicured not because he cared for high polish—she was really quite right in saying what she did, though it was very bad salesmanship—but to test the work of that department. He had realized that she had the wrong point of view and that is why he had sent for her. Now he knew she had ability and she was no longer to work in the beauty department. She was to be his assistant. She could talk extremely well—that she had just proved—and she could help him in his lessons in salesmanship.

It was only two months later that Avery Baker, after due deliberation, realized that his entire happiness as well as his complete efficiency depended on his marrying Charlotte Day, and Charlotte had in a measure decided that, were the opportunity to arise for her to accept a proposal from Mr. Avery Baker, she would hesitate only long enough for appearances' sake.

"You'll have to admit," laughed Avery, "that I'm some efficiency man. I found you unsuccessful in the beauty parlor and knew right away that you'd double my own efficiency and achieve my complete happiness if you became my life partner."

Charlotte pondered a moment. "Still," she said, "the reward didn't come because I pegged ahead and did my best the way I'd been told. It all began the day I decided I'd break away and forget the efficiency stuff. If I'd gone on as I had for two years I'd be counting Mrs. Armstrong's chins and Mrs. Peabody's warts."

Avery Baker looked quizzically into Charlotte's face. "Perhaps you are right. In your case perhaps it was better to break away. But, Charlotte, dear, from the efficiency man's point of view it is a very unsatisfactory moral for our little romance."

Latin and Hebrew.

For a parallel to Hebrew, which, after having been numbered so very long among the dead languages, is becoming today again a living, spoken tongue, we must turn to Latin, though the analogy is not perfect, if decidedly romantic, in either case. Through all the dreadful days of barbarism in Europe the Roman Catholic church helped to preserve the Latin language from oblivion. When Greek had all but perished from the ken of mankind at large, when even Homer had almost been forgotten, the language of the Caesars still rendered international communication possible.

Expert on Saving.

Millions of persons, according to Freeman Putney, Jr., in the Financial World, decide to save, do it haphazard for a time, then they drop back into careless money habits. They fail because they follow the wrong system.

The wrong way, Mr. Putney points out, is to pay current expenses first and then save what remains. The right way is to make up your mind how much you can save weekly, then lay that amount aside first.

A NERVOUS BREAKDOWN

Miss Kelly Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health.

Newark, N. J.—"For about three years I suffered from nervous breakdown and got so weak I could hardly stand, and had headaches every day. I tried everything I could think of and was under a physician's care for two years. A girl friend had used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and she told me about it. From the first day I took it I began to feel better and now I am well and able to do most any kind of work. I have been recommending the Compound ever since and give you my permission to publish this letter."—Miss FLO KELLY, 476 So. 14th St., Newark, N. J.

The reason this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, was so successful in Miss Kelly's case was because it went to the root of her trouble, restored her to a normal healthy condition and as a result her nervousness disappeared.

Canadian women are right behind the Canadian troops in the trenches. Women nurses are now installed in hospitals 8 miles in the rear of the actual fighting line.

Many of our Canadian women are unable to take up the duties of nursing at the front, but they should know how to take care of their own at home and for this purpose no better book was ever printed than the Medical Adviser—a book containing 1,008 pages, and bound in cloth, with chapters on First Aid, Bandaging and care of Fractures, Taking care of the Sick, Physiology, Hygiene, Mother and Babe, which can be had at most drug stores, or send 50 cents to Dr. Pierce, Courtwright St., Bridgeburg, Ont.

The women at home, who are worn out, should take that reliable temperance, herbal tonic, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Woodstock, Ont.—"For womanly ailments I have found Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription to be excellent. It strengthened and built me up several years ago when I was suffering with a chronic trouble and it also proved to be a splendid tonic during expectancy. I take great pleasure in recommending Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription to all sufferers from woman's weakness."

Give Candy Cascarets to a Bilious, Constipated Child

TO MOTHERS! Each ten cent box of Cascarets, candy cathartic, contains full directions for dose for children aged one year old and upwards. Nothing else "works" the nasty bile, sour fermentations and constipation poison from the tender little bowels so gently, yet so thoroughly. Even cross, feverish, bilious children gladly take Cascarets without being coaxed. Cascarets taste just like candy. Cascarets never gripe the little bowels, never sicken, never injure, but above all, they never disappoint the worried mother.

HERE'S QUICK RELIEF FOR YOUR TIRED, STRAINED MUSCLES

When your muscles become tired and swollen and the joints become stiff, your circulation poor, and your suffering makes you irritable, an application of Sloan's Liniment gives you quick relief—kills pain, starts up a good circulation, relieves congestion. It is easier and cleaner to use than mussy plasters or ointments, acts quickly and does not clog the pores. It does not stain the skin. Made in Canada.

For sprains, strains, bruises, "black and blue" spots, Sloan's Liniment reduces the pain and eases the soreness.

Certainly fine for rheumatism, stiff neck, sciatica, lame back, toothache.

You don't need to rub—it penetrates.

Its use is so universal that you'll consider Sloan's Liniment a friend of the whole family. Generous size bottles at druggists everywhere.

SAVED HIS WILD GOATS.

Emperor Maximilian Was Lucky in Having a Wise Adviser.

Of the great Emperor Maximilian it is told that once when traveling far from home he wore so sad an expression that a courtier asked him what affairs of state could cause so much concern. The emperor replied it was not the state but ibex he was thinking of. In his absence he feared a certain poacher, whom he mentioned by name, would make havoc with the herds. Could the courtier propose any preventive?

The astute person thus addressed immediately suggested a letter to the poacher's wife, signed and sealed by the imperial hand and offering her the best silk dress that could be obtained if the emperor's wild goats were not touched during his absence. And such, alas, is the influence of the sex that history hints the bribe was more effectual than "all the king's horses and all the king's men" in the way of forest rangers and wood reeves.

Maximilian had a preserve of these animals in the Tyrol near the Aachen sea and has left on record some interesting notes and illustrations of the sport he enjoyed among them. One picture represents him in a boat on a lake assisting to catch an ibex in a large net, which may have been good fun, even if it were scarcely sportsmanlike. It was Maximilian, too, who boasted that on one occasion he killed an ibex at 200 yards with a crossbow when his companion had missed it with a gun. Seeing that the "fire tubes" of the period were about the slowest and most awkward weapons any one could imagine, the feat was scarcely to be wondered at.—London Globe.

END OF THE EARTH.

That Great Tragedy May Be 2,000,000 or 95,000,000 Years Away.

Scientists tell us that life on the earth began about 2,000,000 years ago. It has generally been accepted that life will last for 95,000,000 years.

Ninety-five million years is a fairly long time. None of us who are alive today need worry about what will take place 95,000,000 years hence. Even the most altruistic can scarcely be inspired by love for an inconceivably remote posterity.

But the French savants are altogether disturbing. Here comes one, M. Verronet, who says that the earth will permanently freeze within the next 2,000,000 years and that life will vanish. This is bringing the tragedy nearer home. We would gladly accept the older reckoning.

Verronet places mankind of today about midway between the beginning and the end. He computes that in the future life will exist as long as it has already existed. He specifies only one forty-eighth as long a life as those who have studied in the past.

There is only one consolation to be derived from the Verronet reckoning. As far as the influence of today is concerned 2,000,000 years is as good as 95,000,000. In either event those who are comfortably laboring today cannot expect to be lovingly remembered when the cataclysm of ice makes the earth a barren wilderness.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

DANDRUFF MAKES HAIR FALL OUT

A small bottle of "Danderine" keeps hair thick, strong, beautiful.

Girls! Try this! Doubles beauty of your hair in a few moments.

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance.

Get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine for a few cents at any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all—you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine.

THE "ENTENTE CORDIALE."

Bismarck Once Gave a Striking Definition of the Term.

In the newspapers of today we very often find the words entente cordiale. Most readers understand the meaning of the expression, but it is rather difficult to make a translation that expresses the exact meaning of the original French. Prince Bismarck gave a good explanation when his daughter asked him what the entente cordiale really was.

"Well," he said, "it is not so easy to define literally. It means a cordial understanding, but it also has a little different significance. For example: You were in the courtyard this morning when I came from the garden with Nero. Diana was in the yard, gnawing a large bone. My Nero saw her and ran to seize the bone. Then there was a little fight, until I struck them a few sharp blows with my cane.

"After that the bone lay in the middle of the court, while both dogs stood off at some distance and looked eagerly at it. Each dog, in fact, was as anxious to keep the other away as he was afraid of my cane, and therefore neither ventured to seize it. You see, that is what they call in diplomatic circles an entente cordiale." — Youth's Companion.

USED FOR SHAVING.

Many men are troubled, more particularly in the cold weather, with a sort of roughness of the skin or eczema caused by shaving. The application of Dr. Chase's Ointment after the shave soon cures the trouble and by using it after each shave you keep the skin soft and prevent irritation and soreness. Because of its antiseptic qualities this ointment prevents and cures Barber's Itch.

Isaac and Rebekah. Gen. 24.

Golden Text: Let not kindness and truth forsake thee; so shalt thou find favour and good understanding in the sight of God and man. Prov. 3, 3-4.

1. Verse 1. Should a good old man be as bright in his mind and as glad in his heart as when he was younger? Why?

2. Verses 2-9. What would you say is the value of a faithful workman, or foreman, or an absolutely trustworthy confidential secretary to an employer

3. What value, if any, is an oath over a straight promise to bind the conscience of an intelligent man?

4. Verses 2-9. Isaac was 36 years old when Abraham, his father, sent his servant to seek him a wife. Would you say that every man should marry, and if so, at what age?

5. If a son is not interested to get a wife, ought his parents to put pressure on him to do so?

6. What importance should be attached to nationality, family, and religion, as compared with personality, in choosing a wife, or accepting a husband?

7. How much does God do in the selection of the wife of a truly good man?

8. Verses 2-9. Would you say or not and why ,that all true marriages are made in heaven?

9. Verses 10-20. If an industrious man in an honorable calling constantly seeks help from God, may he with safety quiet his heart from all anxiety, and be assured of success? Why?

10. How much consideration ought a woman, when her hand is sought in marriage, give to her suitor's wordly possessions?

11. Verses 10-20. If two salesmen, both Christian men of equal ability, start out to sell goods, and one prays for success with every prospect, while the other does not, what would be the difference, if any, in in their degree of success?

12. Whether a man is rich or poor, which woman would make him the better wife, other things being equal, one who knows how to work, or one who has been raised in luxury without work? Why?

13. Verses 21-28. What is the difference in the restful assurance produced by faith, and that which comes from faith being actually realized through fact?

14. Verses 29-42. Who was Laban, and what part does he play in Bible history?

15. Why is it that presents form such an important part in courtship and marriage?

16. Verses 43-49. Of two young women, the one frank, cheerful, communicative and obliging; the other timid, reserved and self contained, which is the more likely to get a good husband? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by the members of the Club.)

17. Verses 50-53. Why would you say, or not, that all the good things which we get come from the Lord?

18. Verses 54-61. What can you say in favour of the man who is in a hurry to get home as soon as he has finished his business?

19. Verses 62-67. When you know a man meditates in the fields at night, how would you estimate his general character?

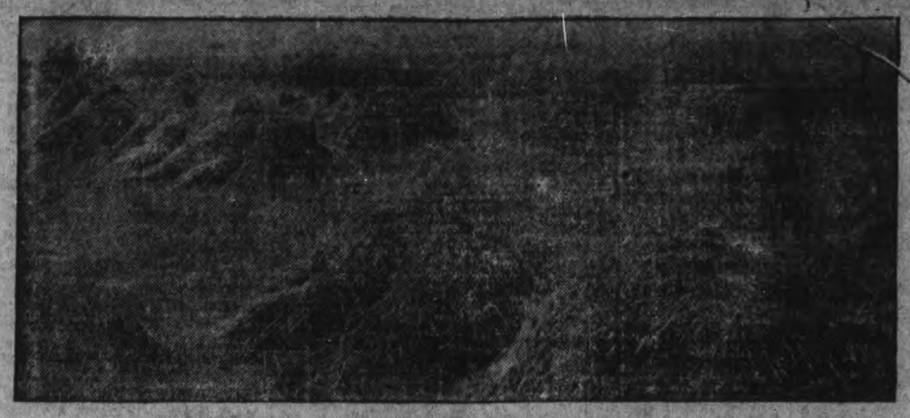
THE VALUE OF IRRIGATION



Irrigated Wheat, 1918, Brooks, Alberta.

Alfalfa, Brooks, Alberta, 1918.

Cantaloupes, grown with Irrigation, Duchess, Alberta.

THE finest crops in the country are to be seen on the irrigated land in Southern Alberta." This is a remark invariably made by those who have travelled through Western Canada. And there is no doubt that this remark is true if all the crops on irrigated land in Alberta are as good as those near Brooks. This is a small town on the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway, about a hundred miles from the city of Calgary, and the centre of one of the most fertile pieces of country on the continent. Though sparsely settled, it is estimated that a quarter of a million bushels of wheat will be harvested from irrigated lands in this district this year. Many fields will yield from thirty to forty bushels to the acre. While there is nothing extraordinary about yields of this kind, such being obtainable every year, the fields upon which water has been applied afford a very striking contrast to those to which no water has been applied. The summer having been exceptionally dry and hot has made the crops on non-irrigated land in this territory in some cases almost a total failure. But where water has been applied healthy crops will not only remunerate the farmer for his labor and the capital invested in his land, but will also help to fill the Allies' granaries.

It is not only the older settlers who have these large crops. South of Brooks a farmer who came to Alberta last fall had about two hundred acres sown to wheat on new breaking. Parts of it were irrigated in the fall and twice in the spring and summer. Here a yield of forty bushels to the acre is assured. Other parts which were irrigated twice this spring and summer but not at all last fall, should yield up to thirty-five bushels to the acre. Still other parts were irrigated once only, this year, and the yield will not be so good. Altogether this farmer's crop on two hundred acres should average about thirty-five bushels to the acre, the returns from which at present market prices being not at all bad for the first year's working. One of the best yields is that of a farmer who settled in Alberta not quite two years ago. This field consists of ninety acres of wheat which the owner anticipates will thresh out at forty bushels to the acre. Two brothers who came from Nebraska two years ago with very little capital expect to thresh from their crop of two hundred acres of wheat at least thirty bushels to the acre. Doubtless there are several other cases similar to these.

Large crops of oats, barley, all kinds of grasses, clovers and alfalfa are also to be seen on land where water has been applied. The diversity and abundance of the crops that can be grown here surprise one. It is not difficult to realize the immense boon water is. Grains, grasses, alfalfa, vegetables, small fruits yield bountiful crops under its magic spell. Assuming the farmer, as it does of remunerative crops every year, it will make this part of Alberta one of the most prosperous districts on the continent.

There irrigated lands have immense possibilities in the raising of live stock, and their importance in this respect cannot be too greatly emphasized. The enormous crops of alfalfa and other fodder crops that can be grown, combined with the healthy climate, make the country an ideal one for the raising and finishing of cattle, sheep and hogs. Already there have been some great successes that indicate what can be done in this branch of farming. Unquestionably there is a great opportunity for the development of this industry here, conditions being ideal, less capital being required than on higher priced land in other parts of the continent, while results as satisfactory as anywhere may be looked for.

Look and Feel Clean, Sweet and Fresh Every Day

Drink a glass of real hot water before breakfast to wash out poisons.

Life is not merely to live, but to live well, eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, look well. What a glorious condition to attain, and yet how very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatism; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store which will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

Buckwheat cakes require a little molasses in them to make them entirely palatable.

Many of the new blouse collars can be worn successfully outside the coat.

To be five inches from the ground is an excellent rule for all skirts to follow.

The plain collarless neckline is very fashionable for those to whom it is becoming.

Some of the Parisian designs show dresses with low waists and draped skirts.

Black satin frocks are in such tremendous favour that one sees them on every hand.

Department of Agriculture Report of Farm Conditions

Fall Work on the Farm Has Made Good Progress During the Past Week.

The following is a summary of reports made by Agricultural Representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:—

Fall work on the farm has made good progress during the past week in spite of varying weather conditions. Some Counties in Eastern Ontario report too much rain, in fact rain has interfered with the harvesting of the corn crop. From Western Ontario on the other hand it is reported that there has not been sufficient rain in some Counties to give the fall wheat as strong a growth as might be desired. On the whole, however, corn is being well harvested and the silos are being filled to overflowing.

Fall wheat is also looking very healthy and the acreage seems to be well up to previous years in spite of the fact that many farmers are planning to put in considerable spring wheat owing to the success of the past season. One farmer reports having harvested Marquis wheat sown last spring at a yield of 50 bus to the acre.

Sugar beets in Western Ontario Counties are showing a good yield and in many cases will bring the growers about $10 per ton. Tobacco in Essex County is being sold at 28c to 52c per lb.

Potatoes are yielding around average and are retailing at from $1.50 to $2.25 per bag. Seed potatoes are being shipped from Fort William at $2.10 per bag f.o.b. shipping point.

Apple picking is nearly completed and it is mentioned that the closing of the schools in some sections owing to the influenza epidemic released a good deal of labor for this purpose Norfolk Fruit Growers' Association has already shipped about 25 carloads to the West and there are about 60 more cars yet to ship.

Flax is being shipped from Norfolk County in carload lots for Ireland as a result of the response to the call for growing flax during the past season.

Live Stock conditions are about normal with a strong market demand and prices for live stock products. The feed situation is favorably reported upon, but very few Counties have any surplus hay and any offering commands high prices.

Dawson's Corner in Flanders

By ALURED F. OZANNE

Everyone who has soldiered in Flanders knows Dawson's Corner, and everyone who knows Dawson's Corner cordially detests it. As you stand there, only do not stand for too long a time, you notice that on the left hand side of the road festoons of rattas hang like bunting from wire lines, for every foot of the road is overlooked, not only by the "sausages" up in the sky, but also by the enemy's front line trenches.

At the side of the road is a small concrete dugout, at the entrance of which is a Strombos horn which sends forth a wailing note of warning as a hostile gas attack is launched. A military policeman, wearing an armlet of blue cloth with the word "Traffic" in red letters, stands at the corner to direct parties on their way to conrol the traffic at night.

One cannot envy the lot of those to whom fate has assigned the post of traffic sentry at Dawson's Corner The German gunners have an unhonorable familiarity with the locality, and can be trusted to create a miniature inferno there at any hour of the day or night that they feel so disposed. Huge shell-crators in the neighboring fields bear eloquent testimony as to the unhealthiness of the district, and, although the road at first sight does not appear to have suffered much a closer inspection reveals the fact that repairs have been recently executed. The men of the Labor Company do their work very thoroughly, and they are soon on the spot after the nightly "hate."

Dawson's Corner in the brilliant sunshine looks innocent enough to the casual observer, and at times one almost wonders how those craters in the fields got there. There is something ominous about the place, however. A notice board on the left informs one that the road going East must not be used by any vehicles, except ambulances, between the hours of sunrise and sunset. Another board directs that during the hours of daylight, parties of men must proceed in groups of not more than four and an interval of one hundred yards must be maintained between each group. Yet another board exhorts drivers of cars, lorries, etc., using the main road to proceed at a slow pace to avoid raising the dust, thereby drawing hostile shell-fire. Incidentally the policeman is here to see that these regulations are observed.

Dawson's Corner is seen at its worst after sunset. Then the mighty procession of ammunition wagons en route to the batteries in the sector, starts upon its way. There are mule-drawn limbers, there axles and wheel spokes swathed in straw, bringing fodder to the 18 pounder and 4.5-inch field batteries; evil smelling three ton motor lorries bringing the "heavy stuff" for the 6 inch, 8-inch and 9.2 siegé batteries. On they go, down roads, every inch of which has been "registered" over and over again by hostile batteries, and Dawson's Corner comes in for its fair share of attention. Yet the military policeman stands there, directing the traffic as coolly as though he were on point duty at Piccadilly Circus.

Every variety of "frightfulness" finds its way to Dawson's Corner. High explosive shrapnel bursts in the sky, sending a hail of lead and splintered steel swishing down on man and beast; 5.9's tear up the road, no matyet the never-ending procession moves the damage ere morning; gas shells are arriving in constant succession; yet the never-ending procesion moves on in single file, while the other side of the road the "empties" are wending their way homewards.

That, after all, is the whole point. The stuff gets through in spite of Fritz.

Reported From Defiance Ohio.

"Going to France?" asked a traveling man at the station of a negro soldier.

"No, sah! I'se not going to France," replied the dusky soldier. "I'se goin' to Berlin, but I may stop in France for a short time on de way."

Important Inter-Allied Conference to be Held Immediately in Paris

Col. E. M. House Has Arrived in France and Will Represent the United States.

COMPLETE UNITY

Special to the Examiner.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 25. — Word was received to-day of the arrival in France of Col. E. M. House, and revealed the fact that he has been sent to Europe by the President on another important diplomatic mission. He sailed about a week ago from an Atlantic port but his departure was kept a strict secret, except in confidential administration circles. It is presumed that Col House will represent the United States Government in the proposed inter-allied diplomatic council, which has been suggested to discuss war aims.

At an important inter-allied conference to be held immediately in Paris, problems growing out of the war as a result of Germany's peace offensive, will be threshed out to accomplish complete unity on the diplomatic front of America and her allies.

Col. E. M. House, President Wilson's confidential adviser, who has just arrived in France, and General Bliss, representing the War Department, who is already there, will constitute America's team at the big conference.

OFFICIALLY ANNOUNCED.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25. — Colonel House, President Wilson's confidential adviser, was sent to Europe as a personal adviser of the president on an official mission. This announcement is authorized officially, but further information is withheld. It is understood, however, that the visit of Col. House to Europe at this time is connected with Germany's plea for an armistice and peace, which is now before the allied governments for a decision. Col. House very probably is authorized to represent the president in discussions with representatives of the allied governments.

FRANK JENNE Says:

These overcoats are obtainable in greys, blues, browns and fancy effects. "Come to me."

BURGOMASTER HAS BEEN RELEASED

Canadian Press:

LONDON, Oct. 25.—Burgomaster Adaloph Max, of Brussels, who has been held by the Germans at Turnhout, Belgium, has been released, according to the Vaterland of The Hague, in which it also is reported that other political prisoners have been set free.

Kitchener Was Betrayed

Former Russian Empress Kept Germany Informed of Allies' Plans.

Canadian Press:

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—The former Czarina of Russia was directly responsible for the death of Lord Kitchener, according to Henry W. Mapp, head of the Salvation Army in Russia, who has just returned here from that country. Mapp declared to-day that a telegram from the Czarina's apartment in the winter palace at Petrograd, to the Kaiser at Potsdam, betrayed Kitchener to the Germans, who torpedoed his ship off the Orkneys as he started on a mission to Russia. Mapp asserted that all Allied war plans that came to the knowledge of the Russian Empress were immediately passed along to Berlin and that only the Russian revolt saved the Allied cause from disaster through her treachery.

Big Offensive on the Piave

Four Armies Are Engaged—List of Places Captured.

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, Oct. 25.—A big offensive has been begun on the Piave front in Italy by the British and Italians, according to a despatch to the Evening News to-day.

Four armies are engaged.

Italian patrols have entered Alono. The attack is progressing satisfactorily. It is also learned that Italian troops have taken Grevetrapa, Dopoli and Maggiore Island in the Piave.

New Order-in-Council Will be Explained to Labour Men

Measure Was Passed in a Hurry to Meet Railway Situation.

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Oct. 25.— The Government will probably call the representatives of organized labour to Ottawa next week for a conference in regard to the whole labour situation, especially concerning the recent order-in-council prohibiting strikes and lockouts during the war and the objects sought by that order. The opposition which has arisen to the order-in-council is, the government believes, due in large measure to a misunderstanding and lack of appreciation of the need of the situation. An effort will be made at the forthcoming conference to secure the co-operation of the labour men in carrying out the intent of the order and the facts of the general labour situation, especially with regard to coal mining and transportation will be frankly and fully placed before them by the Prime Minister. It is expected that the summary passing of the order was due to a notification received by the government some days ago from the Brotherhood of Railway Employees intimating that a general strike might be called for Monday failing the satisfactory adjustment of the men's claims by the Railway War Board. The imminence of a strike tying up the whole transportation business of the country made quick action by the government necessary, and it is claimed there was no time to summon the labour representatives to Ottawa for a conference before passing the order-in-council. It is understood that there will be a modification of the recent order-in-council forbidding meetings, where a foreign tongue is spoken. The modified order will permit such meetings to be had in the case of a legitimate gathering of the Trades Union called to discuss Union matters.

Americans Successful

Yanks Attacked Over a Two Mile Front and Cleared Out Several Woods.

(United Press Service.)

(By Fred S. Ferguson.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, Oct. 25. — The Americans have won important new successes on both sides of the Meuse.

Attacking over two miles of a front east of the river yesterday, they cleaned out four woods which were full with machine-gun nests and now are within a mile and a half of the important village of Damvillers. Another attack carried out simultaneously northwest of Bantheville, resulted in the capture of Grand Pre Farm (a mile and a quarter northwest of the village). In the Aicreuille region (northeast of Bantheville), the Americans, attacking on both sides of the And-on-Brook drove into the Freya Steilung, the new defense line which the Germans have established.

Widow's Annuity Has Prior Claims

TORONTO, Oct. 25.—The estate of the late F. J. Daly, of Peterboro, not proving sufficient to provide for the annuity left the widow and also several legacies the executors asked Mr. Justice Rose for an interpretation of the will. At Osgoode Hall yesterday his Lordship gave judgment that the widow's annuity was the first charge on the estate ,and provided there was a deficiency the legacies must abate proportionately. Costs were allowed out of the estate.

D. O'Connell, for executors and residuary legatees, moved for order construing will of F. J. Daly. D. W. Dumble, K.C., or children of John Dorgan and children of Catherine Daly, legatees. E. C. Cattanach for Official Guardian. V. J. McElderry (Peterboro) for widow of testator and for Mary Croft. F J. Hughes for Irene Gibbons and other legatees.

MILITARY FUNERAL FOR PTE. H. YORK

The funeral of the late Pte, Herbert York will not take place until tomorrow afternoon. It will be a military funeral.

Submarine Offensive

Germany is Stronger Than Ever in Submarine Power, Says Sir Eric Geddes.

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, Oct. 25.—Germany is stronger than ever as far as her submarine powers are concerned, and by the end of this year will be able to renew an extensive submarine offensive, declared Sir Eric Geddes, First Lord of the Admiralty, in an interview here upon his return from the United States. Replying in detail regarding the activities of the British navy referred to in the American Trafalgar Day resolutions, Sir Eric said that it was the tradition, privilege and pride of the navy to have borne the brunt of the sea war and that no part of that duty was carried out with greater zeal or more personal affection than the conveying and escorting of American soldiers.

BROOMS MAY BE CHEAPER

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—When the housewife protested to the grocery boy against paying $1.50 for a carpet broom and wondered why such a price for a weapon that used to sell for a quarter, the boy reminded her that our soldiers were sweeping the Germans out of France.

But there is hope for broom buyers according to the estimates of the Department of Agriculture; which put the broom corn crop of brush this year at 70,500 tons. Last years the crop was only 51,838 tons, and in 1916, only 38,726 tons.

These figures give one of the excuses for the unheard-of price of brooms. Two short crops in succession, demand of farmers or better profits, higher costs of manufacture, and increased call for the product both in America and Europe are pleaded by dealers, though prices are beginning to yield a little.

HEAVY SHELLING

(United Press.)

(By Lowell Mellett.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Oct. 25.—The British, driving on Maubeuge, have extended their line of attack northward to the vicinity of Valenciennes. They advanced on this whole front of nearly thirty-five miles yesterday and last night, progressing two miles at some points. The western border of the huge Mormal Forest and the western outskirts of Le Quesnoy were reached. Desperate German resistance at Maing and Vendegies Sur Ecaillon resulted in a deep pocket being formed south of Valenciennes, which the enemy must soon evacuate or risk losing a great number of prisoners. The British are adhering to the plan of not giving the Germans even a moment's peace, while Gen. Byng and Gen. Rawlinson are pushing eastward south of Valenciennes, Gen. Horn's army is trampling out the enemy's defences north of that city, and at the same time, acquiring all the advantageous positions on the west bank of the Escaut canal, which has been crossed at several points.

New Bridges.

British engineers have been compelled to build an unequalled number of bridges as the result of the Germans cutting the banks of the canal and flooding wide areas north and south of Valenciennes.

The British artillery, facing the flooded regions, unloosed a storm of shells yesterday such as has seldom been seen since the day of regular trench warfare. The bursting shells spouted up the water to great heights giving the impression of a naval battle. The Germans reciprocated as best they could, but it was a sorry demonstration, illustrating once more the Allies complete preponderance in guns and ammunition.

ANOTHER OFFENSIVE

French Troops Have Crossed the Lys Canal—A New Attack.

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, Oct. 25.—French troops in Flanders have crossed the Lys Canal and captured the Deynze-Courtrai Road, between Peteghem and Olsen, a front of about three miles, according to battle front despatches received here to-day.

In the Serre Valley the French attack begun this morning has resulted in the capture of Vesles and Pierrepont, northeast of Laon. Laferte has been surrounded, and the Serre has been crossed between Crecy and Mortiers.

THE EPIDEMIC IS WORSE IN TORONTO

Situation Improved in Some Parts of the Province.

Canadian Press:

TORONTO, Oct. 25.— Although the situation in regard to Spanish influenza is somewhat worse in Toronto to-day, encouraging despatches continue to be received from all other sections of Ontario. That the epidemic is on the wane is the opinion of Medical Health authorities all over the province. Announcements made in Toronto yesterday to the effect that hospital accommodation was not so severely taxed, may be responsible in some measure for the increased demand to-day. Doctors believe that although official figures show an increase in the number of cases admitted to the local hospitals, these cases have been receiving private treatment at their homes and are now seeking entrance to institutions.

ONE WAY TO BRING FOOD PRICES DOWN.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24. — Immediately following the announcement of an investigation by the Federal Food Board for alleged profiteering in oranges and lemons, the price of the former dropped from $3 to $4 per box at public auction here today.

Heavy Fighting Taking Place at Many Points on the Western Battlefront

German Defences Have Been Penetrated at a Number of Places —Prisoners Taken.

OFFICIAL DESPATCHES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

WITH THE ALLIED ARMIES IN FRANCE AND BELGIUM, Oct. 25.—Fighting which compares in fierceness to almost any in the war continued through the night on the field of the great battle north and south of Valenciennes. Belated reports indicate that the British have entered the German defenses, gaining considerable ground and pressing eastward slowly but surely.

The British have captured Maing, southwest of Valenciennes, and have also captured Veudegies-Sur-Ecaillon, on the front below Valenciennes. A German counter-attack was repulsed.

The Germans are shelling Denain (five miles southwest of Valenciennes) where 10,000 civilians are huddled together. Ther are more than 60,000 others in the immediate vicinity. The British army and French and American relief organizations are feeding them. Despite the bombardment, the civilians are cheerful and are celebrating their release from Hun domination by decorating all their homes with flags.

On French Front.

PARIS, Oct. 25. — On the Aisne front east of Rethel, French troops have captured the village of Ambly and Fleury, taking 100 prisoners, the War Office announces to-day.

In the town of St. Amand, north of Valenciennes, which has been captured by the British, the Germans left 11,000 inhabitants and 1,000 sick persons from that region who were in a hospital in the centre of the town. On the following day, October 22, the Germans bombarded St. Amand, directing particular attention to the hospital. A large number of the patients were killed.

On Serbian Front.

LONDON, Oct. 25.—The Serbian official statement of yesterday says:

Serbian troops have defeated the enemy's armies in the Valley of Great Morava River. The enemy is retreating in disorder towards the north. We liberated Paracin (in the Morava Valley, 40 miles northeast of Nish), Varvazin and Beloushitch, and captured more than 200 prisoners. We are successfully advancing towards the north.

On Belgian Front.

HAVRE, Oct. 22.—A German assault in force northwest of Ghent was repulsed with heavy losses, the Belgian War Office announced to-day.

Fierce Fighting.

WITH THE ALLIED ARMIES IN FRANCE, Oct. 25.—Ferce fighting was taking place to-day on the battle front in the region of Valenciennes, especially south of the town. The British have gained ground at almost every point along the front.

LONDON, Oct. 25.— French forces, advancing north-eastward between the Oise and Peron, tributary of the Serre, have penetrated the Village of Villers-Le-Sec and surrounded the Village of La Ferte, north-east of Villers. The French also have made an advance further east along the Serre and the Souche.

THIS DAY IN THE WAR.

Oct. 25, 1917—Berlin announces 10,000 Italians captured.

Oct. 25, 1916—French take Douamont fort, Verdun.

Oct. 26, 1915—French defeat Bulgars at Krivolak.

Oct. 25, 1914—Italy lands force at Avlona, Albania, ostensibly for sanitary work.

Demonstration In Germany

Crowds Demanded the Abdication of Emperor Bill.

(Special to The Examiner.)

PARIS, Oct. 25. — Enormous crowds gathered before the Reichstag building in Berlin, demanded the abdication of the Kaiser and the establishment of a republic, according to information received here. The crowds had collected to pay tribute to Karl Liebknecht, Socialist leader, recently released after a long imprisonment for political opposition to the German government, according to despatches received by the newspaper from Zurich. After frenziedly acclaiming Liebknecht, the people hoisted him into a vehicle filled with flowers. Amidst wild cheers, Liebknecht declared "the people's hour has arrived."

PRESIDENT WILSON APPEALS TO PEOPLE

Asks for Return of Democratic Congress in November.

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—President Wilson to-day issued an appeal to the people to return a Democratic Congress in the November elections if they approve of his course in this critical period. "A return of a Republican majority to either House of the Congress," the President said, "would be certainly interpreted on the other side of the water as a repudiation of my leadership."

The President said he would accept the country's verdict without cavil, but that if it was adverse, the power to administer the great trust assigned to him would be seriously impaired.

Churches Will Remain Closed On Sunday

Dr. C. H. Amys, Medical Officer of Health, announced to-day that the churches of the city would not be permitted to open on Sunday. "The influenza epidemic has not sufficiently abated to justify any change in the order," said Dr. Amys.

Paper Controller About to Order Cutting Off of Unpaid Subscriptions.

AT a public hearing in Ottawa last week in connection with paper conservation, the Paper Controller for Canada intimated that regulations about to be issued would include one to the effect that:

Publishers of daily newspapers must cease sending their newspapers to subscribers three months in arrears unless subscriptions be definitely renewed and all arrears fully paid.

The reason for this regulation of the Paper Controller is that it is the practice of some publishers to send their newspaper until ordered stopped, and in cases of removal from that city very often the paper is continued at a loss, in which case there is virtual loss of paper. It is to prevent paper waste that the new regulation has been decided upon.

The manufacture of paper consumes labor, wood, coal, chemicals and transportation facilities, and every ton of paper saved means just so much more labor, raw materials, chemicals, fuel and transportation available for urgent war needs. For these reasons the Government insists that paper shall be saved, and proposes that only those who pay for their publications shall receive them.

Under these regulations The Examiner will have no choice in the matter of dealing with subscriptions in arrears for over three months.

You need The Examiner, and we want to continue sending it to you. So, if your subscription is in arrears please pay up at once to prevent a discontinuance of your subscription, in compliance with the ruling of the News Print Commissioner.

THE OBJECTIVE IN SIGHT.

In the face of difficulties such as have not existed in any previous campaign, with sickness in so many households and with collection committees crippled because office staffs are depleted by illness, and it is impossible to spare as much time as usual, the Red Cross campaign is meeting with unprecedented success. Already the sum of $23,000 has been subscribed, and with the campaign extended until Tuesday next, the objective of $30,000 should be surpassed. There has been no clearer call to giving than the Red Cross appeal. The full objective asked for will be needed, so those who have not as yet contributed are urged to get in line and boost the total to $30,000. Give as they fight.

HAS THE AUTHORITY

The Government of Canada is, as the Acting Prime Minister said at the close of the Council hearing to Civil Servants on October 8, under the necessity of knowing how the people of Canada feel regarding the expenditure of their money But the people of Canada did not wait for this emergency, and have not placed a Government at the helm with the idea that it shall stop in mid-channel, and the channel is none too straight or too well chartered, and ask them for authority to pay its crew a decent wage. Since the ship left port the cost of living has gone up tremendously and the $3.60 per day which the Government pays its crew (captains, mates, engineers, bo's'ns, and tars) is hopelessly low. These low wages are not the fault of the present Government, the crew has been getting such wages for the past ten years, and Government even now is planning permanent improvements in the rates of pay. The case is rather one of emergency and should be met by emergency relief. That this has not already been done is not the fault of the people of Canada. They have passed a War Measures Act giving Government power to deal with such emergencies, Government has already spent millions in war bonuses under the authority conferred by this Act, and the Justice Department has O.K.'d this expenditure. Government has the power and the money and the people of Canada expect them to use both.

WHAT THE FLAG MEANS

Some people are still asking for an explanation of the pictures of the honour flag which are to be seen on the local bill boards. The answer is simple. His Excellency the Governor General has offered to give one of these beautiful flags to every Canadian city, town or village that goes beyond its objective in the Victory Loan Campaign.

The Honour flag is the central symbol of the coming campaign.

Every municipality that earns the right to fly an honour flag has an emblem that will show the world that the people of that place have an unshakeable faith in their comrades who are fighting overseas and have backed up that faith by sending their dollars to fight for liberty.

The community that has no honour flag has fallen down and every visitor will know that it has fallen down. Strangers who fail to see the symbol of patriotism will be inclined to say sarcastic things and no one will be able to offset such criticism.

Peterbro's patriotism has been demonstrated too convincingly by the number of recruits she has provided for Canada's army to take any chances of having that record spoiled by a poor showing in the Victory Loan campaign.

Peterboro cannot afford to fail to earn a Victory Loan honour flag, the "emblem that will show the enemy where Canada stands" to quote R. A. Stephenson, chairman of the committee.

STICK IT, CANADA.

Since August 8th the Canadian Army at the front has passed from one glorious victory to another. The breaking of the German front at Amiens being succeeded by the smashing of the Drocourt-Queant switch line and that remarkable feat of arms being followed by the crushing attack that gained for the allies possession of Cambrai. After all these triumphs the Canadians still form the spearhead of General Haig's drive for Valenciennes. A record of this kind should cause every Canadian heart to glow with pride—but it should do more. It should fill every Canadian heart with the determination to see the war through to a complete victory for the cause of democracy. That determination can be demonstrated in an unmistakable manner in the Victory Loan campaign. If Canadian dollars are poured out as freely as Canadian soldiers have offered their flesh and blood for the cause there will be rolled up in the Dominion such a tremendous sum that the world will see that Canadians everywhere at home or on the battle line are in the war to a finish.

Failure cannot be thought of. The dire results of Canada being unable to raise the five hundred millions asked for are too appalling to contemplate. The people at home could never face the boys when they come back if the Loan is a failure.

There must be no break on the home front and there will be no break. The loan goes over the top next week with every Canadian helping it along. Make the result big enough to shake Berlin like a dozen aeroplane raids.

Stick it, Canada.

HELP TO CUT THE COST OF LIVING

SALVAGED BY LOVE AFTER OVER SEVENTY YEARS AS DERELICT IN THE BOWERY

When Last of Life's Seemed Parted, Sweetheart of His Youth Appears.

NEW YORK — Many a strange story, many a romance has come out of the Bowery in times gone by, but never, perhaps, was there a more wonderful one than that which had its climax here, when sweethearts who had been parted for threescore years and ten met once more, pledged their troth anew and went away together to a "cleaner, greener land," where nearly three-quarters of a century ago as boy and girl they knew and loved each other.

Seventy-two years ago Ethan Allen Greenway, then a sturdy, upstanding, well muscled farmer's boy, lived in a little farming settlement near Attleboro, Vt. On a neighbouring farm was Selina Worthington, a pretty, unconventional country girl, his sweetheart. Together they dreamed over their future and built castles in the air of their future together, and they were very happy. But Ethan was ambitious, the old farm in Vermont was too small for his broader views of life, and he determined to come to New York, make his fortune and then go back and claim his bride and so live happily ever after.

That was in 1846. On the day he and the girl parted the boy cut a silver dime in two, gave her one half and kept the other half himself. In each half he bored a hole, so that a string could be passed through it and it could ze worn about the neck. Both pledged themselves to be true to each other so long as they should have those halves of the little coin.

Robbery His Welcome to City.

When Ethan arrived in New York he had very little money and so he sought cheap lodgings on the old Bowery, and the very first night he occupied them he was robbed of every cent he had.

The Bowery was a hard place in those days, filled with the roughest, toughest characters in the city, thieves and pick-pockets and strong arm men. Dance halls and dime museums and low dives of every description flourished exceedingly. Into this maelstrom of the great city's flashiest life the young Vermont farmer boy was thrown penniless, to live as best he might. The life fascinated him and he became a part of it, drifting along with the flotsam, the scum of the city, forgetting all the sweetness and purity and charm of the Green Mountain country and the little girl who was there waiting for him.

Soon he got to know many of the old "Bowery boys," the thieves and criminals of all sorts and conditions, and as month followed month and year followed year he became a part and parcel of the Bowery life. Being young and strong, he had no difficulty in getting a job as a bouncer in one of the many dance halls. Then he became a barkeeper in the dive known as "the Morgue," at No. 25 Bowery, and later he was a barkeeper in the "Dead-house," in East Eighteenth street, in the Gas House district, where the rowdy element was quite as much at home as in the Bowery itself.

"Longest Five Cent Drink in Town."

"These were great days in the Morgue on the Bowery," said the old man. "In the back room of the place the thieves used to meet and divide their swag, and many a time there have been shooting and stabbing and nasty fights there. And in the Dead-house, where I worked, the whiskey was five cents a drink—a drink, mind you, not a glass, for there were no glasses there. We had a barrel of liquor on a shelf, with a rubber hose running from its bunghole, and a man who paid his five cents was welcome to take a swig from the hose so long as he could hold his breath. When he had to stop drinking to breathe I had to pinch off his liquor. It was wonderful, though, how long some of those bums could go without breathing with that rubber tube in their mouths."

At another time he worked as a bartender in a saloon in Baxter street, near the Bowery, where there was a "velvet room" where men and women who had spent their last cent in the place could go and drink themselves into unconsciousness on the vilest liquor, free. In that way the saloon kept its steady customers. But as years went on, Greenway grew too old to tend bar, and then he got to doing any odd job he was asked. He learned to paint black eyes and red noses, and for a time did a fairly good business as a facial camouflage artist, running his restorative beauty parlour in an old basement in a street just off the Bowery.

It was about that time that he began to be called "Doc Flood." His doctoring and painting of black eyes gave him the title of "Doc," but how he came by the name of Flood he never could figure out. However, he has been known for many years in the Bowery and down about Statham square and in Chinatown as "Doc Flood."

Grey Old and Stoop-Shouldered.

Of recent years his almost white hair grew long and hung down on his neck and shoulders, and his long, gray, unkempt beard covered half his chest. His once broad shoulders were bent and rounded, and he grew thin and haggard. Drifting more and more, ever going further and further down in the scale of humanity, of late months "Doc Flood" has made a scanty living by running errands for the girls of Chinatown, getting their beer for them, or doing any little odd job they asked him to do.

About two wekes ago old "Doc Flood" got to thinking of his old home in Vermont, and the girl he had left behind him so many, many years ago. For the first time in more than seventy years he wrote a letter to her and sent it to the old address near Attleboro, Vt.

And last Monday morning she came to him again. Selina Worthington, the sweetheart of so long ago, now a prim-little old woman in a black bonnet trimmed with violets, a neat black silk dress of old fashioned cut, and low buttoned shoes, came to New York for the first time in her life in answer to her old love's appeal.

They met in front of the Joss House, in Mott street, for the little woman from Vermont had asked a policeman, and he pointed out "Doc" to her. She was frightened at first when she saw the old, old man, with the long white hair and beard, but she looked long into his eyes, and then she knew him. She finally put her arms about his neck and kissed him, and then, with tears rolling down his weather-beaten and wrinkled-checks, old "Doc" fished down into his ragged pocket, and produced his half of the silver dime, with the bit of ribbon still attached, that she had tied there in the year 1846. And she had her half of the dime on another thin ribbon about her neck.

Bought Clothing for Him.

The little woman lost no time in getting her old sweetheart away from his dismal surroundings. She had money, and she got a policeman to get a carriage for her and "Doc." Together they left Mott street, while from every window heads were thrust, and many shouts of goodby and good luck followed the couple as they were driven away. In Bayard street she bought him a complete outfit of clothing, shoes and hat, and he went to a barber shop and had his hair cut and his beard neatly trimmed and got a bath.

Then the little woman took her transfigured old sweetheart to the Grand Central Station and bought tickets to Attleboro, for she has quite a large farm near there. The last thing she said when she left was that they would be married at the end of their journey, and that she would take care of him, never fear.

And her eyes were very bright, and she looked very happy when she said it, for she had waited a long time to be a bride, and now at last the bridegroom had come to her.

DON'T DRINK SHIPS!

U. S. Food Administration.

Are you shocked to see the lady drinking ships?

You drink ships every time you use sugar unnecessarily, in a beverage.

Seventy-five per cent. of the sugar used in this country has to be brought here in ships. Every possible ship is needed for the transportation of troops and supplies to the other side.

Eliminate sugar as a luxury, and you release many ships for war purposes.

Teach your appetite to remember this—

DON'T DRINK SHIPS.

Women Work on Ships

(By United Press.)

London, Oct. 5. (By Mail.)—One of the most remarkable developments which the war has brought about is the introduction of women workers in the shipyards. No industrial branch of the work comprises a rougher or harder occupation than the building of a large merchant steamer. Women are now working with riveters heating the rivets and carrying them to the men who drive them home.

The speed with which the girls unload large bars of iron from railway wagons and wheel them away in barrows is a source of wonder to the onlooker.

Experienced girls even drive cranes and winches—a nerve-racking occupation inasmuch as the lives of others depend upon their actions.

PIGEONS ARE PLAYING GREAT ROLE IN THE WAR

BY FRED S. FERGUSON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Oct. 3. (By Mail.)—Can you imagine a man's life being saved by a pigeon?

Or, can you imagine the lives of hundreds of men being saved and the course of a battle being changed by a pigeon? Such things are happening daily on the great front where the German army is slowly, but surely being beaten back.

Thousands of pigeons are fighting in their dumb way as valiently as the men in the line, their battle for the allied cause. Hundreds are giving up their lives. They fly through shell-fire, through smoke and din of battle, carrying messages that may mean success or failure in an operation. Telephone lines may be broken, or communication by this means interrupted by other causes. But communication by pigeon—war's most reliable messenger—can be broken by death only.

A pigeon may be wounded. It may be famished for water, but it will fly, despite its own enemies in the air, until its last ounce of strength is exhausted. Heading for its cote from the front line it will fly with the speed of the wind. Fast pigeons can make better than a mile a minute. Attached to its leg is a little aluminum message box about an inch long. Arriving at its cote the pigeon is "trapped" the message box quickly opened and rushed to headquarters. The message is deciphered. And while the pigeon is straightening its ruffled feathers, or cooing in anticipation of a meal of barley or canary seed, it is likely that orders are going out meaning life or death, success or failure, to a company, a regiment, a brigade, or even a division.

As you pass along the roads in the rear of the battlefront you will see queer little houses standing on top—on the very peak—of prominent knolls. Then, you will notice the odd little houses are on wheels. They are always standing in the most open place in the vicinity. There is not a tree within rods of the little house. The sun boils down pitilessly, or the rain pours upon the place. There doesn't seem to be anyone about, but somewhere—in the shade of the little house, or the shelter of a dugout—you will find the only human inhabitants of the knoll.

The queer little house is a pigeon cote. Three men are attached to each cote. They train the pigeons, see that the fighting unit to which they are attached is kept supplied with birds, watch for their charges when they return from the front, and then see that the message brought in by the pigeon is promptly delivered.

Incidentally it should not be assumed this queer little settlement top the knoll, only the pigeons face the dangers of the front. The "pigeon men" will not trust the delivery of their birds to the front line o anyone else. They put the pigeons in a wicker basket and dash over the shell-swept roads in a motorcycle sidecar to the post command of their unit, where the birds are turned over to the men in the line. Then begins the pigeon's period of work. It lives in the basket in which it is carried to the front, known as the "rest basket." This basket is of open wicker and is some eight inches deep and from a foot and a half wide to two feet long. Little water pans are fixed in the basket and food turned over to the man who is to care for the pigeons while their birds to the front line to anyone they are in the front line.

When a patrol is ordered, or an attack is made, the pigeons are taken from the rest basket and put in a smaller wicker basket. This rests on a man's back just between his shoulders. A strap crosses over either shoulder, converging into a single strap in front, forming a simple sort of harness with the single strap snapping to the soldier's belt buckle. The basket is thus held steady, and the pigeon rides forth to battle.

Pigeons are furnished not only the infantry, but to balloon observers and cavalrymen. In the case of the balloon observers only the rest basket is used. The pigeons are carried up in the balloon, and should the observer's telephone connection with the ground become broken, one of his pigeons is liberated, and bears the message back to its cote.

When with cavalry, the pigeons ride in a tiny net "hammock." A galloping or even a walking horse, would naturally injure the pigeons if they were at liberty in their wicker basket. Each basket is fitted with separate "hammocks" for three pigeons, the heavy net is cut so that it will just fit snugly about the pigeon's body when folded about the bird. It is then fitted with eyelets and laces. The pigeon's wings are folded carefully in place, the pigeon placed in the "hammock," and then laced in with its head and neck protruding. The bird is then ready for its ride. It rests in the hammock in a normal sitting position, and though the motion of the horse may cause the hammock to swing, the pigeon is in no danger of being thrown against the side of the basket, but is gently "rock-

A SMALL TOWN IN THE WOOD BUSINESS

Perth, Ontario, Sells Hardwood, Delivered, at Eight Dollars a Cord and Makes a Profit.

How an Ontario municipality, not afraid to tackle fuel difficulties along new lines, has brought to the doors of its citizens 1,900 cords of wood this year, at a cost of $8 per cord for hardwood and $6 for softwood, and made a thousand dollars profit for the municipal treasury is told in the following letter from Mr. J. T. Conway, Chairman of the Fuel Committee of Perth, Ontario. Surely this highly successful enterprise by a live town government could be repeated again and again wherever woodlots are within easy reach.

"In reply to enquiry of July 10th, re how the Perth enterprise in wood fuel was worked out I would say that we were very successful. In fact we came out nearly one thousand dollars ahead, when we only wanted to come out even.

We first bought ten acres of hardwood bush about three or four miles from Perth for five hundred dollars When cut we had forty-five cords to the acre. Then we bought one hundred acres for twelve hundred dollars in mixed wood, and we will have about two thousand cords off it.

We engaged a foreman and had the men driven out to the bush every morning, as many objected to staying in the bush. For hardwood we paid for cutting $2.50 per cord and for soft wood $2.00, and the men made good money. We paid a foreman $4.00 per day and expenses, but we found that we could get along without him by paying $1.25 to the best man amongst the choppers to measure up the wood when cut and alot the work to the men. We put up in the bush a large tent with a stove and benches for the men to use when eating their dinner. Also an emery stone for them to use to sharpen their axes.

We paid $2.00 per cord for drawing The teams made two trips each, with a cord and a half per trip, which made $6.00 per day for drawing.

The Chief of Police of Perth took the orders and had it delivered at $8.00 per cord for hardwood and $6.00 for soft wood, with a limit of two loads to each party.

After sleighing was done the men continued cutting and now we have over four hundred cords of dry wood in the bush.

We have delivered altogether about fifteen hundred cords of wood from what we have brought in by train and from the bush, and the people of town have never been without fuel.

The great secret in keeping down the price of wood is in buying a bush near town. It is worth twice the price when a team can make two trips per day.

RED CROSS CAMPAIGN WILL BE EXTENDED

Last Night's Total Reached the $23,000 Mark.

Hampered by the epidemic of Spanish influenza ,the Red Cross collection has reached the $23,000 mark.

Both campaign workers and subscribers are affected by the epidemic. Those of the workers who are not actually laid up with influenza have been unable to give their full time to canvassing on account of having to double up and do two or three men's work who are absent from the office staffs. Doctors are so rushed they have not the time to give consideration to the signing of their cards.

LARGE PERCENTAGE ILL.

In the factories, in many cases, seventy-five per cent. of the employees are absent while those who have been canvassed have responded generously, in many cases more so than in previous years. To give those factory employees who are ill at present an opportunity to subscribe, the returns will not be completed until conditions are back to normal.

Owing to the returns up to last night being necessarily so incomplete the general campaign will be continued until Tuesday.

Epidemic or no epidemic, the workers are confident that the Peterboro people will live up to what is expected of them, and the objective be reached.

Victory Loan Workers Confer

The City Forces Gathered Together Last Evening.

In order to create enthusiasm for a good Monday morning start in the Victory Loan drive, the city canvassers were the guests of Mr. W. B. Cumming, the county organizer, last evening at the Empress. The object of the dinner was to explain the details of the loan from the canvassers' standpoint.

Those who attended the dinner were Mr. W. Bradburn, chairman; Mr. V. Eastwood, vice-chairman; Mr. G. O. Cameron, chairman of the Publicity Committee; Messrs. Alex. McGregor, T. P. Lancaster, T. W. Robinson, J. R. Corkery, W. G.Howden, C. H. Moore, D. W. Lewis, E. Walton, D. H. Moore, H. Rush, W. Patterson, F. Whitehouse, J. K. Galvin, W. B. Cumming, F. Brownscombe and E. B. Thompson.

Short addresses on the Victory Loan were made by Mr. E. B. Thompson, Divisional Organizer, Mr. Bradburn, Mr. Eastwood, and Mr. Cumming.

Apsley Woman Has Disappeared

Mrs. James Hendley Swallowed Up in the Woods.

Mrs. James Hendley of Apsley, has disappeared from her home and no trace of her has been found since.

Mrs. Hendley who is 75 years of age left the house last Saturday evening to look for the cows in the bush but she never returned to the house. A party of men went out to look for her on Saturday night and all day Sunday but up to last night no trace of her could be found. It is supposed that she was lost in the large forest area just north of Long Lake in Burleigh Township. Parties are still searching for her but it is not thought that she could survive the storms that were prevalent at the beginning of the week Her husband, Mr. James Hendley is a man of 90 years and quite helpless.

Wartime Life in Italy is Very Trying to People

Prices High and Food Supply Short —Not Daunted in Determination to Fight On.

New York.—Most people do not realize the disabilities under which Italy fought, up to the time of the catastrophe of last October, nor do they realize the tremendous problems with which she was confronted, says a New York contemporary. She entered the war after a long and weary campaign in Libya, when her resources of life and finances were at a low ebb. She had a difficult political party to deal with—the adherents of the Triple Alliance, a party that could not and would not see the real position of Italy and the necessity of her entering the war from a moral standpoint, but who only saw the commercial advantages she would lose by the rupture with the Central Empires, advantages, they argued, that would be made up by any promises of the Allies, says Maurice Magness in the Bellman.

Did Not Try To Barter

Thi position seems to have made America believe that Italy hesitated and tried to barter before coming to a final conclusion. The fact is, nothing of the kind ever moved the best spirits and the majority of the Italian people, although it would have been only natural that in an agricultural country like Italy, which depends absolutely on the products of industrial countries, there should have been a party that would weigh the material disadvantages of entering the war which meant being cut off from the countries furnishing most of the necessary manufactures

How heroically Italy has endured all hardships and is still enduring them, is obvious from present international conditions. The disaster of last October was a most unfortunate occurrence. The true of it as told me by those who were in the vicinity at the time, was this: Cadorna was very anxious to keep only his best troops in the front lines, and was loath to give them furloughs. The grew tired. Some of them had been through the entire Libyan campaign, and were giving the best years of their life to their country. There had been a conspiracy between the front lines of the Italians and the enemy to stop fighting on a certain day; then there would be no more war!

The Austrian superiors discovered the conspiracy, and on the eve of the appointed day sent the disaffected regiments to the rear and installed fresh troops. The signal was given; the Italians living up to their agreement, did not fire a shot; the Austrian hordes surprised them, and walked without any resistance through one of the strongest fortified passes on the front, a pass that could not possibly be taken without the fiercest attacks. In addition to this, many Austrian officers donned Italian uniforms and ran far ahead of their troops shouting to the Italians to fly for their lives. I heard that no one in Udine knew that the enemy was approaching until automobiles containing German officers entered the town.

Wanted Whole Country

However unfortunate this affair was, it had a tremendous moral effect. Until then Italy had been fighting outside her frontier, and there were many who considered the tremendous loss of life too great a sacrifice for the unredeemed provinces of Trent and Trieste. With one blow the Italian people were as one; their own country was invaded, and their was no question as to the issue of the war. The officers responsible for the disaster were marched down to the Via Nazionale in Rome with black ribbons across their breasts, bearing the inscription, "Traitors of the Country," and were shot in the historickl castle of Saint Angelo

The spirit of the people to-day is magnificent, and the overwhelming odds as to food conditions and sacrifice of life have not daunted them in their fervent desire to march to victory. The cost of living has gone up threefold, and some things cost four times the price they do in normal times .Food and ration cards are issued for bread, rice, macaroni, sugar and charcoal. Oil is hardly obtainable. Fats are not allowed to be sold or kept. Benzine is not obtainable. Alcohol for burning purposes has gone up from 9 cents a quart to $1.60; filet of beef, from 45 cents a pound to $2.20; cheese is not allowed to be made, as the milk is reserved for the hospitals and for the soldiers; eggs are scarce and have gone up form 2 cents to 9 cents each; paper has more than doubled in price, some kinds are not obtainable

The newspapers confine themselves several times a week to printing only one sheet, two pages, instead of four or six. There is no coal for the civil population, and locomotives are fired by wood, in consequence of which, nearly all trains are delayed from two to six hours and very few are run; even between the principle cities there are no more than two to three trains daily, whereas between the smaller places there is only one. Tobacco, one of the principal articles of consumption, has gone up more than twice the original cost, and in some places most of the favorite brands are not obtainable.

Rents, although not allowed to be raised during wartime, in the case of the permanent tenant, are always increased when the tenant moves, or when the house is sold. Rome and Naples are particularly crowded and rents very high. Many of the hotels have been requisioned by the Government or new offices, which accentuates the scarcity of living accomodation, especially now, when so many refugees from the invaded provinces have come to the larger cities of Central and Southern Italy.

STOP NEUTRAL CREWS LANDDING IN NEW YORK

Measure to Prevent Leakage Information to Enemy.

New York, Oct 25.—An order prohibiting crews of neutral ships going ashore at this port was put into effect by immigration authorities

Official declare that the regulations, designed to prevent "leaking" information to enemy countries, could apply to all American ports under a ruling promulgated by the State Department.

The prohibition, it is stated is laid upon the entire personel of neutral crews, except masters of ships.

Voice of The People

Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—It is a question if the City Council is not making a most serious mistake in treating the clergy in the same way as other men regarding the closing of the churches during epidemics. This action, so sudden and unprecedented, marks the end of the old regime. Faith henceforth shall not apparently rank on a level with fact. Long, long ago everything was put down to God or the Devil and to the spirits sent out by them. Now, like the little boy who cut open his stuffed elephant, the people appear to have solved the problems of life and health and death on the basis of fact or science, not faith. We see this in the triumph of an institution which, of all Protestant institutions, is the most popular. It has a maximum of sport and good health and opportunities, but a minimum of Christian teaching. It represents, it is said, "the church in action." This has been the cool way of "churching the churches." But it is doubtful if the church in action is so serious and extraordinary a fruit-bearing as closing up the usual avenues of appeal to God in times of sickness and distress; at any rate in churches. If the home if sufficient for all religious purposes even in the most serious times, of what use are the churches? This is a great change in public sentiment and as revolutions take place in a night when the times are ripe, we may wake up some morning to find that the diminishing power of our centres of spiritual life and strength have resulted in their being closed up altogether.

Wife Fainted in Court When Her Husband Was Discharged

Edward Yeomans Was Charged With Sedition and Offences Against the Military Service Act—Judge Took the Case From the Jury and Discharged the Accused.

"OLD CHAPS' TALK"

Edward Yeomans, a Chandos township farmer, smiled through unbidden tears as he received the congratulations of his friends in court yesterday afternoon, when Mr. Justice Latchford summarily discharged him on four counts of contravening the Military Service Act and one of sedition, after His Lordship had first taken the case from the petit jury and dismissed them. Mrs. Yeomans was apparently more affected than her husband by the sudden liberation, for which they had evidently been unprepared, from the fears that must have tormented them as the week of the Assizes approached, and haunted them during the last three days while they waited anxiously for the dreaded moment when the case would be called. "Thank God" were the only words with which the bewildered old lady could find utterance for her relief, as in an overwhelming ecstasy she realized that her husband was free. She spoke abstractedly and in an undertone heard only by those near her, and raised her hands in an unconscious gesture of gratitude. In a moment she had moved to her husband's side, and putting her arm around his neck, said, "there's only me and the old man left." Their only son is overseas and has been twice wounded.

"I trust your son may come back hale and well," said His Lordship before he turned to leave the room, and the old couple managed to express the appreciation that overpowered them. They received the greetings of the lawyers and their farmer friends in the same dazed spirit, and when the jury and most of the officials and the usual audience had dispersed, Mrs. Yeomans swayed against the railing and fell in a faint. Detective Newhall caught her, and with Mr. F. D. Kerr rendered first aid. A woman who is a neighbour in Chandos rubbed her hands, but it was ten minutes before she began to revive. The unexpected deliverance from the worry that must have harassed the old lady's mind, the sudden snapping of the tension and release of taught nerves had been too swift a reversal.

Mr. and Mrs. Yeomans had moved uneasily about the Court House since Tuesday, coming in and going out of the court room while other cases were in progress, or sitting alone in one of the ante-rooms that looked upon the jail with its barred windows and high stone wall.

The Indictment.

The first two clauses of the indictment charged that Edward Yeomans, at Coroner's Bay, in Methuen township, on May 3, 1918, did by public utterance to Richard Seaborne and others, persons liable for Military Service Act, advise or urge that men called for such service should contravene the Act; and that by his utterance did attempt to persuade R. Seaborne and others, men liable for military service, to impede or resist the operation of the Act.

The third and fourth clauses were similar to these two except that the place of the alleged offences were at Lasswade post office on May 11th.

The fifth clause read that on May 11th at Lasswade the accused "did unlawfully speak seditious words."

Mr. F. D. Kerr was solicitor for the prisoner and Mr. Norman Sommerville, of Toronto, represented the Crown.

The jury was selected as follows: Daniel Kennedy, Peterborough, Fred Crawford, Lakefield, W. J. Sanderson, Asphodel, Benj. Johnston, Peterborough, John Lush, Peterborough, Jos. Hunter, Smith, Wm. O'Toole, Peterborough, W. J. McLaughlin, Norwood, Donald Cameron, Otonabee, A. E. Inkpen, Peterborough, L. J. Elmhirst, Wm. J. Grant, Smith.

A Camping Party.

Anson Andrews, a Justice of the Peace in Chandos, was the first witness. He testified that on May 3rd, he was one of a party who were catching suckers at Coroner's Bay. Others present were John Winters, Edward Yeomans, John Masters and Richard Seaborne, the two latter men being drafees on leave. The party had a tent and spent the night together. While supper was preparing, conversation turned to the war. One of the men said that the soldier's life was largely what he made it.

"Yeomans said his boy was coaxed into enlisting, although there was no occasion for it," Mr. Andrews testified. He spoke of the property, stock, etc., he had, and said there was no need of the boy enlisting.

"I said, 'If the Germans win what use would your property be to you or to your son Walter?' He replied that he didn't know about that, but the government he had always supported had passed one of the rottenest laws that had ever been imposed on any people when it passed the Military Service Act.

John Winters told him "to cut out that talk. You want to be careful where you repeat it or you'll say it before people who will make trouble for you."

"I dropped out of the discussion," Mr. Andrews continued.

"Yeomans was asked what would become of the boys at the front. He said, 'They went of their own free will and let them take their chances.' The conversation ran on between Winters and Yeomans and got quite heated. Yeomans said that if he were a draftee he would take his own life before he would go. He said that it was time enough to fight when the Germans came to Canada.

"I didn't lay the charge against Yeomans," said the witness. "We have been perfectly friendly."

An Old Chaps' Talk.

Cross-examined by Mr. Kerr.

"You took tea with old man Yeomans, not with Yeomans the traitor?"

With Mr. Yeomans the friend. There was no question of him being a traitor.

You caused the information to be laid before yourself?

No, sir. I never mentioned the affair, not even in my home.

You took the evidence at the preliminary trial? Yes.

You saw nothing improper in sitting on that case in which you had been interested? No.

His Lordship—Was any other magistrate with you? No.

You took the testimony of Aaron Post. Post said (reading from the deposition), "I know Mr. Yeomans as a law-abiding citizen." You wrote down Winter's statement.

"I took it as an old chaps' talk."

Winters described it as a hot discussion between two old men? Yes.

It was properly described by Mr. Winters as 'old chaps' talk? Yes.

"I am told that in your country you are a skillful questioner, that you can rile men so that they go beyond the limit?"

Mr. Andrews declined to admit this ability.

You always keep cool? Yes.

You did the questioning while the old fellows sputtered and sparked?

"I explained the Food Controller's Act to Mr. Yeomans and afterwards he was quite satisfied with it."

Tried to Dissuade Post.

"You understand that Yeoman's only child is overseas?' Yes.

And that since the conversation he has been twice wounded? Yes.

You expressed no feeling of sympathy when the information was laid?

I certainly have and tried to persuade Mr. Post not to lay it. I said to Mr. Post, "It is easy to start these things and hard to end them." He came to me twice before I wrote the information.

Did you seriously think Yeomans wanted Germany to win this war?

I thought he was angry because of the loss of his son. I felt sure he would not say these things again.

It was supposed he voted for the Union government?

I supposed he had. I didn't know.

Did you understand that as a result of the elections he was disappointed because his son didn't come home?

No, I didn't understand it that way.

Mr. Sommerville—Was the prisoner represented at the preliminary trial? Yes, by Mr. Kerr.

His Lordship—Did his son volunteer or wait until he was called?

Mr. Andrews—I think he waited for the draft, but volunteered before he was called.

The Post Office Incident.

Aaron Post, also of Chandos township, told Mr. Sommerville he had known Yeomans for forty years.

"I met him on May 11th at Lasswade post office. Mr. Kirkland Cameron, Mrs. Masters, and a school teacher were present.

"Yeomans and I got into conversation. Somebody asked about the war.

I go for the papers every day and am asked what the news is. Yeomans said that the Military Service law was the rottenest that was ever imposed on any people. He appeared to be angry. I asked him what about reinforcements for the boys in France. He said that they went of their own accord and let them put up with what they got.

Mr. Sommerville— Have you any boys overseas?

One son wounded and eight nephews, two of them killed.

What did you do next?

I had the mail to deliver, so I left the post office. Subsequently I laid the information.

Mr. Kerr—You said at the former hearing that you didn't think the prisoner was a traitor?

I think so now

This is one of your ways of helping the boys.

You can put it that way.

Did you think this would make a better soldier of Yeoman's son by prosecuting the father? No.

You've had the satisfaction of hearing that his son was wounded? Yes, but I was sorry he was wounded.

His Lordship—What prompted you to lay the information?

In the vicinity of Lasswade I was being constantly harped at by men who were against the government and the Military Service Act.

His Lordship—We all know that the Military Service Act was unpopular among the farmers.

Kirkland Cameron.

Another old man, Kirkland Cameron, swore that Yeomans had expressed the opinion that the Union government was rotten; also that his son had gone overseas, but not with his will.

Mr. Kerr—How old a man are you? Ans.—75.

You've known Mr. Yeomans a long time?

Yes. I told you that before.

But that was at the Chandos meeting.

Well, it's the same now.

Mr. Kerr read the evidence the witness gave at the preliminary hearing to the effect that both Mr. Yeomans and Mr. Post had generated a great deal of heat in their dispute. Both were shouting, but the prisoner's voice was the louder.

John Winters.

John Winters was another 40 year old acquaintance of the prisoner. He was present at the fishing party in Coroner's Bay. He recalled Yeoman's aspersions on the Union government.

"I told him that he had better cut that out or some one might 'pull' him. I didn't pay much attention to him at the time. One thing he said was that if he were a young man and were drafted he'd blow his brains out."

We were camping together. There was lots said, but I don't remember much of it. Yeomans said his son had enlisted.

"What did you think about it," Mr. Sommerville asked.

Well, I had a boy there and I was riled a bit. But I didn't think anything would come of it.

Were Sucker Fishing.

To Mr. Kerr witness said that the party were sucker fishing. Although they did not all start out together, they met and shared a tent, prepared their meals, chatted, argued and slept through the night as men do.

Did Mr. Yeomans appear excited? Not to me.

Reading the preliminary examination, Mr. Kerr quoted, "I couldn't say he was excited, but he appeared to be."

You also described it on that occasion as "old chaps' talk."

That's what I took it to be.

There was considerable hot discussion and the most of it was between you and Mr. Yeomans?

Yes, that's right.

Did you ever hear anyone but Mr. Yeomans criticize the Government?

I've heard some.

You've known Mr. Yeomans for many years?

Since I went back to the north country.

He was always a law-abiding citizen.

I thought he was.

You wouldn't say he was a traitor?

No, that would be the last thing.

Discussed the Evidence.

Giving the jury a recess at this stage of the trial, Mr. Justice Latchford in their absence discussed the evidence with Mr. Sommerville. When the jury returned His Lordship said: "The learned counsel for the Crown informs me that he cannot strengthen the evidence now before you except by the evidence of persons who will give the same a similar testimony as that which already has been submitted. While the prisoner's words were reprehensible and should not have been used, there are circumstances that diminish the seeming gravity of the offence. It is necessary for the Crown to show that Yeomans by oral communication or public speech advised or urged that men liable for service should contravene the Military Service Act. An example of that would be if Yeomans had advised a man or men to go to the woods and hide there, as so many young men have done. It wouldn't matter whether he had spoken to only one or more persons. I can not find in the evidence so far submitted to me any foundation in fact or law for the first four counts. There is nothing shown that Yeomans advised or urged that men liable for military service should contravene the Act, and so thinking it is for me to withdraw these counts of the indictment from your consideration.

In regard to seditious words in the disputes with Post, Andrews, Winter and Cameron do not amount to sedition. There must be some impassioned utterance that incites one or more persons to acts of violence against the peace and good government of the country. In May last there was a good deal of dissatisfaction owing to the idea that prevailed among farmers that their sons would be sent back to them or would not be taken. It is a bad thing to express dissatisfaction with the acts of a government in time of war, especially when that government is doing its utmost that victory may come to our armies. Men should be light in their criticisms."

Nick Beirodine Sentenced to 5 Years in Prison

Found guilty by a jury yesterday afternoon on two of the three charges on which he was tried, Nicholas Beirodine was sentenced to five years' imprisonment by Mr. Justice Latchford this morning. The jury returned a verdict of not guilty on the third and most serious charge of having wounded Linter Marcotullio with intent to commit murder. The other two counts were that with intent to maim or do other serious bodily harm by stabbing he caused grevious bodily harm, and also that he did unlawfully wound Marcotullio

His Lordship encouraged the prisoner to endeavour to redeem himself during his term in prison by assuring him that if his record was good and was so reported by the authorities, His Lordship would recommend that the sentence be reduced. Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for the accused Mr. Sommerville of Toronto for the Crown.

The address by Mr. Sommerville to the jury yesterday afternoon and His Lordship's remarks this morning before sentencing Beirodine, were such plain statements of the duties and rights of citizenship that it was a pity they were reserved for such rare occasions, and especially that there seemed no necessity for pronouncing them until assaults similar to Beirodine's were committed.

German Press Comment on President Wilson's Latest Note

"In Spite of Everything We Feel That This Answer Brings Us Nearer Peace," One Paper Declares.

Special to The Examiner:

BASEL, Oct. 25.—Comment on President Wilson's latest note to Germany is beginning to appear in the German papers. The National Zeitung, of Berlin, says:

"President Wilson has answered quickly. Well, if ever Emperor William's invocation that God be with him, is in season, it is right now."

The Neueste Nachrichten of Berlin, says: "In spite of everything we feel that this answer brings us nearer peace."

London Comment.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Oct. 25.—"President Wilson proposes a course of action which must test Germany's sincerity," said the Westminster Gazette to-day in an editorial commenting on the President's reply to the latest German peace note.

"Wilson carries an iron hand under a velvet glove. His answer to Germany should be enthusiastically endorsed by all these people of civilized nations," said the Pall Mall Gazette.

The Evening Standard said: "Wilson's reply means Germany's unconditional surrender is the only thing that will satisfy the United States."

"If Germany accepts the terms laid down by President Wilson the war should end in less than a week," said the London Daily News.

Vote of Confidence.

Special to The Examiner:

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 25.—The German Reichstag has given Prince Maximiilian, the Imperial Chancellor, a vote of confidence, the ballot standing 193 to 52, according to Berlin despatches received here. Twenty-three of the members did not vote.

Count Apponyi, Count Andrassy and Opposition deputies have demanded the resignation of the Ministry, according to Budapest advices received here. Dr. Wekerle, Premier, declared that, in view of the increasing difficulties of the situation, he would propose a coalition ministry.

Sees No Obstacle.

PARIS, Oct. 25.—The Frankfurter Zeitung declares that Austria-Hungary has taken the first step on the road to domestic reforms, and hence sees no obstacle to concluding an armistice.

Spanish Influenza Strikes Suddenly

Pneumonia Often Results—Victims Seized Without Warning—Making Precaution Doubly Necessary.

Much of the difficulty experienced by health authorities in checking the spread of the Spanish influenza lies in the fact that it strikes its victim without warning.

Although State and Federal authorities are taking every possible precaution in their effort to stop the spread of the epidemic, the disease in many sections of the country has gotten entirely beyond control and is claiming its victims by the thousands.

It is universally agreed by all well-informed persons that the surest preventative is to get the system in the best possible physical condition in order to be able to throw off the infection. As has been previously stated it is possible to perfect the powers or resistance of the human system so that it can throw off almost any infection, not excepting Spanish influenza, which is one of the most contagious diseases known.

Medical authorities agree that people who are weak and run-down are the earliest victims of the influenza epidemic. If you find yourself weak or losing flesh, or if you are in a generally run-down condition, you are really in great danger if you should come in contact with the influenza germ.

As a powerful reconstructive tonic and system builder, Tanlac is without equal. This is a statement of facts and is fully supported by recognized authorities. According to all accepted reference works, including the United States Dispensatory, Encyclopedia Britannica and leading text books used in the school of medicine, the principle ingredients of Tanlac possess the most valuable tonic properties known to science. This statement is further proven by the fact that millions of persons who have actually taken Tanlac have testified to its extraordinary merit as a medicine.

Tanlac restores health and strength to the weak and run-down system by enabling every organ of the body to perform its proper function in nature's own way. It creates a healthy appetite for good nourishing food, and is an ideal strengthening tonic for persons who are in a run-down condition and who are suffering from the after-effects of influenza, grippe or bronchial troubles.

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

Buffalo Strike Nearing the End

Company Will Pay the Award of War Labour Board.

BUFFALO, Oct. 25. — The three weeks' tie-up of all lines of the International Railway Company appeared to be in a fair way toward settlement to-day, although the situation still contained possibilities that may result in the continuation of the suspension of street car traffic. The company will pay the War Labour Board's award of forty-three to forty-eight cents an hour to motormen and conductors, but the scale does not become retroactive to June unless the company is authorized to charge a six cent fare.

TURKEY WILL ACCEPT PEACE

Special to The Examiner:

BASEL, Oct. 25.—Turkey will accept peace based on the principles of right and justice laid down by President Wilson, which the new Turkish government approves. Grand Vizier, Tewfik Pasha, is quoted in a Constantinople despatch as having so stated in Parliament.

MISS MABEL RAE DIED IN REGINA

Parents Were on the Way to Visit Their Stricken Daughter When Sad News Was Received.

Mabel Rae, the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rae, died yesterday afternoon in Regina. No particulars are known of the cause of her death, but it is supposed to have been pneumonia. She had been ill since Wednesday. Miss Rae left to take her new position with Barries, Ltd., in Regina, five weeks ago.

There are left of the immediate family, her parents, one sister Ethel, at home, and one brother, W. Allan Rae, with the Flying Corps, in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Rae are at present on their way to Regina.

Many Deaths From Pneumonia

Epidemic in Peterborough Has Taken a New Turn.

Carelessness in recovering from Spanish influenza is breeding a serious epidemic, pneumonia, which is an aftermath of the "Flu." Dr. C. H. Amys, M.O.H., said this morning. While influenza seems to be pretty well under control, it has now taken a pneumonic turn. Those who have been ill carelessly get up in a couple of days, thinking they are better, while some have to rise to wait upon another member of the family, and a case of pneumonia develops. The doctor admitted a large number of deaths due to the "Flu" about the city.

All Canada Looks to Ontario in Victory Loan

People of the Province Must Live Up to Their Already High Reputation.

A grave responsibility rests upon the people of Ontario in the forthcoming Victory Loan campaign. As the leading province in the Dominion, possessing preponderating influence in every movement that makes for the material progress of the Dominion, it is "up to" Ontario to lead the rest of the country in providing the 'sinews" for the further prosecution of the war.

Ontario's position last year was in the lead of the Victory Loan campaign. It is where she is expected to be in all fields of endeavour. She has sent her quota of fighting men to the scene of conflict. She has developed her industries to meet the demands of the Mother Country for food and war materials. She has responded to every call for funds to finance the score of war charities and helps. Her purse has ever been opened to assist in enterprises aimed to improve the lot of the whole people.

Ontario's 1917 Record.

Last year, Ontario subscribed $205,000,000 towards the Victory Loan. The total for the whole Dominion was $419,000,000. Figured down we find that Ontario's contribution was $64. for every man, woman and child in the province. Toronto alone subscribed $78,000,000, while the rest of the province furnished $127,000,000. Hamilton, also realized the fondest hopes of the promoters of the Loan, giving $82.33 for each head of population. One of every two and a half of the people of that city bought Victory bonds.

There is, perhaps, nothing remarkable in the fact that Ontario is in the forefront in contributing funds for the war. The wealth is here, and there is no better investment that Victory bonds, which pay 5½ per cent. interest and are tax free. The people have been earning big money, and although the cost of living has soared to dizzy heights the people have more available cash for gilt-edged investments than ever before. The bank deposits have increased $177,000,000 in the whole Dominion during the past year, and much of this accretion of wealth belongs to Ontario. And this increase has been in spite of the fact that Canadians put $419,000,000 into Victory Bonds last year, and $50,000,000 into Government and municipal bonds.

Ontario Produces One-Half.

In manufacturer products Ontario is responsible for fifty per cent. of the entire output of the Dominion, and in agricultural products Ontario's output is one-third of the total for the Dominion. Both in factory and field we have expanded our efforts to cope with the increasing demands of our kinsmen overseas. Last year Great Britain bought from Canada food products to the value of $320,000,000 and war materials to the value of $325,000,000. Ontario got her share of this trade. It was mainly financed out of the Victory Loan, and if we are to sell our entire surplus of exportable products we will have to make it possible for the Finance Minister to give credits to the purchaser. That is why $500,000,000 is needed this year.

It is Ontario's interest to make the Victory Loan a success.

MOVEMENT TO ASSESS BELL TELEPHONE CO.

LONDON, Oct. 24. — The City of London, has appealed to Toronto, Ottawa, Hamilton, Windsor and a large number of other municipalities to join in a movement to compel the Bell Telephone Company to pay taxes. The city's attitude is that the company cannot make use of city property for poles or underground conduits without the consent of the people. The proposal is to charge a rental of 25c for the ground occupied by each pole in the city and of 25c a hundred feet for conduits. Action is being taken with the other municipalities named to oppose the Bell Company's application for rate increases

Carl Noftall Killed in Action

His Mother Was Being Buried When Message Arrived.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Wm. Noftall taak place yesterday afternoon from the family residence, 188 Dalhousie street. The services were conducted by the Rev. Mr. Malott, B.A., B.D., of Trinity Methodist Church. The pall-bearers being Messrs. Edgar Burnham, Everett Taylor, R. F. Downey, O. S. Matchett, A. Stewart, J. Dinnian.

The many beautiful floral wreaths testified to the high esteem in which the deceased was held.

What makes the death of Mrs. Noftall still more sad was the receipt of a telegram from Ottawa informing Mr. Noftall of the death of his oldest son, Carl, killed in action, on Oct. 11th.

The sad news was received yesterday from Ottawa that No. 195179, Pte. Carl Noftall, was killed in action on Oct. 11th.

This was made doubly sad owing to the fact that Mrs. Wm. Noftall, his mother, who died on Tuesday, was being buried at the time the telegram reached here.

Pte. Carl Noftall was only 19 years of age, and was the eldest son of Mr. Wm. Noftall and the late Mrs. Noftall, 188 Dalhousie street.

Pte. Carl Noftall went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, A Company, and after taking a course in bombing in England, was transferred to the 20th Battalion. He saw some heavy fighting at Vimy Ridge, and the battle of Lens, was wounded on August 15th, 1917, being awarded the Military Medal for bravery on the field. He was 12 months in hospital in England, returning to France in August of this year, being attached to the Machine Gun Section of the 20th Battalion, where he was no doubt when killed. He was a great Y.M.C.A. boy, and was a member of Trinity Methodist Church.

The deepest sympathy of the city goes out to Mr. Wm. Noftall and family in their double bereavement, which has come upon them.

BLACK BEAR SHOT AT WESTWOOD

That big game in these parts has not entirely disappeared was evidenced last Thursday at Westwood when the attention of Thos. Cardwell, Jr., was attracted by a black bear crossing their farm while he was ploughing. Mr. Cardwell, in company with his father, gave chase to bruin, who took to a tree, where he was despatched by gun shot.

FOUND HIS WIFE DEAD.

BRANTFORD, Oct. 24—On going to his home from work to-day at noon, James Gillespy, 65 Richmond street, found his wife dead in a few inches of water in the cistern. It is thought that she had a fainting spell and fell over into the cistern. No inquest was deemed necessary.

DUNCAN ATTEMPTS ESCAPE.

Interned Aviator Injured when the Rope of Bedclothes Breaks.

GENEVA, Oct. 25. — Lieutenant Duncan, the American aviator, who with a companion, landed in the Jura Alps with his undamaged machine a month ago, and was interned, made a bold but futile attempt to escape from the interment camp at Andermatt, on Wednesday night.

Duncan made a rope with the bedclothes and slid down the way around the barracks but when he was some distance from the ground the rope broke and he was badly injured. He continued his attempt to escape, however, and walked in the direction of Goeschenen, along the railroad line.

His flight was discovered almost immediately and the alarm was sent out by telegraph and telephone.

There is a long tunnel between Andermatt and Goeschenen, and when the aviator emerged from it he was arrested. He was taken back to Andermatt, and the guard at the camp was doubled.

CROTIAN SOLDIERS HAVE REVOLTED

BASEL, Oct. 25.—It was announced in the Lower Chamber of the Hungarian Parliament yesterday that Crotian soldiers of the 79th regiment at Fume, had revolted, seized the city and destroyed the railroad there.

A VICTIM OF HIS ZEAL.

A Pacific Port, October 24. — Lt.-Commander J. J. Nadwein, the senior surgeon of a British vessel of war, died yesterday, a victim of his zeal in working for men suffering from Spanish influenza on the ship. The British warship arrived here yesterday with more than 200 of the crew ill.

MAIL DELAYED.

Pension Checks may be Late this Month.

The Board of Pensions has issued a statement to the effect that owing to the depletion of the post office staff, Ottawa, through Spanish influenza, there will probably be some delay in the registered mail in connection with soldiers' dependents and pensioners.

BRIDE DIES OF INFLUENZA.

WOODSTOCK, Oct. 24.—Influenza claimed another victim at an early hour this morning when Mrs. J. F. Wilson died following a few days' illness. Two weeks ago she married J. F. Wilson, a returned soldier. The couple were spending their honeymoon here when the husband contracted influenza and died Sunday morning. The wife, who is only 18 years of age, was stricken shortly after the burial of her husband. She was born in London, where the body was sent for burial.

The deceased was a daughter of the late Dr. J. N. Thompson, of Omemee.

JANE TOBY.
The death occurred Wednesday evening of Jane Toby, 12 years of age, of St. Vincent's Orphanage.
The funeral took place yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock from Lane and Eano's Undertaking Parlours to St. Peter's cemetery. The father of the deceased from Penetanguishene attended the funeral.

AGNES COSTELLO.
Agnes Costello, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Costello, died this afternoon at 2 o'clock at her home, 176 Aylmer street. The little girl had been ill for some time and about six weeks ago was seriously injured in an automobile accident near the Y.W.C.A. Since then she has gradually become weaker.
There are left besides her parents, one brother, Arthur, and one sister, Gladys, both at home.
Funeral announcement later.

MR. MANSON E. GILES
The death occurred very suddenly in Toronto of Mr. Manson E. Giles, aged 27 years from Spanish influenza. He was a son of the late Mr. Joseph Giles of North Monaghan and formerly lived in the city. About 2 years ago he married Miss Annis Patterson, who with her two young sons, Raymond and Stanley survive, also the mother, of Peterboro, but at present in Toronto. Two brothers also are left to mourn his loss, one on active service in France and another one in Toronto, who is also very ill, and one sister, Mrs. James Akey, 319 Dalhousie street.
Funeral announcement will be made later.

MASTER NORMAN OUTRAM
Master Norman Outram, aged 6 years, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Outram 198 Edinburgh street, died last night after a very short illness. He leaves besides his parents several sister and brothers to mourn his loss.
The funeral which was private took place this afternoon at 3 o'clock to Little Lake Cemetery, Rev. A. J. Thomas officiating.

MASTER DAVID SCOTT ROBERTSON
Master David S. Robertson, the five year old son of Mr. George Robertson 171 Aylmer street, died last evening after a short illness.
The funeral takes place on Saturday afternoon at 2:30, service at 2 o'clock to Little Lake Cemetery. Rev. A. J. Thomas of George Street Methodist church will officiate.

MR. PIERCE BUTLER
On October 24, at London, Ontario, the late Mr Pierce Butler passed away, death being due to paralysis Mr. Butler was a well-known resident of Peterboro and a member of St. Peter's Court (Orillia) Catholic Order of Foresters. He is survived by a widow and four sons all of Montreal and one daughter, Mrs. T. Neill of Sudbury.
On the arrival of the 8:10 train from Port Hope to-morrow morning the body will be moved to St. Peter's Cemetery for interment.

MR. CHARLES J. KELLY.
Mr. Charles J. Kelly, 34 years of age, eldest son of Mr. John Kelly, of Dummer, died in the city yesterday afternoon of pneumonia. Mr. Kelly had only been ill a week. He was very well known in this district, and was a graduate of Norwood High School. His mother, Mrs. Charles Kelly, was killed when the Turnbull Company's building collapsed.
Mr. Kelly's body was taken to Norwood for interment to-day. The funeral was held this afternoon in Norwood to Norwood cemetery. (Private).

FUNERAL WILL BE HELD TO-MORROW
Mrs. R. E. Wegg beloved wife of Corporal R. E. Wegg, who has been overseas for the last two years, died yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at Nicholls Hospital, after an illness of a few days. She leaves to mourn her loss besides her husband and parents, Mr and Mrs. David Anderson, two small children, Robert and Phyllis her sisters, Mrs. W. Lockie, Mrs. G. Moore, Mrs. R. Dunbar, Chrissie Anderson, Mae Anderson; her brothers, Steward and Alex. of the city and Ethel and Viva at home. The funeral will take place at 2 o'clock on Saturday afternoon from the residence of her father.

JAMES RITCHIE ORMOND
Mrs. J. R. Stratton, Toronto who suffered the loss of her sister a few days ago has again been bereaved.
Word has been received by her that her father, James Ritchie Ormond, died at the Victoria Hospital, the day following the death of his daughter after a serious illness. The late Mr. Ormond was born in Dundee, Scotland, and had he lived until next March would have reached his ninetieth birthay.
For many years he was a watch maker and jeweller in Peterboro removing to Winnipeg with his family where he was in business for a number of years. On retiring from business he went on to Victoria, B. C., where he and the majority of his family have resided since Mr. Ormond living quietly and devoting his time to his home, his books and his garden. He was a man of the highest integrity and honour in his business and private life. He was a proficient French scholar and a great reader and thoroughly enjoyed his library.
His wife was Elizabeth Blair, who predeceased him about eight years ago. Eight children were born, five of whom are living: Mrs. J. R. Stratton, Toronto, Mrs. J. T. McDonald, Victoria, B.C., Albert and Oliver also of Victoria and Mrs. A. F. Gooding, Kenora.
Father and daughter who had been together so much during their life were laid to rest the same day.
Mrs. Stratton will have the sincere sympathy of many friends in Peterboro in the loss of her father and sister.

MISS LILLIAN PURSGLOVE
At the family residence, 209 Rubidge street, Miss Lillian Pursglove, youngest daughter of Mr. J. Pursglove passed away after a brief illness on October 23rd. The deceased was born in England twenty-six years ago and during the eight years she has resided in Peterboro, has endeared herself to many who will feel her loss. She was a faithful member and worker of All Saints church.
She leaves to mourn her loss her father and two sisters, Mrs. Alcock of this city and Miss Alice Elizabeth Pursglove at home. The funeral service will take place at All Saints church at two o'clock on Saturday afternoon. The Rev. R. B. Grobb will officiate. Interment in Little Lake Cemetery.

MISS LILLIAS SOMERVILLE
Miss Lillias Somerville, a former resident of Peterboro, died in Toronto last evening from pneumonia which developed from Spanish influenza. Miss Somerville trained at the John Hopkins' Hospital, Baltimore U.S.A., and was connected with the nursing staff of the Toronto schools when she died. She contracted the disease from some of her patients. Her father, Mr. Frank L. Somerville, C.E., of Toronto formerly was a resident of this city.
The body arrived in the city on the morning train. The funeral will take place tomorrow from the home of the Misses Jenkins, 515 Water street, at 11 o'clock to Little Lake Cemetery. Rev. Canon J. C. Davidson will officiate.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

The many friends of Miss Lulu E. I. Lockhart will regret to learn that she is seriously ill, pneumonia having developed.

Miss Hilda Cubitt has returned to the city from Orange Hospital, Orange, N.J., for a few days' visit.

Miss Lillian Grady has returned home from Toronto University during the epidemic of Spanish influenza.

Major Keith Lech has returned from Kingston, suffering from a severe attack of Spanish influenza.

Mrs. A. P. McLean of Winnipeg, is in the city visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hall, Homewood Avenue.

Mr. Robert C. Smith of R. C. Smith & Son, Limited, was in the city today on business.

Mr. F. W. Fowlds, Hastings, has received word that his son, Donald Grant Fowlds, Fort Garry Horse, was killed in action on October 9th. His brother Eric, who is also overseas, was with the Trent Valley Staff for a number of months.

Occasionally when a man doesn't know what to say his silence is mistaken for a superior brand of wisdom.

DIDN'T FORGET "BAT"

Chicago Boys' Brotherhood helped Famous Veteran Boxer

Chicago, Oct. 25.—Bread cast upon waters returned to Battling Nelson last week, when he received $203 from the Boys' Brotherhood Republic to assist him in defraying his hospital expenses at St. Luke's hospital. Nelson who recently was stricken with Spanish influenza, issued an appeal to persons to whom he had lent money in his palmy days to repay him so that he could pay his doctor bills. While Bat had not lent the Boy's Republic and money, he aided them several years in staging a show, the proceeds of which put their organization on its feet. They heeded his appeal by raising more than $200 for his benefit.

IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

Kidney and Bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the block and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame causing a burning scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse again, there is difficulty in avoiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink, which quickly relieves bladder trouble.

A TRIP BEHIND YPRES

(By Captain J. A. F. Ozanne, R.G.A.)

The main avenue of approach to Ypres begins to show signs of the utter devastation of war as soon as one reaches Vlamertinghe. In the early days of the war Vlamertinghe was the railhead for the Ypres sector, and the first shell burst in the town on the 23rd of February, 1915. Three days afterwards the station was utterly and completely wiped out by shell fire, and Vlamertinghe ceased to be used as a railhead.

Vlamertinghe was an interesting spot in 1917, because one-half of the town was in the war and the other half was out of it. As you approached the town from Poperinghe you found the houses in quite an excellent state of preservation, in many of them, in fact, the windows were still unbroken. As you got near to the church, however, the scene changed and, judging from the ruin and desolation, you might have been standing in Ypres itself. The church consisted of just the four walls and tower, or rather part of the tower, for this had been spared as far as the clock only. Above the clock there was no more tower, and the face of the clock itself showed up grotesquely like a dark half moon. It was by this church that you turned off the Ypres road on to the Vlamertinghe - Elvendinghe road.

This road runs due north from Vlamertinghe, and in those days it ran parallel to the German lines. What made a journey along it fairly exciting was the fact that there were siege and heavy batteries on both sides of the road the whole way along it. It was seldom that at least two of these batteries were not getting their usual doses of Hun "frightfulness," and, as at least fifty per cent. of the remainder were invariably "getting their own back," the road speedily became one of the noisiest spots in the whole salient.

On leaving Vlamertinghe you went for a few hundred yards through as pretty a piece of sylvan scenery as any in Flanders. The branches of the trees on either side of the road met overhead and formed an effective natural tunnel against the heat and glare of a Belgian summer. On the left one saw in the distance Vlamertinghe Chateau, which at that time was still in fairly good order, and in front of the Chateau was Home Farm, which "went up" one Sunday morning in April, 1917. Further on one came to "Dairy" Farm, so called, I fancy, from the fact that it was still being used as a farm and one could still purchase milk, cheese and butter there.

They were wonderful people, were the inhabitants of "Dairy" Farm. On Sunday mornings you would see Madame making her way home from Mass in Vlamertinghe, taking no thought of the 5.9 shells which were bursting across her very path. Nothing ever seems to disturb the stolidity of the Belgian peasant, and the fact that the farm next door was in flames, or that the 9.2 battery was firing salvos right over the house, never worried the girls as they churned the butter or worked the separator. The Bon Dieu had looked after them so far, as Madame would say, and there was no reason why He should withdraw His protection.

The next point of interest was Holy Farm. Its name originated in the fact that it had suffered almost as severely as its neighbour, Hell Farm. Of Hell Farm but a remnant remained, yet its cellars made admirable billets for the officers and men of the many batteries which came and went. On the other side of the road dug-outs had been constructed, large concrete rooms with rows of chicken wire bunks for the men. In a copse near by a Belgian Observation Post, a sentry box on the top of a tall tree with a succession of ladders reaching up to it. Past this copse ran the road which connected the Vlamertinghe road with the Elverdinghe-Ypres road, which it joined just at Dawson's Corner.

A quarter of a mile further on one came in sight of the village of Elverdinghe, or rather what was left of it, for the whole of Elverdinghe was like the worse half of Clamertinghe. It is when one has seen a few of these Belgian towns and villages that one begins to appreciate the Hun character. Only quite recently the Berliner Tageblatt gloried in the fact that nobody could deny that the German armies had accomplished the total destruction of yet another corner of France. "At night," says the Berliner Tageblatt, "one can see the fires which are ravaging the harvests and the forests. There, at any rate, is a consoling spectacle."

That is all the comfort which the soul of the German requires. So long as his craving for wanton destruction is satisfied he cares not how many of his own comrades are sacrificed, or how many people at home in Germany are starving. It is the Hun character, and Vlamertinghe and Elverdinghe bear eloquent but silent testimony of it.

GRAIN MARKET

The car situation is still responsible for a very limited movement of corn. The option market, however, is chiefly influenced by the war and political news of the day. The Kaiser Orders the Troops to Kill All Peace Rioters

Americans Capture Secret Documents Disclosing Entire Campaign Against Anti-Militaristic Crowds.

(By Edward M. Thierry.)

PARIS, France, Oct. 26.—The Kaiser is planning defense against enemies at home as well as against the allies on the battlefield.

A confidential order promulgated by the German superior command for ruthless suppression of mutiny and strikes has fallen into the hands of the American army.

Special corps of troops have been selected to pour shot and shell into gathering groups of people demanding peace.

The entire campaign of warfare against anti-war crowds has been planned in advance, just as carefully as the Huns mapped out, months and years in advance, the initial steps of the war of 1914.

The confidential order, entitled "Interior Troubles," was addressed to all infantry detachments of the Guard Corps and to the Third, Fourth and Fifth Army Corps.

Here is the strike order, in substance:

"At the receipt of a telegram bearing the title 'prepare Defense Against Strikes' all units must be mobilized and ready to move.

"Upon the arrival of the second telegram, 'Defense Against Strikes,' commanders of all units will be instructed as to the routes to follow and the transportation means placed at their disposal for taking troops to the outskirts of Berlin.

"Men will be fully equipped and ready to march, with rifles and hand grenades, but without gas masks.

"When commanders receive the the third telegram, 'Prepare Investment,' all designated units will proceed immediately to the places that have been assigned them. Battalion commanders will take all necessary measures for offense and defense.

"Upon receiving the telegram marked 'Investment,' the Third, Fourth and Fifth Corps will march simultaneously into Berlin from their suburb station. The Guard Corps will repulse the crowd from the centre of the city."

Thus two walls of steel are to hem in anti-militaristic mobs, catching them ruthlessly in the jaws of a huge trap.

CATTLE MARKET

With a heavy run of cattle, the bulk being very poor quality, offering in Monday's market, there was a further setback in prices from the previous week's levels. All grades suffered more or less, the better grades from 25 to 50 cents lower and the common from 60 cents to $1. Although the succeeding markets brought lighter runs, the trade remained dull and draggy all through the week, the commission men finding it exceedingly difficult to cash in the large offerings of lightweight common steers and heifers of the stockers and feeders class. Failing any demand from the farmers for feeding stock, these cattle in large numbers are being sacrificed to the packers for killing at prices ranging from $6.25 to $7. This wholesale slaughtering of the young feeding stock of the country is deplored by many of the leading men in the cattle trade as likely to result in a serious shortage of cattle fit for marketing at a later stage. There is said to be an abundance of fodder feed in the form of heavy turnip and other root crops, much of which will probably have to be destroyed at the end of the season for lack of a profitable market. The fact remains, however, that at present there is no demand for feeding stock, and cattle that should be putting on beef are uselessly sacrificed at rapidly falling prices. For fair loads of finished butcher cattle the market showed a slightly improving tone towards the latter part of the week.

Supplies of sheep and lambs have been liberal, and prices were about a dollar lower at the end of the week.

Choice veal calves were firm and a little high.

Hogs held practically steady and unchanged all week at $18.25 fed and watered, and $17.25 f.o.b.

Cattle Receipts.

Union Stock Yards—Total receipts this week: 7,341 cattle, 479 calves, 4,965 hogs and 5,050 sheep and lambs.

City Cattle Market—20 cars with 478 cattle, 927 sheep and lambs, 229 hogs and 47 calves.

FRANTIC APPEALS FROM ALL OVER THE PROVINCE—SERUM ALSO WANTED.

TORONTO, Oct. 24.— Again the Provincial Health Department is being inundated with requests for the help of doctors and nurses, to say nothing of requests for the "flu" serum.

At the present time the laboratory is working overtime to get the serum ready to ship out to the places that are calling for it. The staff, which is looking after the supplying of nursing help, is working late at nights trying to meet the situation, and today extra help was put on by Dr. McCullough.

In some places the epidemic is so bad that not a doctor in the place is available, or they are all down but one, and frantic appeals are being telegraphed in.

In Cochrane the Medical Officer of Health is ill, his whole family is down, and he has lost one child with it. A wire from that place said only one doctor was left.

PROTEST BY A BISHOP.

Head of Hamilton Anglican Diocese Objects to the Closing of the Churches.

HAMILTON, Oct. 26.—Bishop Clark of the Diocese of Niagara sent a letter to the Board of Health, protesting against the closing of the churches. His Lordship stated that this was a time when prayer and intercession were most necessary. The religious reasons for being open he considered paramount, and the medical reasons for closing were negligible, he contended, inasmuch as the order did not close large industrial and commercial institutions.

NEW CANADIAN NOVEL—THE COW PUNCHER.

An English reviewer recently, in reviewng the poems of Robert J. C. Stead, said that while Canada's troops had done nobly in the war such writers as Stead were doing a no less valuable service in building up a genuine national literature. The reader who is wise enough to obtain a copy of "The Cow Puncher," Mr. Stead's latest novel, will agree with the English reviewer. It is a genuine contribution to the national wealth of Canada, made by a writer whose intimate knowledge of the West peculiarly qualifies him for such a service.

Since Robert Stead wrote his famous poem on the death of Kitchener all who profess to be informed on current literature have been more or less conversant with his work. His collection, "Kitchener and Other Poems," published last fall, was a best seller, and is still in considerable demand. The English edition is reported to have been a big success in Great Britain. His previous novel, "The Homesteaders," has been so continuously sold out on the Canadian market that a new edition has just been issued in Canada.

"The Cow Puncher" promises to add to a reputation already well established. It is not merely a novel; it is an event in the literary life of the country. Dr. W. T. Allison, professor of English, and well known literateur, declares that it is the biggest thing in a literary way that ever came out of the prairie country. It is very pleasant reading, and there is a unique vein of humour and philosophy which has caused it to be called the David Harum of Canada. But "The Cow Puncher" is by no means literary pastime. Its note is in keeping with the serious business of the times, and in its closing chapters it rises to a patriotic level not excelled by any present writer.

It is not our purpose here to outline the plot of "The Cow Puncher," you will enjoy it more to read it in the author's own words. The book is published in Canada by the Musson Book Co., of Toronto, and in the United States by Harper & Brothers. It is attractively illustrated by Arthur Heming, one of Canada's most successful artists.

THE WIFE

BY JANE PHELPS

The Head Clerk at Mandel's Instructs Ruth as to Her Duties.

CHAPTER XXII

Ruth's lip quivered when she realized that Brian had gone without the usual caress, but she choked back the tears and went about her work, now that she had planned to have someone to do the distasteful tasks, they seemed more hateful than ever. Someway, too, she could not hurry but kept thinking of Brian, his displeasure. Finally she decided not to wash the dishes, but to clear the table, make the bed, and do the dishes when she prepared dinner.

"I know I shall just hate to see them when I come home, but I haven't time to do them now," she said aloud as she looked at the clock. There was but an hour in which to dress and reach the shop.

Promptly at quarter to nine, she walked into the door of the decorator's. Mr Mandel had not yet arrived, so the clerk, an innocuous looking youth, told her—she found out afterward that, in spite of his looks Jules La Monte was an expert in his line. She asked where she should put her hat, and then sat down to wait.

Just as the clock struck nine, Mr. Mandel walked briskly in.

"Ah, good morning, Mrs Hackett," he said, then at once began to give La Monte some instructions in short, terse sentences.

"He doesn't waste words," Ruth thought as she waited, quietly listening until he should be at liberty to attend to her. But when he finished with La Monte, he added:

"After you attend to what is necessary, I want you to tell Mrs. Hackett something of her duties. She will—in as far as she is able—take Miss Candee's place," then he walked into the room with "private" on the door, closing it after him.

Ruth felt a little disappointed. She had supposed he himself, would explain her duties. That he had relegated them to the clerk, made her feel that he did not think her worth while spending his time with. This feeling showed, of course, how little Ruth knew of business or its ethics.

"I shall be only a few moments, Mrs Hackett," La Monte said as he turned from her. "Suppose you look around until I return."

"Thank you, I will," rising. Ruth sauntered through the shop—rather, the street floor. They occupied two stories, but she did not feel free to go up-stairs on her own initiative.

As she passed from one wonderful art object to another; as she allowed her fingers to touch caressingly the soft Oriental fabrics, she breathed a sigh of pure happiness and satisfaction. She had forgotten Brian's displeasure, she had even forgotten Brian himself, in her delight at her surroundings.

She had walked toward the front of the shop. Passing was a man who reminded her of Brian. His walk the set of his shoulders, his way of carrying his chin. She immediately felt guilty. She really loved her handsome husband, and that the beauty around her could cause her to forget him made her unhappy for a moment. Then came the thought of the four little rooms—the kitchen with the sordid dishes in a pan, covered with a towel. All the sordidness of her life as she lived it during the day when Brian was at the office, came to her, causing her to again regain her placid manner before La Monte returned to her.

"This way, Mrs. Hackett!" he led her to the elevator "Most of your work will be on the next floor," he explained.

An exclamation of delight broke from Ruth as she stepped from the lift. Piled in what seemed confusion, were silks and brocades, glorious colorings, wonderful weaves. The Orient had been robbed, it seemed to her to supply these beautiful stuffs. And she was to spend her days here, in this place, instead of in her dingy little kitchen. Her eyes filled.

"How lovely!" she murmured, blinking them back so that La Monte would not see her weakness. That he HAD seen, and seeing had said to himself: "She'll soon have Miss Candee's place," Ruth did not know until long afterward. An artist himself, he recognized the temperament in her.

Ruth listened carefully while he explained what would be expected of her. Often he led her on to express herself and was surprised at her breadth of knowledge. He said nothing of this to her, however. Yet, when, more than once, she had, in speaking of some article, placed the period at once he had been surprised.

Before he left her he showed her a desk which was to be be her very own. Then he left her, laying down the plan of a room to be decorated (an order received that morning) and a note giving her a general idea of the house.

Could Ruth have heard what he said when he reached Mr. Mandel's office she would have been more than delighted: she would have felt a great pride.

"That Mrs. Hackett is a find, Mr. Mandel. She knows fully as much of the tecnique of the business as Miss Candee did."

"That is saying a good deal, La Monte, but you only confirm my opinion."

A LEGEND OF MEXICO.

Origin of the Eagle and Serpent on Its Coat of Arms.

The coat of arms of the republic of Mexico, which occupies the center of white bar of the flag and consists of a beautiful device representing an eagle perched upon a cactus (what in Mexico is called nopal) devouring a serpent, is intimately connected with the history of the people. In the beginning of the fourteenth century the ancient Mexicans, or Aztecs, after wandering for a long time around the Mexican valley looking for a place to build their city, arrived after terrible sufferings and adventures on the southwestern border of Lake Texcoco in 1325.

There they halted, for in front of them they beheld what naturally they considered an auspicious omen from their gods. An immense royal eagle of extraordinary size and beauty stood upon a cactus growing in the crevice of a rock washed by the waves of the lake. In its talons it held a serpent, and its broad, beautiful wings opened to the rising sun.

Obeying the mandate of their oracle that there they should build their city, they set to work, and by driving piles into the marshes with no other material at hand but frail reeds and rushes the foundations of the great Tenochtitlan, the chief city of the Aztecs and the site of the modern City of Mexico, were laid.

The Other Way.

SECRET OF THE PARIS HAT.

The Magic but Deadly Needle That Holds Its Spirit.

An American milliner seeking to learn what it is that makes the Paris hat so bewitching sought work in Paris and found it easily enough in one of the largest exporting houses, a name to conjure with. One afternoon saw her seated upon a bench with gay, chattering companions who radiated joy and sparkle on every side of her. Deft fingers flew with chattering tongues, confusing her by the bewildering creations called into being with breathless haste.

When night came the loneliness she dreaded did not come, so filled was her solitude by thoughts of all she had seen and heard, and so hard did her brain work to digest all the wonders. Would she, could she, in two months grasp the "something" and take it home to America, and in so doing reach another stepping stone in her career? The following morning found her seated upon her assigned bench. She had been told to come at 8 o'clock, and every clock and watch said 8—but she was alone. In half an hour her companions of yesterday began to stray in casually. Dull of eye and listlessly they came. No bubbling laugh, no gay chatter filled the room, and what was more surprising, no work was attempted. Some great calamity must have occurred! The whole nation must be suffering death and facing calamity. Questions failed to bring forth answers, and the puzzle grew. Were all her dreams to vanish with the night? The "house" must have failed was her final thought.

Around 10 or 11 o'clock the party broke up for dejeuner, and with their return came a breath of the spirit of the afternoon before. Increasing gayety and brilliant ideas grew with the hours, and the wonder of it was more and more inexplicable. The mornings were one long torture, the afternoons a joy. One day all was revealed. A tiny hypodermic needle filled with the stuff that dreams are made of is the spirit of the Paris hat!

The workers until sufficiently "doped" cannot work, cannot produce, and listlessly idle the morning hours till hypodermic needle and nostrils create the gay, chattering designer, who brings forth the joy giving Paris hat.—Jessie Relyea in National Magazine.

Dividing the Circle.

Ancient Chaldeans divided the circle into 360 equal parts because they thought that there are 360 days in a year. They could not prove that the earth turns on its axis 365.256431 times while going around the sun once.—New York American.

Her Choice.

"Can he sing well?"

"Well, I'll tell you. He offered to sing the baby to sleep the other night, and his wife said, 'No; let her keep on crying.'"

Sinking of the Caspian Sea.

Geologists claim that the Caspian sea is continually sinking. Known to all schoolboys as the largest interior body of water in the world, the Caspian is about 730 miles in greatest length and 330 miles in extreme width. Its area is estimated to be 170,000 square miles, while the area of England and Wales is 58,000 odd square miles. These figures give a clear idea of the size of the Caspian. Notwithstanding its size, parts of the sea are very shallow. In the southern portions, however, a depth of over 3,000 feet has been registered. Our physical geography tells us that the present sea is part of a vast oceanic water which at one time extended to the Arctic ocean.—Westminster Gazette.

THE HOME CIRCLE COLUMN

Pleasant Evening Reveries—A Column Dedicated to Tired Mothers as They Join the Home Circle at Evening Tide

Solomon did not set up one standard for the girls and another for the boys; he says—"train up a child." One child in the dear home nest is as lovely to us as another, and yet there are but few homes where the boys are as tenderly shielded as the girls. We are not quite as careful to watch their daily formation of habits and their conversation, as we are that of the "girlies." They are more exuberant in spirit, and we send them out of the house for the sake of quiet—after that the girls may practice their music.

Plan out you life on a big scale, whether you are a farmer's daughter, or a shepherdess among the hills, or the flattered pet of a drawing room filled with statuary and pictures and bric-a-brac. Stop where you are and make the plan for your lifetime. You cannot be satisfied with a life of frivolity and giggle and indiscretion. Trust the world and it will cheat you if it does not destroy you. The Redoubtable was the name of the enemy's ship that Lord Nelson spared twice from demolition, but that same ship afterward sent the ball that killed him, and the world on which you smile may aim at you its deadliest weapon.

Poor, indescribably poor, is that girl who has gifts, a clear mind and active hands, and who has not been taught how to use them, wandering aimlessly through life, mediocre in everything, without definite aim, seeking vainly for occupations to amuse or distract, performing her body to gratify ignorant vanity, injuring herself by late hours and bad food, sparkling dimly in the struggle for a rich husband, and then as a wife, realizing her weakness an lack of worth; as mother, weeping bitter stinging tears as she sees the results of her miserable life magnified in her children, and waiting piteously for help and strength when it is too late. No sarcasm this; the scientific man turns to his work with a heavy heart after studying such a case. But objects teaching is nature's teaching, and many repetitions are necessary before people will take the lesson and its full meaning to heart.

It is pleasan to go into the country at this season of the year. There are cattle on a thousand hills. There are many herds of swine by the roadside into which the evil spirit has not yet entered. There is a cordial greeting when you meet the farmer, the merchant or mechanic. There is a welcome if you enter the farm house and there is always a hospitality, which is a delight to share. Truly, God made the country and man made the town. When you go into the country you view God's handiwork; you behold his bounty. You see beauty with which He has adorned man's habitation. You have more reverence for Him because of his manifold goodness to the children of men. If you want to feel young again; if you want to forget care and let your thoughts gambol; if you want to learn anew the lesson of the Fatherland of God; if you would commune with nature and learn her message, get yourself out into the country. Seek the solitude of the everlasting hills, and a day so spent will be to you a real Thanksgiving Day.

It is extremely unpleasant for a sensitive woman, who before marriage, had been earning her own living and had been accustomed to spending her income as she pleased, to ask a man for money to buy everything she needs, such as cotton, needles, pins, etc., etc. It seems to us no more than right that a man should give his wife, for her own necessities, at least half as much money as he would a servant She keeps his house, provides for the comfort of himself and children, not for hire, but because she loves them, and she cares for her husband's interests as no hired housekeeper would, and is she not entitled to pay for her services? Yet some men would think it hardship to pay a wife the amount he would be obliged to pay a servant girl. There is as many women among the working classes who would think herself highly favored if she were sure of fifty cents per week of her husband's wages to spend as she pleased. The above hints are for the husbands who need them and written in consideration of their good wives

Let us learn to tip our hats as politely to the young lady who sews for a living or earns it by any honest toil as to the one who teaches French or chews gum in seven different languages. Let us give as warm a clasp of the hand of the honest tiller of the soil, the fireman or brakeman as we do to the lawyer or doctor. Let us recognize honesty and industry wherever found, and the time will soon came when there will be an army of bright, intelligent, honest young men and women at the bottom of the ladder, ready to labor at any honorable calling. Let us remember that the most beautiful lives have blossomed in the darkest places, as pure, white lilies full of fragrance in the slimy, stagnant waters. Wealth, birth and official station may, and do, secure to their possessors an extreme, superficial courtesy; but they never did, nor never can, command the reverence of the heart. The most beautiful flowers are found hidden in some shady nook; the most beautiful lives are often found hidden in an humble home at the foot of the ladder.

We are not all born with the sunshine in our hearts, as the Irish people prettily term it, but we can all coax some of it in there if we only try.

WHEN WILL THE WAR BE OVER?

CAN you answer this question—When will the war be over? Every boy and girl wants to know. You can, if you are able to read this puzzle. The answer is contained within the 46 squares above. What is this answer? Solve it, and valuable prizes await you.

HOW TO SOLVE IT

The above squares hold the answer. It is in one sentence of nine words, containing forty letters. Each letter is represented by a number, and that number is the position of the letters in the alphabet. For instance, A is represented by the figure 1, as it is first in the alphabet, and so on. Now, to help you get started, we will tell you that the first letter in the puzzle is "W," because W is the 23rd letter in the alphabet. Get to work and figure out the words in the sentence, and try to find the answer to the great question, "When will the war be over?" It is not easy, but it is worth while trying for.

THE PRIZES

Prize	Value
1st—Five Horse Power Auto	$150.00

Anzac Labor and War.

The great part Australian labor has taken in the war was told to an audience of union men by former Premier Crawford Vaughan, of the Australian Government, at Seattle, recently. Eight per cent. of the population of the dominion has enlisted, he said, and of the number of Australian troops, 150,000 were members of trades unions. Of this 150,000, he continued, 45,000 already have given their lives. Labor, he declared, is strongly supporting the cause of the Allies in Australia. He said the dominion had adopted its political system largely from the Government of the United States.

Rheumatism

Rheumatism has become so common nowadays that hundreds of people make no effort to rid themselves of its fatal grip, believing it to be incurable save in exceptional cases.

No greater fallacy exists. Sufferers from rheumatism can be relieved if the cause is remedied and removed.

Let us examine the facts. The direct cause of rheumatism and kindred diseases is poisoning of the blood stream, through failure of the kidneys to filter and remove the impurities that are constantly collecting in the system.

Once the kidneys are out of order, the trouble starts. The poison-ladened blood circulating through the system deposits its impurities in the muscles and joints, setting up infection, and Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, etc., follow.

The first step necessary is to bring the kidneys to perform their natural function once again, and relief will be the immediate result. Gin Pills will do it, and will save weeks of fearful suffering if taken at the first indications of rheumatism.

Gin Pills have been recognized as an assured relief to sufferers from rheumatism, backache, painful urination, brick dust deposits, and gravel. Thousands of testimonials bear witness to the fact that they relieve kidney or bladder troubles instantly. Try them. For sale everywhere at 50c a box. Gin Pills cost little, but are worth a lot. Sample free on request.

Too late to make your merry plea,
Vile vallal of the Hun;
Your answer booms unceasingly—
The logic of the gun.

You be wand smile with humble grace,
You tell row you abhor
The bloody terror of the chase,
The horrid reign of War!

You did not always reckon so,
Your manner was most bold
Toward Serbia four years ago,
When all the world said "Hold!"

You clanked your thirsty sabre then,
You cried aloud for gore;
Well, when you raise your voice again
It will not be for more.

COMMUNITY SINGING IS A ....GREAT MUNICIPAL ASSET....

An unquestionable handicap in the past form under which we are gradually emerging is that music has been thought of as something we pay to go and hear. It wasn't a part of family life. Children weren't encouraged as they should heve been to study music and many who were, promptly dropped it as soon as they left school from lack of the proper home influence. But the war has put music in its proper perspective as a family affair. We now accept the spirit of the toast: "Here's to Music! The beloved despot whose willing slaves we be, linked by the golden chains of melody."

As one of the results of the new viewpoint is the spread of community singing. In different cities all over the continent community "sings" have been held with attendance running from six to eight hundred to fifty thousand The beauty of the community singing idea is that everyone is qualified to take part because no standard is imposed, no test is required. It is not necessary to know how to sing according to the usual meaning of that expression. Every man, woman and child can sing, if theya only let themsedves go, and lose that selfconsciousness, which makes one shy shy about stepping out from others to do anything. Once everybody joins in, each does let himself go and then there is real singing, provided only there is a sense of melody, and a familiarity with the words. For thes ecommunity sings, at least for a geginning, the work is limited to the well-known selections, thus leaving no reason why there should not be a tremendous volume of hearty singing.

Obviously enough, no one unit should bawl its loudest, bent upon making a big noise. Noise is not music. Quantity is not quality and besides an unusually lusty voice may be a source of discouragement to a more timid neighbor. The central aim should be the feeling of expression in song. This normal way for a gathering of citizens to blend their voices in song may be made an exceedingly effective way of stimulating a patriotic feeling and when these citizens are experiencing the perfect harmony of singing together, the civic spirit will be fostered and a greater attempt to live together in the spirit of unselfishness and cooperation will be noticed.

Community singing is undoubtedly a great municipal asset.

East Africa's Popular Song.

The war has produced some stirring songs. The earlier "Tipperary," which originally was not intended for a war song, has been succeeded by "Keep the Home Fire Burning," "Over There," and other compositions that set the patriotic pulse to beating in tune with the marching men. But probably no song produced by the war is being sung with more genuine fervor that this chant of the natives of East Africa, now emancipated from German misrule: "The twenty-five lashes are gone, are gone." This colony, according to the moderator of the Church of Scotland, was known as "the land of the twenty-five lashes" because of the terrible punishments with whips of rhinoceros hide inflicted on the natives for trifling offences.

This former use of the whip was quite in accord with the regular German policy. Germany's conception of ruling is terrorism. Her home government being an autocracy, the repression of democratic instincts, her attitude toward subject peoples could scarcely be less than that of a slave-driver. But we do not have to go so far away as Africa to find Germany employing the whip as an instrument of government. The recent proclamation "issued by the headquarters of the German military government of Udine to the inhabitants of conquered Italy," stated that "lazy children," that is, those who were disinclined to labor in the fields from 4 a.m. to 8 p.m. every day, Sundays included, "will be punished by beating" and that "the commandant reserves the right to punish lazy workmen with twenty lashes daily." The people of Belgium are well acquainted with the whip. It is kultur's sceptre. One of these days it will be thrown on the junk pile along with the rest of kultur's equipment.

COAL-TAR MAGIC.

Valuable Products Made From This Raw Material.

The modern magician's favorite raw material is coal tar. He waves his wand over it, and lo! all sorts of marvels spring into being.

Coal tar (a cheap by-product in the manufacture of illuminating gas) is an exceedingly complex organic compound, out of which the chemist seems to be able to dig almost anything he wants, from a dye to a perfume, from a disinfectant to a grease-spot eradicator and from a pain-quelling drug to a war explosive.

It is almost exactly a century since (in 1820) naphthalene was first derived from coal tar. We are most familiar with it to-day as the substance out of which mothballs are made. But from it have also been obtained some beautiful colors—buttercup yellow and a variety of scarlets, pinks and greens.

Next came benzine—discovered in 1825 by Michael Faraday. There is a little bottle of it in every household. It has the property of dissolving fats, and therefore is highly effective as a remover of grease spots. What is known as the "dry-cleaning" process (a mystery to most folks) is simply washing with a mixture of gasoline and benzine soap.

Many years ago a clever chemist was trying to make an artificial quinine from benzine treated with nitric acid. In this attempt he failed, but to his great surprise his process yielded cheaply and in quantity "aniline"—the stuff that is to-day the source of a whole rainbow of wonderful dyes.

From benzine, also, is derived an artificial oil of bitter almonds, used by the hundreds of tons for the scenting of soaps. And likewise obtained from coal-tar (black and ill smelling) are many exquisite perfumes, such as "white heliotrope," for my lady's toilette.

Anthracene (from coal-tar) furnishes the gorgeous color for fabrics known as "turkey red," which formerly was extracted from the root of the madder plant. The discovery that the veritable color stuff of the madder root could be chemically produced revolutionized the dyeing and calico-printing industries.

Most widely used of all coal-tar products is carbolic acid. It was the original germ killer, the first one used by Lister as a disinfectant in surgery. The arts have found other employments for it, but it is most important nowadays as a base for the manufacture of high explosives. If the Kaiser were wholly deprived of carbolic acid from this time forth Germany could do no more fighting. —Rene Zache in Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Story of a Church Sign.

In New York city alone more than 150 electric signs are used by the churches. Perhaps the earliest illuminated church sign was a cross placed over St. Augustine chapel, in lower Manhattan, nearly forty years ago. Again and again Bowery mission and settlement house workers have met men and women who have testified that the flaming cross on St. Augustine's was the instrument that turned them from evil lives.

THE SOURCE OF SUPPLY OF PURE BRED HORSES CHANGING

TYPES OF HORSES BRED ON AN ALBERTA FARM

CANADA has the largest horse-breeding establishment of any single breed of horses in the world. It is that of Mr. George Lane, who, on his ranches at High River and Namaka, Alberta, has some six hundred thoroughbred horses of the Percheron breed. Mr. Lane is said to own more pure bred horses of one breed than any other three men. Be that as it may he has built up a magnificent establishment, to which seekers after good horses are already being attracted from all parts of the world, which reflects great credit to his foresight, enterprise and industry.

Mr. Lane was one of the first to realize the favorable conditions existant in Alberta to the production of healthy live stock, and early saw the enormous possibilities of the horse industry there. A soil rich in mineral matters; the availability of an abundance of nourishing feed for the construction of a strong, perfect, enduring frame; a bright atmosphere, bracing and pure, furnishing the oxygen required for lung development; the benefitting sunlight, and plenty of pure drinking water—these are some of the advantages possessed by Alberta which contribute to the growth of a strong, vigorous healthy animal, unsurpassed anywhere in the world.

Mr. Lane's first experience with imported horses was with a number which he brought over the border from Montana in the early nineties, and the success he had with these justified his confidence in the country and in the breed he had chosen —the Percheron. The United States soon became a field too limited to supply the needs of Mr. Lane and about ten years ago he went to France with the intention of purchasing about a hundred and fifty high class horses in the home of the breed, which he had made his own. On his arrival there he was disappointed to find, however, that all the good horses at about the prices he had intended to pay had been disposed of. All that were left were a number of mediocre animals and a few animals of the very highest class and price. He at once decided that the former were of no use to him, and returned to Alberta with seventy-five of the latter, which he had purchased for the sum that he intended to invest in double that number. Mr. Lane now considers this the best piece of business he ever transacted in his life.

Thus was laid the foundation of his great establishment, which even now, although it exceeds in size any similar establishment in the world, is capable of considerable expansion. From the time of Mr. Lane's first visit to France to the outbreak of the war he became a regular importer of Percheron horses from that country; but the tables are now being turned, and after the war it is expected that France will look largely to Alberta as a source for the renewal of her pure-bred stock. The work of the horses from Alberta in the war has made many friends for them, and Mr. Lane and other breeders have orders now for shipment to Europe of thoroughbred horses as fast as shipping space is available. These orders are not contingent upon the war; rather is the cessation of hostilities likely to cause a still greater demand for horses of the highest breeding.

George Lane is not the only successful breeder of Percheron horses in Alberta. There are many others who, while their business is not so extensive, have been quite as successful in their own way and have built up valuable herds. Nor is the Percheron the only breed of horses there. Clydes, Suffolks, Belgians, as well as Hackneys and other breeds, have their admirers and successful breeders, and the country is making big reputations for them. There is something in the environment which brings out in the offspring what is best of the breeding in which the foundation has been laid. Just as a high grade sample of wheat planted in the fertile soil of Alberta with greater vigor, producing larger and better grain than seed sown in hotter and more humid environments, so does the horse develop all its finest points to perfection in Alberta.

It is an outstanding fact that the nearer one goes to the equator the smaller the breeding animals become. As a very competent authority has pointed out, it is the high altitudes from New Mexico north that must be looked to for size, ruggedness and strength in horses, and the larger the percentage of sunshine, the greater vitality we may expect. That Alberta is eminently endowed in this respect is shown by the class of animal that is being raised here, and by the fact that the stud herds of the province are being heavily drained upon by the east and by Europe.

One of the most potent factors in the increase of livestock production in the future must be the improvement of the present breeding stock, and the base of supply will be those regions where animals with vitality and power to resist disease originate. The most remarkable fact that breeders who have experience in other countries notice is the exceedingly low percentage of mortality among horses in Alberta, especially among the young animals. What this means between success and non-success in this line of business, only the experienced breeder can appreciate. It means so much that there is scarcely any line of endeavor anywhere yielding such good returns as the raising of purebred horses in Alberta is doing, and it bespeaks for the province a wonderful future.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Little-Hat Lady

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Designing hats for a popular-price wholesale millinery establishment was not Upton Pread's ideal of a stalwart, life-sized man's occupation. Still even young men with that innate feeling for line and color that marks them—or brands them—as artists before they have had a fair chance to determine for themselves whether they wish to follow an artist's career or not, have to eat and have to be clothed, and designing women's hats seemed at the time to be the only opportunity that afforded what Pread considered a living wage. Getting an occasional order for a portrait perhaps was more the sort of thing he had dreamed of, and more the sort of thing his friends expected, but it would not have provided for him a comfortable existence at the Stanley Arms, and Upton Pread found hat living at that well-appointed little hotel had advantages that offset the designing of hats.

Still Upton did not like to have people know the nature of his "artistic" work. In the morning after breakfast he got out his drawing board and, shut up in his snug little chintz room, he would call into being first the image of heads of fair women, and then, as if by magic, he would summon hats to crown them. Hastily and with quick stroke of his pencil he would sketch the pretty heads and then, with minuteness that made reproduction by a milliner possible, he would portray the hat. Having made some four or five sketches he would roll them up securely in his portfolio and, after having had luncheon in the hotel dining room he would sally forth to the millinery establishment, there to deliver his wares. They were not always accepted. In fact, he was expected only to deliver two designs a day and he made sometimes as many as six. After his visit to the milliner's he had a good part of the afternoon free—not entirely free, either, for if he elected to go to one of the fashionable indoor ice rinks he always had before him the task of studying the women's hats, not so much to "get ideas" for designs but to learn—what to him was the hardest lesson—what women thought was becoming. Upton had ideas of his own about beauty in women's apparel, and often when he made a design that he thought was his masterpiece it was only to have the manager of the millinery establishment push the design aside, declaring that if he put out hats like that his business would be ruined. So Upton would carry back the rejected drawings and crush them into his waste basket and start afresh the next morning with an effort to surpass his own notions about hats.

Upton always worked in secrecy. You see he was not proud of his calling. If the substantial, slow-moving chambermaid happened still to be setting his room to rights when he returned from breakfast, he was loath to get out his drawing things, but lingered over his morning paper or walked idly about his room. One day after she had left the room and he had begun in earnest, there was a knock at his door and, without waiting for Upton to call out "come," the chambermaid stuck her head in the door. She held a waste basket in her hand. "You don't make a mistake, sir, do you, and throw away pieters you want?" she asked. "Some of these here pretty girl's heads, I mean, seems 'most too good to throw away."

"Oh, those," Upton said as the woman held up a crushed and crumpled girl's head wearing what the day before he had judged one of his best designs only to have it condemned as impossible by the practical millinery manager, "those are rubbish. I just do them—to amuse myself, as it were." And the chambermaid withdrew, dragging her mop and carpet sweeper after her.

The hat in question was inspired by a mussel shell. Upton had seen hats that were inspired by roses and sweet peas and even by canary birds. That sort of thing was trite. He happened to have a few shells that he had gathered on the sea shore the summer before and treasured for no very good reason, and it occurred to him one day that in the graceful curves of the mussel shell and in its deep, penetrating black with brown, green and blue shadings, he might devise a hat that would be worth designing. The head he drew for this design was the head of a sea nymph. He always made the faces first to suit the hats—if the hat showed Japanese influence the girl was slightly slant-eyed, if she wore a sombrero she was of Spanish features. The hat was of black silk above with shadings of brown and blue and the lining beneath the brim was of the shimmering gray of the inside of a mussel shell. Upton really reveled in this hat—only to have it rejected the next day at headquarters, while an insipid little hat of dark blue straw with a cherry dangling at one side was pronounced a "winner."

Upton had not learned his lesson. In another daring mood he designed a hat that he said was inspired by a German air raid at night, though the millinery manager did not even attempt to see the similarity. He did admit, however, that the design was original and might do for a theatrical costume, but for his purposes—never. And that was consigned to the waste basket, where a few days before had gone the mussel shell hat and on another day a hat that had been suggested by the colors and shape of a spring onion. Upton had had them for dinner the night before and had actually carried one to his room, put it in water and taken his design from life. That also was among the failures.

Upton knew that onion hat of his was original. Still some one else must have designed it simultaneously. For a week later as Upton sat at dinner he looked up and there two tables off the very pretty golden-brown blonde who dined alone and seemed to have few friends—Upton had seen her often and not infrequently recalled her face and coloring when summoning up imaginary models in his room—there sat the little blonde wearing the onion hat. Yes, it was exactly like the hat he had designed, with the colors as given in his sketch reproduced exactly. An expert milliner could not have reproduced the sketch more faithfully, and the little blonde was just the model for that hat. Upton was in a fever of excitement. He wanted to tell his friends of the coincidence, but to do so would have necessitated telling of his own role as a hat designer.

Then—and this was really too much for Upton's peace of mind—the little blonde appeared one tempestuous spring night when the rain was pouring outside and the wind could be heard rushing around the window panes—she appeared in the hat that he had designed when thinking of an airplane raid at night, and in the eyes that seemed all tenderness and mildness under the spring onion hat there was now a haunting look of distress and sorrow. But it was unmistakably Upton's hat. Then appeared the real masterpiece—the mussel-shell hat, and this seemed to suit the little blonde's face better even than the others. It was a marvelous hat and it was worn by a wonderful model. Upton noticed the eyes of other diners focussed on it and he realized then his success in designing it, though he could not guess how the hat had been made. There was nothing at all striking in the cut or coloring of the hat—in the usual acceptance of the word. That it attracted attention was, Upton knew, simply because it was distinctive.

After that Upton's models were all alike. The little blonde face haunted him and the millinery manager asked him to try and vary the type of hats he designed. They were all made for the same type of face. Upton began to lose sleep. It was not so much the mystery of the matter, though it was odd enough to have another person extract ideas from your mind in this way and bring into realization so successfully your thwarted dreams. The thing was that Upton was very much in love with the little blonde and that the little blonde was not absolutely indifferent as to his existence he might have learned to his own satisfaction from the way her eyes dropped to her plate whenever he looked toward her at dinner.

Finally after she had been wearing the three hats for three weeks he could stand the suspense no longer, and he bravely followed her out of the dining room one night, and with the manner of an old friend bade her a good evening. Not being repulsed, he sat talking with her in the hotel reception room.

Upton was a very direct sort of person and even before he sought to solve the mystery he told her that he was more interested in her than he had ever been in any girl before, and she, sweet, frank child that she was, told him that she was very glad of that, for she was lonely in the big city and didn't know any nice young men. That was encouragement enough even for a faint heart, and Upton's was not faint. Then Upton spoke of the hats. When he told her that he had designed them, she turned very scarlet and said she didn't know that it was from his room the chambermaid had got them. She said she had come to the city to study millinery, as the only talent she had ever displayed was that of making her own hats. So she had come and had expected to succeed in the school until she discovered that to begin with the pupils had to draw their own designs of hats and she simply could not draw. She told the chambermaid her troubles because she had no one else to talk to, and was all but decided to return home discouraged when the chambermaid brought her the crumpled drawings from one of the waste baskets. She had taken them to school and passed them off as her own work. It was dishonest but she was eager to succeed. Then she had worked out the designs and she had taken every prize the school offered. One of her hats was going to be sent to the international millinery exhibit—the mussel-shell one. The instructors were wild over it and a very well-known artist who gave them lectures on colors had declared that another was a masterpiece in tones. It suggested an air raid at night, he said, though she couldn't see how he thought that.

"So they are masterpieces, after all," Upton sighed, and before the evening was far spent they had not only settled all the plans for the wedding but were dreaming dreams of starting an exclusive shop in which they would combine their talents.

Mrs. A. Burnett.

Toronto Lady Makes Affidavit

MRS. BURNETT has sent in this letter from a generous desire to serve others by giving them the benefit of her experience. Her sufferings resulted from a greatly rundown nervous system, and because she was a long time in finding a cure, she feels that she can now point others to the way of health. This letter came entirely unsolicited, and in order that strangers might fully realize the sincerity of Mrs. Burnett's statement we had her verify her letter before a Commissioner

Mrs. A. Burnett, 303½ Gerrard street east, Toronto, writes: "I really feel it a public duty on my side to state, and without the slightest fear of contradiction, the wonderful benefits I have received from your remedy, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I am a woman now in the prime of life, and I don't think any of my sex have suffered the agony that I have. I can give proofs of doctors who have advised and given medicine to me, but none have ever come near the relief that I have gained since taking your Nerve Food. Without doubt it is as represented, a sure cure. I am a younger woman by far since I have taken them. I always was dizzy, shaking and sick, with a shocking, splitting headache. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has made me a different woman. I shall always tell any of my friends who are run down to get this Food cure, as I consider it is worth its weight in gold."

Province of Ontario, County of York, } To Wit:

I, Alice Burnett of the City of Toronto, in the County of York, married woman, do solemnly declare:

(1) That I am the Mrs. A. Burnett whose signature appears at the bottom of the within letter.

(2) That the statements made by me in the within letter are in every respect true.

And I make this declaration, conscientiously believing it to be true and knowing it to be of the same force and effect as if made under oath and under and by virtue of the Canada Evidence Act.

Declared before me at the City of Toronto, in the County of York, this 9th day of October, 1917.

(Sgd.) ALICE BURNETT.

Daniel J. O'Donoghue, a Commissioner, etc.

This statement will come as a message of hope to many thousands of women who are suffering somewhat as Mrs. Burnett did. There is every reason to expect equally good results in your own case, because Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cures in Nature's way by forming new tissues and building up the exhausted system.

For this very reason a little patience is required in using this treatment. Do not expect too much from the first box, but it will not be long before you will experience benefits that will encourage you to use the Nerve Food regularly until restoration is complete. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto. Look for the portrait and signature of A. W. Tells how to lift off that touchy corn without hurting one particle

Hospital records show that every time you cut a corn you invite lockjaw or blood poison, which is needless, says a Cincinnati authority, who tells you that a quarter ounce of a drug called freezone can be obtained at little cost from the drug store, but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or callus.

You simply apply a few drops of this freezone on a tender, aching corn and the soreness is instantly relieved. Shortly the entire corn can be lifted out, root and all, without pain.

This drug is sticky, but dries at once and is claimed to just shrivel up any corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin.

If your wife wears high heels she will be glad to know of this.

Conditions In Austria.

"August brought to the Austrian agriculturist directly and to all Austrians indirectly an immeasurable catastrophe, because climatic conditions are at the helm of Government there."

So said an Austrian who recently "escaped" from his native country and reached Zurich.

"To-day in Austria you would vainly seek winter sowings which have not been ruined by rain and neglect," he continued, "while there is not enough barley or oats for the farmers to sowfl let alone to feed the people. Besides, the floods of the last six weeks and the lack of labor have contributed to the catastrophe.

"The Brest-Litovsk peace deprived the Austrian farmers of the labor of Russian prisoners, although early application was made to the military authorities for soldiers to work in the fields and also as carpenters, blacksmiths and saddlers in the provinces ravaged by Russian invaders. The waiters and clerks are utterly incapable of farm work.

"Where peasants own most of the land, I saw entire districts in which the meagre harvest lies rotting in the fields because the unhappy owners have no horses or carts to carry it away. But the landed proprietors are worse off, for they can get not only in return for grain, the laborers refusing money.

"Besides this, the rotting crops have brought an unprecendented plague of mice, which the farmers are bravely trying to stamp out.

"Ninety per cent. of the farmers even lack granaries, for the Government has not yet sent wood and workmen to rebuild those destroyed in the Russian invasion. Last spring came too early, and the winter and spring sowings, with the clover, all flowered together. Then followed torrential rains. Combine this with the lack of labor, granaries and machinery and you have a fair picture of the disaster. Austria is utterly incapable of feeding her population, while Hungary refuses to help, saying she has only enough grain for her army and must import it for her civilians. Even potatoes, although they looked well, are beginning to rot.

"The coming year promises to be fraught with horrors for the Austrian people unless the Government finds means to avert disaster — but we long since lost hope of action by the Government."

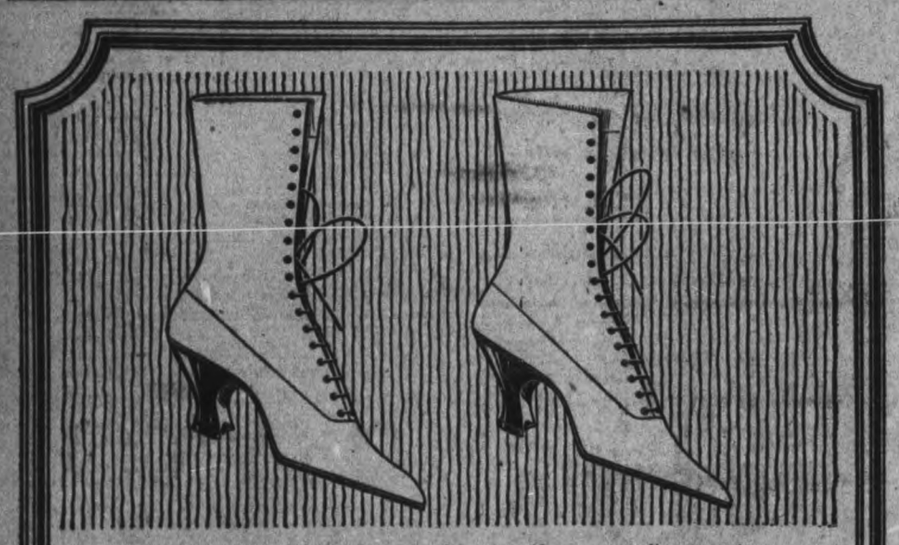
TIRED AND DISCOURAGED

Mrs. Warren Randles, Rothesay, Kings County, N.B., "I have three small children and had to stay in the house all winter. So when spring came I was all run down doing all my work and looking after the children. I felt all tired out, and looked on the gloomy side all the time. I decided to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and the results were most satisfactory. I feel fine now, and am recommending the Nerve Food to others."



Two Model Lasts for Women who prefer a long vamp with narrow or medium narrow toe Made in all leathers 8 inch or 9 inch height, Louis or Cuban heels, $6 to $12.

True Economy in Stylish Shoes

THE woman who likes shoes with a long vamp and a slender toe, will be well pleased with the two A. H. M. models shown above. You can obtain smart boots on either last with Louis or Cuban heels in black or tan calf or kid at prices ranging from $6 to $12.

The quality of the material in these shoes is better than you might expect at the price, due to our being able to cover our needs well in advance. We doubt if it will be possible to offer equal value again so long as the war lasts.

The model on the left is conservatively narrow in the toe with the popular Louis heel. The other model is more extreme in style effect having a somewhat narrow toe and a higher and more tapering heel.

You may be certain of getting style value and practising true economy when you ask your dealer for these A.H.M. models.

LIQUID FIRE IS A FIZZLE

HAS NOT PROVED AN EFFECTIVE WAR WEAPON.

The Charge Can Be Shot Only at Short Range and the Effect Is Not Lasting—British Officer Gives an Account of One Form of German Frightfulness That Has Been a Complete Failure.

IN regard to the German policy of frightfulness, none of the new and seemingly unprincipled methods of attack had more immediate and seemingly overwhelming success than the use of liquid fire, observes Major S. M. J. Auld in the World's Work. But the first horror once over, a horror due to the undoubtedly terrible appearance of the new weapon and the utter surprise of those attacked, liquid fire has been found to have little destructive value, as is proved by the fact that the Allies have provided no special form of cover for the men as protection. In describing the first acquaintance of the British troops with the "flammenwerfer," or "flame-thrower," Major Auld writes that—

"At 8.20 a.m. on the morning of July 20, and without the slightest warning, the front line troops were enveloped in flames. Where the flames came from could not be seen. All that the men knew was that they seemed surrounded by fierce curling flames which were accompanied by a loud roaring noise and dense clouds of black smoke. Here and there a big blob of burning oil would fall into a trench or a saphead. Shouts and yells rent the air as individual men, rising up in the trenches or attempting to move in the open, felt the force of the flames.

"The only way to safety appeared to be to the rear. This direction the men that were left took. For a short space the flames pursued them, and the local retirement became a local rout. Then the flames stopped and the machine guns began to take toll of the fugitives. Only one man from the front trenches is known to have returned. German infantry, following up, poured into the breach in the line, widened it, took our positions as far back as Sanctuary Wood, and then consolidated.

"Then days afterward we counter-attacked and won back the whole of the line concerned, but at very considerable cost. Incidentally, we captured two of the German flame projectors, one of them complete, and they proved to be of the greatest possible use to us subsequently for educating the army in the new warfare and for inspection by our own experts with a view to their duplication for retaliation.

"The flame projectors taken by the 14th Division were simple but very interesting in construction. The main part was a cylindrical vessel of steel, about two feet in height and fifteen inches in diameter, provided with straps so that it could be carried on a man's back. At one side about two-thirds of the way up was a filling hole for oil closed by a screw cap. Near the top was a pressure gauge attachment, and toward the base was a lock closed by a lever handle and to which could be attached a long length of flexible hose ending in a peculiar-shaped nozzle.

"On examination it was found that the body of the projector was divided internally into two compartments which could be connected by opening another tap. The upper compartment was the compressor and the lower the oil reservoir. The compressor chamber was filled to a level pressure of 23 atmosphere with deoxygenated air or nitrogen. Air itself cannot be used because of its oxygen content forming an explosive mixture with the vapors from the oil, and any heating or compression or back-flash from the flame or fuse might make things very unpleasant for the operator. The nitrogen required for the flame projectors is carried into the field in large cylinders about four feet six inches in length and six inches in diameter. Several of these cylinders have been captured from the enemy since. These cylinders are actually taken into the trenches and the flame projectors charged from them there.

"The combustible liquid used in the flame-throwers has varied in source and composition from time to time, but it invariably has one characteristic which appears to be essential for good results—it must have light or easily volatile and heavy and less volatile fractions mixed in carefully graded proportions. The heavy oil has sometimes been a petroleum product and sometimes a tarry residual oil from the distillation of wood. The light portion that insures the jet's keeping alight was originally a light gasoline, but at one period, whether from shortage of petrol or not I do not know, the place of the latter in the mixture was taken by ordinary commercial ether.

"The lighting device fixed at the end of the flexible hose is the most ingenious part of the whole contrivance, and is so made that the oil ignites spontaneously the minute the jet is turned on, and is kept alight by a fiercely burning mixture which lasts throughout the discharge.

"The nozzle is about nine inches long and detachable, so that replacement is easy. It clips into the end of the tube and is held in position by an annular ring. When the oil, with its 23 atmosphere pressure behind it, is rushed out of the jet it forces up the plunger of a friction lighter and ignites a core of a fierce burning fuse mixture which fills the whole of the space between the central tube and an outer casing. The latter consists of a thick wick soaked in paraffin wax and fitting loosely into a thin brass case. When the nozzle is in position all that is necessary is to turn on the tap, and the stream of flame issues from the tube and can be directed at will.

The author goes on to tell why this most ingenious contrivance has been found so ineffective in trench warfare. "The most essential part of the tactics and the most difficult thing to do is to get near enough the target to make the shot effective, and the range is only fifty or sixty feet," he asserts. And further:

"The attackers suffer from two such severe disadvantages that against well disciplined troops they stand little chance. These disadvantages are (1) the flammenwerfer carriers have to get so near their objective that they are almost certain to be shot, and they then become a source of danger to their own side; (2) men in trenches know they are perfectly safe from frontal flame attack if they keep well down and hug the parapet side of the trench. The reason for this is that the flame will not sink down into a trench, but having little force behind it at the end of its journey is curled upward by the rising currents of hot air. The result is that any sort of head cover (unless made of wood) makes perfect protection, and a man crouching in a trench or even lying prone in a shell hole is very unlikely to be more than slightly scorched at the very worst. I can vouch for this, for I have lain at the bottom of a trench with the flames playing over my head and have not been injured in the slightest, though I confess to being very much relieved when the flame stopped. The only danger in trenches to men who keep their heads is that of 'blobs' of burning oil falling from the end of the fiery stream, but this is not a very serious chance.

"Another serious disability in the German liquid fire is its very short duration. The stream of flame from the portable flammenwerfer lasts rather less than one minue. It is impossible to charge up again on the spot, and the result is that once the flame stops the whole game is finished and the operators are at our mercy. Without making the apparatus of a prohibitive weight the duration of the flame cannot be increased. Even the heavy projectors give only a flame lasting at the best one minute and a quarter.

"It must be realized that it is discipline and coolness (if one may use the word) which count, and that the moral effect on unsteady troops, unaware of the fact that the appalling flames have little destructive value, may be very great indeed. When men have bolted from the trenches into the open they are an easy prey."

Blood-Making Medicine

It took centuries for medical science to discover that the blood is the life. Now, it is known that if the blood were always abundant, rich and pure, very few people would ever be ill. It was not until the end of the 19th century that an instrument was invented for measuring the red part of the blood. Then doctors could tell just how anaemic a patient had become, and with medicine to make new blood the patient soon got well.

All the blood in the body is nourished and kept rich and red by the food taken daily, but when, for any reason a person is run down and cannot make sufficient blood from the food to keep the body in health, then a blood-making medicine is required. The simplest and very best of blood-makers suitable for home use by anyone is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills When a course of these pills is taken their good effect is soon shown in an improved appetite, stronger nerves, a sound digestion and an ability to master your work and enjoy leisure hours. For women there is a prompt relief of, or a prevention of ailments which make life a burden. As an all-round medicine for the cure of ailments due to weak, watery blood, no medicine discovered by medical science can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co. Brockville, Ont.

Land of Long Distance.

With the entrance of the Japanese-American economic and military expedition into Russia by the Vladivostok gate, a new map is spread before Canadian newspaper readers — the map of Siberia. And it is a very different map from any which the war has hitherto made familiar. France we have been viewing with a microscope, and its battle fronts have been depicted upon a scale so large that a gain or loss of a single mile was visible. A great battle, like that of the Somme, may have not advanced the line more than ten miles, and even Hindenburg's great drive in March did not carry the Germans forward as far as from Toronto to Brantford.

In Siberia there is a different story to tell. There is a Siberian Government Omsk, and another, said to be a sort of outpost of the first, at Vladivostok. But between these two cities lie 2,386 miles of rail, a distance longer by 73 miles than the road from Boston to San Francisco, longer than the sea lane across the Atlantic from New York to Antwerp.

A recent statement told of ten Siberian cities which had been delivered from Bolshevist rule. For the most part they lie along the Trans-Siberian Railroad east of Omsk, and from that city to Krasnoyarsk, the town farthest away, the distance is 854 miles, or about as far as from New York to Savannah. But this is only one-quarter of the breadth of Siberia, from the mountain slopes that sever it from Russia to the Sea of Japan.

Most populous of the Siberian provinces is that of Tomsk, where anti-Bolshevist forces prevail. This province has an area of 327,173 square miles, rather more than once and a half the size of all France; yet it is one of the smaller Siberian divisions. For the total area of Siberia is 3,785,000 square miles greater than all Continental United States and Alaska as well, huge enough to make six Mexicos and have a little over.

Why Thunder Rumbles.

Why does thunder rumble? The path of a lightning flash through the air may be several miles in length. All along this path the sudden expansion of the heated air—a true explosion — sets up an atmospheric wave, which spreads in all directions, and eventually registers upon our ears as thunder. Since the lightning discharge is almost instantaneous, the sound wave is produced at very nearly the same time along the whole path. But the sound wave travels slowly through the air. Its speed is approximately 1,090 feet a second. Thus the sound from the part of the lightning's path that is nearest to us reaches us first, and that from other parts of the path afterward, according to their distance. Intermittent crashes and booming effects are due chiefly to irregularities in the shape of the path.

Japan and Cherry Blossoms.

"No flower has entered Japanese history, literature, arts and religious thoughts longer or more richly than our sakura or Japanese cherry," says the Tokio Herald of Asia. "It was only natural, therefore, that foreign visitors to this country began to call it the land of cherry blossoms and that we have chosen sakura as our national flower by common consent. Our army has adopted the blossom as its insignia as an expression of the national ideal of always being ready to die for a cause, after the manner of sakura which falls in the height of natural glory and human admiration without the slightest desire to linger in the sordid world."

The Allies Continue to Make Substantial Headway on All Three Fighting Fronts

The Battle Has Flamed Up Again and Heavy Fighting Is Now Under Way—Germans Are Fighting Stubbornly.

OFFICIAL DESPATCHES

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, Oct. 26.— The battle has flamed up again and heavy fighting is now under way from Valenciennes to the Meuse, The Germans are fighting well everywhere, but the Allies continue to make substantial headway, driving back the enemy on the Meuse line. Although the recent fighting has not been marked by sensational developments, it is having a cumulative effect which, apart from the ground gained, adds considerably to the wastage of men and material, with which the Germans must reckon. In the last four days the enemy has lost well about 15,000 prisoners and 200 guns. His total losses of effectives cannot have been less than 50,000. Strictly speaking, there are three large battles in progress, all of which are being conducted with equal success for the Allies.

French Advance.

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, Oct. 26.—The French, continuing their attack against the tip of the great west front salient yesterday evening and last night, advanced along the whole fifty mile front between the Oise and the Aisne. Progress of nearly two miles was made at some points, the French wresting positions from the Germans which the latter had organized in 1917. The village of Mortiers was captured.

Threatened to Use Revolver

Strange Incident in Ops Township —Criprit Got Away.

There was excitement galore in South Ops on Thursday afternoon over an alleged attempt to kill an Italian woman who resides with her husband in that section. It appears that during the afternoon, while a resident of the township was driving to a sale on the farm of Mr. P. Hickey, he noticed a woman running from a house with a child in her arms. When she reached the fence alongside the highway she threw the baby across the fence and made straight for the buggy. She ran in between the wheels and fainted away. When she recovered she told the driver that a man had entered her house and attempted to shoot her. She was advised to wait until the man drove over to the sale and acquainted her husband of the situation. The latter, accompanied by one or two others, hurried to the house and found a man (an Italian) in the doorway. The husband demanded an explanation, and the two men soon came together in an encounter. The husband called for assistance, when the man was soon overpowered and a revolver taken from him. This was handed over to the wife, but later came into possession of the husband. It was feared a shooting affray would result as the enraged husband, it is said, flourished the shooting iron dangerously near the man's head. After a heated argument the husband assured those present that the man would cause no more trouble.

Food Board Flashes

So severe is the shortage of food in Friesland, Holland, that there is a veritable epidemic of thieving. Potatoes, beans, peas and corn have been disappearing like magic. Fowls and ducks have been vanishing over-night, too. Thefts of food have become so common in some localities as to necessitate a large increase in the police force, with additional constabulary for the protection of property.

PEACE AT ANY PRICE IS NOW POPULAR IN VIENNA AND BUDAPEST

Canadian Press:

It is said that peace at any price is now popular at Vienna and Budapest.

How the Daylight Saving Scheme is Viewed in Peterboro

Clocks Will be Set Back to Standard Time—Farmers Are Satisfied With the Old Time.

THE MANUFACTURERS

"The farmers are absolutely united in deploring the daylight saving scheme," Mr. A. B. Mann, of the "Hawthornes," stated yesterday, "and will gladly welcome back the old time on Monday," Not because we kept the new time—for scarcely any of us did—but because of the inconvenience in fitting our time in with the city time. For instance, say a man goes by the old time and comes into the city, nine times out of ten he is too late for the bank which, having kept new time, is closed by the time the farmer gets in. Again, by keeping the new time in the early part of the year the dew is on the grain, so early rising is really no good to us. If we started to thresh by 5.30 new time, we should be threshing by moonlight. The scheme of saving has upset the milk man more than any other branch of farming, as the trains taking his milk to the city keep new time while his cows keep the old.

Golfers Benefitted.

Deplored by the farmers, the daylight saving is beloved of the city man. Doctors, lawyers and all professional and business men agree that it made the summer livable for them, as by closing offices early they were able to get a full game of golf after work. Even up to the present time many of the golfers have been speeding up to the links to enjoy an otherwise impossible game. Mr. C. Webber, the local druggist, said that from a business standpoint, the saving was hard on business, but from every other standpoint it was very acceptable.

Manufacturers Sorry.

The manufacturers would rather keep the clocks one hour ahead if only from a standpoint of economy, as electric light is saved by the extra hour. Mr. J. W. Worth of the Bonner-Worth Company, said that his company is in favour of daylight saving all year round as it has been proved by records that the health of the employees is better with it. The employees and heads of firms are better satisfied by having a longer vacation in the evening. In every way Mr. Worth thinks it has been a great success, particularly to the employees in the factories.

Fighting Has Been Resumed

New Campaign Against the Turks Is Now Under Way.

(Canadian Press.)

LONDON, Oct. 26. — British divisions in Mesopotamia have resumed their offensive against the Turks. Fighting in that region is next to impossible during the heat of summer. Now that the autumn has come, it may be expected that there will be an effort to form a junction between the forces along the Tigris and those operating north and east of Damascus.

(Special to The Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—If the new Italian offensive develops into a victorious major operation, military men here say that it should just about "put the finishing touches" on Austria.

Some weeks ago the United Press pointed to the likelihood of a "claw' movement against Austria, one talon of the army fighting against Bulgaria and the other one the Italian offensive.

That this offensive has not been developed sooner has occasioned some surprise among authorities here.

General Scriven of the War Department Service, now established in Italy and the Balkans, is understood to have favoured the development of this offensive. Some, however, have always been skeptical about the Italian situation in view of the nature of the Terrain and the extreme difficulties involved in any major operation.

As viewed here the operations must be fought by the Austrians alone, for Germany is in no position to withdraw reserves from the west front. The Austrian morale at the present time is at the lowest ebb. Hence, if this operation develops into a serious reverse for Austria, it should prove to the last straw for the tottering Dual Monarchy, the military men say.

The operation has not yet developed sufficiently, however, to make predictions as to its outcome safe.

AUSTRIAN LEADERS ON SPECIAL MISSION

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ZURICH, Oct. 26.—Prince Frederick Lobkowitz and Baron Nadherny, who represent the strongest anti-German tendencies at Vienna, have left that city for Switzerland charged with a mission about which no details are given.

WAR SUMMARY

NEW YORK, Oct. 26.—The Associated Press this morning issued the following summary:

While British, French and Americans are slowly breaking their way through the stubborn German defense along the line south of Valenciennes, the attention of the Allied world is directed for the moment at least, to the Italian front, where General Diaz seems to have started major operation. Fighting on a large scale appears to have begun on Thursday, when the Austrian official statement reported heavy artillery fire from the Brenta river to the Montello Plateau. It was reported yesterday that Italian, British and French forces attacked between the Brenta and Piave rivers and advanced over rough country for a considerable distance. At the same time, the Allies moved ahead and captured islands in the Piave River above the Montello Plateau. This stroke was aimed at the angle in the Austrian line, which runs from the Adriatic along the Piave until it reaches the mountains and then turns to the west.

If the Allied attack makes material progress, the Austrian armies on the low lands near the sea and those holding the front in the mountainous sector, may be divided. The number of prisoners taken, 3,000, would seem to indicate fighting of a serious nature. It is too early to determine whether General Diaz has really begun an offensive or is merely directing an operation which is in the nature of a diversion. It may be that the morale of the Austrian army, which has repeatedly been reported to be very low, will be determined by the fighting during the next few days.

On the western front it would appear that the railroad between Quesnoy and Valenciennes has been crossed and that the British are in the outskirts of Quesnoy. There is an apparent effort on the part of Field Marshal Haig to avoid a direct assault against the Mormal Forest, just to the south, where the Germans are solidly intrenched and have countless machine guns and light guns in position. North east of Valenciennes the British and French are advancing toward the Scheldt southwest of Damillers. In the Meuse sector the French have captured Hill 36 of a height which is important for observation purposes and which was stubbornly defended by the Germans. Near Grand Pre, the Americans have forged still further ahead and appear to be forming quite a large pocket in the German lines on the eastern side of the Argonne Forest.

Germany To-day is at Cross Roads of Her Destination

French Authorities Approve of Wilson's Latest Note—The Situation Is Now Practically in the Hands of Marshal Foch.

(United Press Service.)
(By William Philip Simms.)

PARIS, Oct. 26.—Germany to-day is at the cross roads of her destination.

This seemed to be the first impression of thinking Frenchmen after President Wilson's ultimatum-like note.

Either Germany must chuck the Kaiser and the whole imperialistic gang, or there will be no armistice and no peace, until Marshal Foch's sword force an unconditional surrender from Von Hindenburg.

When Wilson's reply first became known it created some slight surprise, the newspaper having led the public to expect a curt "see Foch" or else silence. The hot heads desired the door-slamming methods. Others plainly stated that Wilson ran the risk of tarnishing his brilliant reputation for statesmanship if he wrote further. Some of these, however, are now expressing approval of Wilson's latest note, if the Temps' editorial is any indication.

Committee Appointed to Take Over Margaret Cox Home During Influenza Epidemic

Peterborough Board of Health Held an Emergency Meeting Last Evening—Local Doctors Admit That the Situation Is Serious and That the Epidemic May Run About Two Months Regular Hospitals Are Unable to Cope With the Situation.

BUILDING WILL ACCOMMODATE 100 PATIENTS

With the approval of the medical profession of the city, the Board of Health, last night, appointed a committee of three, His Worship, the Mayor, Dr. Amys, M.O.H., and Ex-Mayor, William Buller, Chairman of the Board of Health, to take over the Margaret Cox Home and fit it up as a hospital to help cope with the epidemic of Spanish influenza, which the doctors freely admit is getting worse every day. Dr. Amys took the chair in the absence of Chairman Buller. On the invitation of the Medical Health Officer, Dr. D. C. King, Dr. A. Moir, Dr. G. O. Cameron and Dr. J. V. Gallivan attended the Board meeting, to consult with the Board as to the advisability of opening a new building as a hospital, provided sufficient nurses could be obtained.

Hospitals Filled Up

Dr. Cameron—"The hospitals in the city are absolutely unable to cope with the situation. Nicholls Hospital is filled up and I understand that St. Joseph's is greatly hampered by the epidemic, being prevalent among the nurses. I don't think it is a matter of dollars and cents, but a matter of lives. I would like a new place opened at once and I don't think it would be at all hard to get young women to act as nurses.

Dr. Amys thought it would be very unwise to fill the hospitals with influenza cases.

"We must have some beds for other cases."

GETTING WORSE

Dr. Gallivan—"There is no doubt that the epidemic is growing here and has a good foothold. We are not doing justice to the people. If those afflicted could get proper attendance and care, we could soon reduce it. The first 48 hours, or even the first 24 hours is the acute stage. That is what tells."

"I have four bad cases with no place to put them," stated Dr. King.

Dr. Moir—"We haven't come to the worst part of the epidemic yet. We are going to have trouble, unless there is more available help."

Dr. Moir thought the hospital scheme was very feasable and that enough trained nurses could be obtained, to at least, superintend each ward.

The other doctors nodded approval.

"Cases should be kept at home, if they can get the proper care," concluded the doctor.

Dr. Amys—"I have Margaret Cox home in view. It could easily accommodate a hundred patients."

Dr. Cameron—"Can you take it?"

Dr. Amys—"We can take over any building. Why, we can even take your house!"

Dr. Cameron—"All right, you can have it!"

Not Question of Money

The Mayor—We can't sit idle here and see people die. We will leave money out of consideration altogether. If people can pay, let them pay, if not, they need not.

Discussion then gathered around the administration of the new hospital. It was suggested that a Medical Superintendant be in charge (likely the Medical Health Officer) and a Lady Superintendant. Competent trained nurses could be obtained to take charge of the wards. Young ladies with but slight knowledge of nursing would be under the orders of the trained nurses. The following ladies, all trained nurses, were thought by the doctors to be available: Mrs. Robert Hall; Mrs. (Dr.) King; Miss La Plante, Miss Foote, Miss Fallon; Miss Merrill, Miss Robinson; Miss Lucy McClennan and Mrs. (Dr.) Gallivan and perhaps Mrs. Watters.

May Last Two Months

Dr. Moir said that he thought the epidemic would not last over two months at the most.

Dr. Owen, Superintendant of the Barnardo homes of Toronto, came to the city on the evening train yesterday and took the Board through the Margaret Cox Building.

Wants To Open Alleys

Mr. Jake Solomon asked to be allowed to open the Water Street Bowling Alleys. It was his only source of income. It is a large, airy room and not many people are in the room at once.

"Are you willing to take any job we can get you?"

He was.

The Board decided that no action would be taken in the matter.

A Liquor Dispensary

Mr. Frank Whitehouse, Mr. B. D. Hall and Mr. R. B. McGill asked that a liquor dispensary be established in the city to help keep down the influenza.

"To help alleviate some citizen's thirst," was Ex-Alderman Harry Morgan's comment.

The Board of Trade has sent a telegram to Mr. J. D. Flavelle, followed by a letter, requesting that a vendor be appointed here for the duration of the epidemic.

"The medical profession is in favour of it," stated Mr. Whitehouse.

"Why, with express and other charges, a dollar's worth of liquor costs you a five dollar bill," said Dr. King. "And then a good per cent of it is aqua pura."

"Is this a necessary evil? Is there no substitute?" queried Mr. Harry Morgan.

"It is the greatest stimulant known," replied Dr. Amys, smiling.

MAY SHORTEN SCHOOL HOLIDAYS

LINDSAY, Oct. 26.—Members of the Lindsay School Board are of the opinion that the Department of Education will have to provide some measure which will call for the opening of schools during the summer holiday months in order to make up for the time lost because of the "flu."

Teachers claim that they are losing much valuable time and that they will be unable to catch up with their work unless given an extension of school term.

DUTCH SHIPPING RESUMES.

Starts with Denmark—Preparing to Resume Service with England and America.

LONDON, Oct. 26. — Dutch newspapers say that shipping concerns in Holland are taking steps preparatory to resuming regular trips to England and America in consequence of the withdrawal of the U-boat menace, according to an Amsterdam despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company. Shipping with Denmark was resumed yesterday, it is said.

AMERICANS ADVANCING

Important Forest Was Taken After Several Short Rushes—Retreat Threatened.

145 PRISONERS TAKEN

(United Press Service.)
(By Fred S. Ferguson.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, Oct. 26.—The Americans have cleared the Germans out of the important Bourgogne Ane Forest, north of the Grand Pre, driving a sharp wedge into the enemy lines. The forest was taken in short rushes, the doughboys then swinging eastward behind the German lines and threatening to cut off the Boche northeast of Grand Pre. The attack in the Grand Pre region followed that of yesterday, farther to the eastward, in which the Americans advanced nearly half a mile near Bantheville, occupying the high ridge north of that village. The positions were taken after several assaults against the enemy machine-gun nests. One hundred and seventy prisoners were taken.

Turkey's Offer of Peace

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, Oct. 26.—The Turkish Minister to Switzerland has handed the British and French Ministers to that country an offer of peace virtually amounting to surrender, according to a Berne despatch.

Sweeping Concessions.

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.— A peace proposal has been tendered to the envoys of France and Great Britain by the Turkish Minister to Switzerland, according to an unofficial report circulated here to-day.

This information was that the Turks had made sweeping concessions to the Allies, their proposal being tantamount to surrender. There was no official confirmation available here.

OVER THE TOP.

Everything is set for the opening of the Victory Loan Campaign. Canada's peace offensive as the Loan has been fittingly described, is ready to go over the top on Monday, and from then until the end of the campaign the people of Canada are expected to do nothing but talk about the Loan, think about the Loan, and invest in the Loan. Canada's response must be enthusiastic and unanimous. An oversubscription of the Loan means renewed prosperity for Canada and confusion for Canada's enemy, so that by investing in Victory Bonds we are not only helping ourselves but hurting Germany.

Every employee should make up his mind to buy a bond, and every employer should resolve to do everything in his power to make it possible for his employees to invest. It will not be the big investors that will ensure the success of the campaign; it will be the cumulative effect of the $50 and $100 bonds that are bought by the thousands of workers throughout the Dominion that will tell in the long run. Every bond helps so that no one should feel that his $50 or $100 investment will not be needed.

THE MANITOULIN RESULT.

The result of the bye-election in Manitoulin must be considered as a serious blow to the prestige of the Ontario Government, as well as a triumph for the United Farmers of Ontario, whose candidate Benjamin Bowman was elected by a substantial majority over B. H. Turner, tre Conservative nominee. Manitoulin has been regarded as a safe Conservative seat for the past fifteen years. That the government candidate, Hon. F. have been defeated in a riding where the Conservative cause has been so long successful will be a rather painful shock to the powers that be at Toronto, especially as several of the Cabinet's big guns laid a barrage for the government candidate. Hons. T. G. Macdiarmid and Hon. T. W. McGarry having spent considerable time in the riding while the generalissimo of the Government forces, Sir William Hearst himself, spoke at three meeting on behalf of his candidate. In spite of the Cabinet support the government nominee was well beaten in a supposedly safe seat, and the result will cause considerable agitation in inner circles at Queen's Park.

A LESSON FROM THE FLU.

Beneficent Providence has so arranged it that from evil and disastrous events springs some good. The prevailing epidemic is no exception to this rule. The vital importance of public and personal cleanliness is being too forcibly and sadly impressed upon us these days to permit of the lesson going unlearned. The flu has introduced an era of personal and public hygiene that promises well for the future health of the community if only it can become a fixed habit.

The use of the microbe-destroying antiseptic has become universal. Always in every office there has been a "demon disinfector" whose garglings wer a source of merry jest. Now we have them by battalions and that person who doesn't get busy with a mouth wash or some other preventive comes under suspicion of being selfish and unpatriotic. Folks who a few weeks ago didn't know a gargle from a gargoyle are now on intimate terms with the most exclusive antiseptic formulas and chumy with germicides that have slain their billions. Recipes that formerly looked and read like a secret code or the scrawl on a thousand-year old Assyrian brick are no longer hidden mysteries. Board of health pamphlets furnish light and joyous reading and we are famaliar with the batting average of every epidemic or pandemic as far back as the seven plagues of Egypt. And every mother's son and daughter of us is a member of the Odoriferous Order of the Camphorated.

It would be well for the authorities, federal, provincial and municipal, to crystallize into permanency this widespread and effective purification into which we have been suddenly scared. A few weeks hence when the peril has passed there will be an inclination to let down. In the best circles—to which we all belong—it will still be unfashionable to associate with the microbe, but there is danger that we will not be swatting it with the same vigor and regularity as at present. It has always been thus. While the country is in the mood for just such legislation it would be wise to enact regulations that will require periodic and expert fumigation of public gathering places. Within the last few years adequate ventilation has been made compulsory in factories, but the law might be extended to include a large number of edifices that year in and year out reek of foul atmosphere. Propaganda, the spreading of information in an expert scientific manner, is in the air, a product of the war, and no greater service could be done the country at large than to educate the public in systematic methods of fighting disease. Schools, the church, the press, the lecture platform, the moving picture, would furnish ideal channels through which to mould the public into habitual alertness against disease. The menace of the moment has driven us collectively and individually to radical measures. Let us make permanent such as are of proved worth and so add to the general health and happiness.—London Advertizer.

ITS ALL NEEDED.

The advisory committe of the Red Cross Society named $30,000 as the minimum sum needed to carry on the work during the coming year. A larger sum could be very usefully employed and with the extension of the campaign period for a few days an opportunity is given of swelling the total beyond the minimum. Every dollar will be needed, and the fact that the influenza epidemic has been a handicap to the collectors in more than one way, making it impossible ao canvass many, who in the past have faithfully supported the Red Cross, and cutting down the size of the collecting teams, should be an incentive to the people of Peterborough to give even more readily and freely than in the past. It is pleasing to be able to announce that the minimum amount asked for is in sight, and it is hoped that by Tuesday night next Peterborough will have gone away over the top, in its 1918 Red Cross Campaign.

Remember the money will all be needed because the Red Cross will be on the job as long as there is a Canadian soldier overseas.

Give as they fight.

WHAT IS THE VICTORY LOAN?

(By R. E. McMillin.)

It's forts and it's ships and it's shining guns. It's squadrons that sweep the sea. It's all of the circling band of steel that shall keep the home shores free. It's grub and its warmth for the sailor lad, far out on the wintry foam—for the brave jack tar, as he fights afar, it's the good old "Money from Home."

It's rifle and helm and it's bayonet, it's shovel and shard and shell, for the soldier boy in the olive drab, out there on the edge of hell. It's the soaring wings of the whirring planes that battle on high alone. For the lad who is daring "Over There" it's the good old "Money from Home."

It's succor and life for a bleeding world. It's the glimmer of peace at dawn. It's the strength of a mighty arm to strike. It's the gleam of a great sword, drawn; but more than all, it's the pledge of love to the lads whom we call "Our Own." To the boys on land, afloat, on high, it's the good old "Money from Home."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

A Relic of Dark Corners, Too.

(St. Louis Globe-Democrat.)

An eastern clergyman says that kissing is a relic of the dark ages. There are many customs that come down from the dark ages—eating, for one.

No Commission Necessary.

(Kansas City Star.)

The first German note showed anxiety about a mixed commission to superintend the evacuation of France and Belgium. But the evacuation progressed with celerity, without any commission whatever.

Satutary Abstinence.

(Hartford Courant.)

War or no war, it would have been well for the country, to follow the programme as to foods that circumstances have now made it possible and necessary to compel. We have eaten too much and wasted a lot more.

Those Gallant Gentlemen.

(London Morning Post.)

Copies of orders found on German prisoners taken on the battle front show that the Austrians have now given instructions for the penalty of death to be inflicted on captured aviators known to have distributed proclamations within the enemy lines.

Cuts Both Ways.

(The Villager.)

An enemy soldier incapacitated for fighting is no longer an enemy; this humane rule holds for nations in battle as well as for individuals. But its converse should not be forgotten. No matter what words, agreements and oaths intervene, a war-making people which is able to fight on is still the enemy.

One Theory As To Soldiers.

(New York Commercial.)

Canada has been in the war for four years and knows something about returned soldiers. Life in the open "over there" has not made them desire more of it on the farm. Most of them prefer work and life in cities and towns. The Gregarious instinct has been fostered by army life, and farm life in the Northwest does not appeal to them, much to the surprise of the theorists who maintained that such men would not willingly follow indoor pursuits.

A Hopeless Case.

(Los Angeles Times.)

The Kaiser is a type of leader who falls hard when he falls. His leadership has been based upon a deliberately arranged theatricalism. He has always been the actor, the grandiose figure, the solemnly impressive star of the performance. When the scenery is stripped from such a figure only a pitiable array of scene "props" and painted canvas is left. It has taken considerable rope, but Wilhelm II. has finally hanged himself.

Cementing a League of Nations.

(Boston Transcript.)

For the League of Nations banding together to-day is not merely untainted by any doubtful German collusion of the kind she might be prepared to give if she could win now a German peace, it is, as a matter of fact, the unconquerable answer which America and her Allies are forcibly opposing to the German menace. It is a League which, every day that Germany continues her warring without full surrender, she solidifies, cements and increases against herself.

"YOURS FOR THE LOAN OF 1918."

"Yours for the Victory Loan of 1918," is the Canadian letter writer's slogan in the Victory Loan campaign. Every one is asked to sign his or her letters in that way. Already some are doing it, and before the campaign is under way it is hoped the practice will be general. It is an easy and yet most effective way of driving home the appeal for the Loan, and it will reach practically every one. Business men particularly are requested to adopt the idea. As they read their incoming and outgoing letters during the next weeks, they will confront "Yours for Victory Loan, 1918," scores of times each day. Start now signing your letters in this way. Get into the swing! Every little bit is needed if Canada is to "go over the top."

RABBIT SKINS HELD UP

4,000 BALES OF PELTS BROUGHT IN IN VIOLATION OF EMBARGO

Government officials are working out a plan for the release of about 4,000 bales of rabbit skins that have been held up by the American and British Governments as having been brought from Australia in violation of the embargo. Several plans have been advanced, but so far no final decision has been made. It is understood that a proposition has been submitted to Government officials for the United States Government to take the entire lot over at cost. A few bales have already been located in the United States, which are of course, being held for final decision.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 25TH, 1918.

OVER THE TOP.

Everything is set for the opening of the Victory Loan Campaign. Canada's peace offensive as the Loan has been fittingly described, is ready to go over the top on Monday, and from then until the end of the campaign the people of Canada are expected to do nothing but talk about the Loan, think about the Loan, and invest in the Loan. Canada's response must be enthusiastic and unanimous. An oversubscription of the Loan means renewed prosperity for Canada and confusion for Canada's enemy, so that by investing in Victory Bonds we are not only helping ourselves but hurting Germany.

Every employee should make up his mind to buy a bond, and every employer should resolve to do everything in his power to make it possible for his employees to invest. It will not be the big investors that will ensure the success of the campaign; it will be the cumulative effect of the $50 and $100 bonds that are bought by the thousands of workers throughout the Dominion that will tell in the long run. Every bond helps so that no one should feel that his $50 or $100 investment will not be needed.

THE MANITOULIN RESULT.

The result of the bye-election in Manitoulin must be considered as a serious blow to the prestige of the Ontario Government, as well as a triumph for the United Farmers of Ontario, whose candidate Benjamin Bowman was elected by a substantial majority over B. H. Turner, tre Conservative nominee. Manitoulin has been regarded as a safe Conservative seat for the past fifteen years. That the government candidate. Hon. F. have been defeated in a riding where the Conservative cause has been so long successful will be a rather painful shock to the powers that be at Toronto, especially as several of the Cabinet's big guns laid a barrage for the government candidate. Hon. T. G. Macdiarmid and Hon. T. W. McGarry having spent considerable time in the riding while the generalissimo of the Government forces, Sir William Hearst himself, spoke at three meeting on behalf of his candidate. In spite of the Cabinet support the government nominee was well beaten in a supposedly safe seat, and the result will cause considerable agitation in inner circles at Queen's Park.

A LESSON FROM THE FLU.

Beneficent Providence has so arranged it that from evil and disastrous events springs some good. The prevailing epidemic is no exception to this rule. The vital importance of public and personal cleanliness is being too forcibly and sadly impressed upon us these days to permit of the lesson going unlearned. The flu has introduced an era of personal and public hygiene that promises well for the future health of the community if only it can become a fixed habit.

The use of the microbe-destroying antiseptic has become universal. Always in every office there has been a "demon disinfector" whose garglings wer a source of merry jest. Now we have them by battalions and that person who doesn't get busy with a mouth wash or some other preventive comes under suspicion of being selfish and unpatriotic. Folks who a few weeks ago didn't know a gargle from a gargoyle are now on intimate terms with the most exclusive antiseptic formulas and chumy with germicides that have slain their billions. Recipes that formerly looked and read like a secret code or the scrawl on a thousand-year old Assyrian brick are no longer hidden mysteries. Board of health pamphlets furnish light and joyous reading and we are familiar with the batting average of every epidemic or pandemic as far back as the seven plagues of Egypt. And every mother's son and daughter of us is a member of the Odoriferous Order of the Camphorated.

It would be well for the authorities, federal, provincial and municipal, to crystallize into permanency this widespread and effective purification into which we have been suddenly scared. A few weeks hence when the peril has passed there will be an inclination to let down. In the best circles —to which we all belong—it will still be unfashionable to associate with the microbe, but there is danger that we will not be swatting it with the same vigor and regularity as at present. It has always been thus. While the country is in the mood for just such legislation it would be wise to enact regulations that will require periodic and expert fumigation of public gathering places. Within the last few years adequate ventilation has been made compulsory in factories, but the law might be extended to include a large number of edifices that year in and year out reek of foul atmosphere. Propaganda, the spreading of information in an expert scientific manner, is in the air, a product of the war, and no greater service could be done the country at large than to educate the public in systematic methods of fighting disease. Schools, the church, the press, the lecture platform, the moving picture, would furnish ideal channels through which to mould the public into habitual alertness against disease. The menace of the moment has driven us collectively and individually to radical measures. Let us make permanent such as are of proved worth and so add to the general health and happiness.—London Advertizer.

ITS ALL NEEDED.

The advisory committe of the Red Cross Society named $30,000 as the minimum sum needed to carry on the work during the coming year. A larger sum could be very usefully employed and with the extension of the campaign period for a few days an opportunity is given of swelling the total beyond the minimum. Every dollar will be needed, and the fact that the influenza epidemic has been a handicap to the collectors in more than one way, making it impossible ao canvass many, who in the past have faithfully supported the Red Cross, and cutting down the size of the collecting teams, should be an incentive to the people of Peterborough to give even more readily and freely than in the past. It is pleasing to be able to announce that the minimum amount asked for is in sight, and it is hoped that by Tuesday night next Peterborough will have gone away over the top, in its 1918 Red Cross Campaign.

Remember the money will all be needed because the Red Cross will be on the job as long as there is a Canadian soldier overseas.

Give as they fight.

WHAT IS THE VICTORY LOAN?

(By R. E. McMillin.)

It's forts and it's ships and it's shining guns. It's squadrons that sweep the sea. It's all of the circling band of steel that shall keep the home shores free. It's grub and its warmth for the sailor lad, far out on the wintry foam—for the brave jack tar, as he fights afar, it's the good old "Money from Home."

It's rifle and helm and it's bayonet, it's shovel and shard and shell, for the soldier boy in the olive drab, out there on the edge of hell. It's the soaring wings of the whirring planes that battle on high alone. For the lad who is daring "Over There" it's the good old "Money from Home."

It's succor and life for a bleeding world. It's the glimmer of peace at dawn. It's the strength of a mighty arm to strike. It's the gleam of a great sword, drawn; but more than all, it's the pledge of love to the lads whom we call "Our Own." To the boys on land, afloat, on high, it's the good old "Money from Home."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Stick it, Canada.

"Over the top with the best of luck," is Canada's send-off to the Victory Loan.

To-morrow mornig we get back that hour that was misplaced last spring.

Victory Bonds mean the quicker coming of peace. Invest to the limit and help to bring the war to a close.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

A Relic of Dark Corners, Too.

(St. Louis Globe-Democrat.)

An eastern clergyman says that kissing is a relic of the dark ages. There are many customs that come down from the dark ages—eating, for one.

No Commission Necessary.

(Kansas City Star.)

The first German note showed anxiety about a mixed commission to superintend the evacuation of France and Belgium. But the evacuation progressed with celerity, without any commission whatever.

Satutary Abstinence.

(Hartford Courant.)

War or no war, it would have been well for the country, to follow the programme as to foods that circumstances have now made it possible and necessary to compel. We have eaten too much and wasted a lot more.

Those Gallant Gentlemen.

(London Morning Post.)

Copies of orders found on German prisoners taken on the battle front show that the Austrians have now given instructions for the penalty of death to be inflicted on captured aviators known to have distributed proclamations within the enemy lines.

Cuts Both Ways.

(The Villager.)

An enemy soldier incapacitated for fighting is no longer an enemy; this humane rule holds for nations in battle as well as for individuals. But its converse should not be forgotten. No matter what words, agreements and oaths intervene, a war-making people which is able to fight on is still the enemy.

One Theory As To Soldiers.

(New York Commercial.)

Canada has been in the war for four years and knows something about returned soldiers. Life in the open "over there" has not made them desire more of it on the farm. Most of them prefer work and life in cities and towns. The Gregarious instinct has been fostered by army life, and farm life in the Northwest does not appeal to them, much to the surprise of the theorists who maintained that such men would not willingly follow indoor pursuits.

A Hopeless Case.

(Los Angeles Times.)

The Kaiser is a type of leader who falls hard when he falls. His leadership has been based upon a deliberately arranged theatricalism. He has always been the actor, the grandiose figure, the solemnly impressive star of the performance. When the scenery is stripped from such a figure only a pitiable array of scene "props" and painted canvas is left. It has taken considerable rope, but Wilhelm II. has finally hanged himself.

Cementing a League of Nations.

(Boston Transcript.)

For the League of Nations banding together to-day is not merely untainted by any doubtful German collusion of the kind she might be prepared to give if she could win now a German peace, it is, as a matter of fact, the unconquerable answer which America and her Allies are forcibly opposing to the German menace. It is a League which, every day that Germany continues her warring without full surrender, she solidifies, cements and increases against herself.

"YOURS FOR THE LOAN OF 1918."

"Yours for the Victory Loan of 1918," is the Canadian letter writer's slogan in the Victory Loan campaign. Every one is asked to sign his or her letters in that way. Already some are doing it, and before the campaign is under way it is hoped the practice will be general. It is an easy and yet most effective way of driving home the appeal for the Loan, and it will reach practically every one. Business men particularly are requested to adopt the idea. As they read their incoming and outgoing letters during the next weeks, they will confront "Yours for Victory Loan, 1918," scores of times each day. Start now signing your letters in this way. Get into the swing! Every little bit is needed if Canada is to "go over the top."

RABBIT SKINS HELD UP

4,000 BALES OF PELTS BROUGHT IN IN VIOLATION OF EMBARGO

Government officials are working out a plan for the release of about 4,000 bales of rabbit skins that have been held up by the American and British Governments as having been brought from Australia in violation of the embargo. Several plans have been advanced, but so far no final decision has been made. It is understood that a proposition has been submitted to Government officials for the United States Government to take the entire lot over at cost. A few bales have already been located in the United States, which are of course, being held for final decision.

SPANISH INFLUENZA RAGES IN CANADA

Thousands of Cases Reported With Many Deaths.

THOSE WHO ARE MOST SUSCEPTIBLE TO IT

"FRUIT-A-TIVES"—The Wonderful Fruit Medicine—Gives the Power To Resist This Disease.

The epidemic of Spanish Influenza which played such havoc in Europe, has reached this continent. Thousands of cases of the strange malady have appeared and many deaths are already reported; Surgeon-General Blue of the United States Public Health Service having stated that "Spanish Influenza will probably spread all over the country in six weeks".

Practically every ship which touches our shores from abroad, brings those infected with the disease.

Surgeon-General Blue urges that "the individual take all the precautions he can against contracting the disease by care and personal hygiene". Plenty of exercise should be taken; the diet should be regulated, etc.

Spanish Influenza affects most severely elderly persons and others whose powers of resistance are weakened by illness, work or worry, especially those who are "run-down" or "not feeling up to the mark."

The really great danger from the disease is not so much in the disease itself, as that it often develops into pneumonia.

What everyone needs now is a general tonic like "Fruit-a-tives". This wonderful fruit medicine is not a germ-killer. It is a body-builder; a strength-maker; a blood-purifier; a power in protecting against the ravages of disease.

"Fruit-a-tives" regulates the kidneys and bowels, causing these organs to eliminate waste regularly and naturally as nature intended. "Fruit-a-tives" keeps the skin active, and purifies and enriches the blood. "Fruit-a-tives" tones up and strengthens the organs of digestion, insuring food being properly digested and assimilated.

Everyone can take ordinary precautions, avoid crowded places, and use "Fruit-a-tives" regularly to insure sound digestion, to keep the bowels and kidneys regular and the whole system in the best possible condition. Then we are safe from disease.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by dealers everywhere at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa, Ont.

NAVAL GUNS BLAZE AWAY.

For Weeak the Yank Monsters Have Bombarded the Huns.

WASHINTON, Oct. 26. — Monster American naval guns are blazing away on the west front. For some weeks they have been bombarding the German positions at long range. Their use marks a great achievement in ordnance engineering. Army experts said the mounting of these guns on railway carriages to pass over rail and bridge lines of France could not be done; Admiral Earle and the navy experts said it could.

LEMON JUICE WHITENS SKIN

Girls! Make beauty lotion at home for few cents

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White, shake well, and you have a quarter pint of the best bleaching and skin whitening lotion, and compexion beautifier, at very, very small cost.

Your grocer has the lemons and any drug store or toilet counter will supply three ounces of Orchard White for a few cents. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands each day and see how tan, redness, sallowness, sunburn and windburn disappear and how clear, soft and rosy-white the skin becomes. Yes! It is harmless

Changes in the Grocery Market

Damage to the Raisin Crop—New Price Changes.

Damage to the raisin crop by the recent rains is now known to be fairly heavy, says the Canadian Grocer for the week. This means that deliveries of some lines will be cut down from 50 to 75 per cent., while no deliveries of others are expected. Fancy sulphur bleached and California Valencias along with Sultanas are the lines which it is thought will be off the market.

CROP CONDITIONS

Crop conditions show an absolute loss of at least 25 per cent. of the entire muscatels and in addition to this there will be 15 to 20 per cent. which can be used only for stock food and other purposes. It is indicated government orders, which represent a healthy tonnage, must be filled in full, thus reducing amounts for other trade.

TEA SITUATION

The tea situation locally throughout the week is without change with prices continuing firm. Dealers expect no change in price, but if there is any it will be of an upward tendency.

SUGAR SITUATION

The sugar situation shows no easing away as yet. Scarcity of labor, still further influenced by the epidemic of sickness, is curtailing activities on the beet crop, so that relief looked for in this quarter cannot be materialized at present. The urgent consuming demand has eased off somewhat but all offerings are quickly absorbed.

DRIED FRUITS

Declines were made in barley feeds and for catsup in gallon cans.

The situation with regard to dried fruits is very difficult and importers fear that they will not be able to get supplies along that have been shipped them.

From a trading standpoint, business has been much affected by the sickness epidemic, for not only have stuffs been sorely depleted, but there has also been a real interference with the volume of trade all around. This is a general expression of conditions as they obtain.

CORN PRODUCTS

Lower prices have been named on various lines of corn products during the week following the easing away of market on corn. Cornmeal is down 35 cents per 98-lb bag in some quarters and an easing away in corn flour prices is also noticeable. Rolled oats is down 10 cents per 90-lb bag and oatmeal 15 cents per 98-lb. bag. A decline in hominy grits amounting to 25 cents and pearl hominy of 50 cents per 98-lb. bag has also been recorded.

ORANGES UP

Sharp advances made in oranges and lemons last week have been maintained and superseded, levels now prevailing being record figures for these two fruits. Box apples from Western United States and British Columbia are coming along quite freely, though prices range at high levels. Local barrel apples are strong and now in very good supply. Potatoes have registered a decline of 50 cents bag this week.

NUTS FIRM

Nuts are ruling with a very firm undertone and a further stiffening in prices on walnuts in the shell is noticeable.

A feverish tone is noticeable in the spice market, though all lines seem a shade firmer. Cloves are very scarce and very firm and the same is true of nutmegs and tartar, both of which are very hard to get.

HIGHER PRICES

Higher levels on coffee are expected almost any day. The present basis of sale locally is below replacement value and that another one or two cents will be added to prices is the feeling now prevailing.

A larger margin of profit has been allowed dealers handling mill feede The margin now permitted is 15 cents in bag lots in place of 10 cents and $3.00 in ton lots as against $2.00 formerly ruling.

"FOGHORN" MacDONALD MAY BE CANDIDATE IN BYE-ELECTION

OTTAWA, Oct. 25.—Major Macdonald may be a candidate in the coming Glengarry bye election. The well-known soldier who was born in Glengarry has been asked to stand, and may enter the contest. He would run as an independent soldier candidate. "Foghorn" Macdonald is one of the best known mining men and prospectors on the continent. When war broke our he enlisted as a private and won his commission on the field for bravery. Since his return to Canada he has had a legal controversy with the Militia department over his right to wear the uniform, although discharged. If he is elected to Parliament, he will add to the gayety of that venerable institution. The poor acoustic properties of the Chamber will be no handicap to "Foghorn."

GUARD THE BABY AGAINST COLDS

To guard the baby against colds, nothing can equal Baby's Own Tablets. The Tablets are a mild laxative that will keep the little one's stomach and bowels working regularly. It is a recognized fact that where the stomach and bowels are in good order that colds will not exist; that the health of the little one will be good and that he will thrive and be happy. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Through all these dark, uncertain days, our soldiers have held aloft and brightly burning, the sacred torch of freedom.

On Monday, for a space, it passes to our hands.

Does it pass to hands less eager—hands less worthy?

The world shall know our answer!

On Monday we will be asked to buy Victory Bonds—the sinews of war.

Our obligation is clear. Our duty is unmistakable. Victory Bonds are the weapons with which we at home can strike and strive for freedom.

This solemn thought shall possess us: Until the Victory Loan 1918 is assured our duty is not accomplished—our task is incomplete.

From every province, city and town; from every county, township and farm of our country will come forth a mighty flood of money. The word will ring around the world that Canada's gold, no less than Canada's soldiers, is Germany's uncompromising enemy.

This surely will be our message to our sons:—Carry on, brave souls! Canada's treasure is not a laggard in the fight. Eager hands are stretched to catch and hold aloft forever the Flaming Torch of Freedom!

The Victory Loan 1918 Opens Monday

Issued by Canada's Victory Loan Committee in co-operation with the Minister of Finance of the Dominion of Canada

"LIBERTY SHOES" OUT SOON.

Dealers Will Have Standard Grades to Offer Next Month.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—According to announcement by the War Industries Board received in the New York market, the standardized "Liberty Shoes" will make their appearance in retail shoe stores by Nov. 1 next. These shoes, which will sell at prices ranging from $8 to $12 per pair, will be sold along with present stocks of the retailers. The dealers will be given until June 1 to dispose of present stocks, and after that date no shoes shall sell at more than $12 per pair. No restrictions on the sale of the high-priced shoes now in the retailers' hands are imposed by the board. On the contrary, it is pointed out that those who can afford to buy these shoes will be helping the government's plan by doing so, as they will enable the dealers to liquidate their stocks so much sooner.

"Orders now in the factory," the statement reads, "are for spring delivery, so it follows that there will be a certain portion of the product offered for sale to the spring trade at a price in excess of $12. To permit these articles to be cleaned out and also to permit the disposal of the present stocks priced above the top maximum, it has been agreed that those retailers specializing in high-priced goods shall be given until June 1 to liquidate all their stock above the Class A ($9-$12) maximum."

BAIRNSFATHER GOES HOME.

Trench Artist Obliged by Wound to Give Up His Tour.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25. — Captain Bruce Bairnsfather, the British artist of the trenches, who has been stopping at the Hotel Astor for the last two weeks, has been forced to abandon his visit to Australia and will return to England because of ill-health.

When he was wounded at Ypres in 1915, the Captain suffered severely from shell shock that burst the drum of his left ear. Since his arrival in New York Captain Bairnsfather has experienced trouble with this ear, becoming almost deaf in the last few days. He consulted a specialist, who advised him to return to England for treatment.

Would not be Without Zutoo Tablets At Any Cost

Such is the statement of Mr. A. O. Norton, of Boston, the largest Jack Manufacturer in the world. His voluntary testimonial regarding ZUTOO follows:

286 Congress St., Boston, Mass.

"I have been a sufferer from Headache since childhood and have used all, or nearly all the so-called 'cures' on the market. Some months since my attention was called to Zutoo Tablets and I have been using them ever since with the most gratifying results. I find they cure a 'sick' or 'nervous' headache in a few minutes and leave no bad effects. My family use them whenever needed with equally good results. I have frequently given them to friends who were suffering from Headache and they never failed to give quick relief. I always carry Zutoo Tablets in my grip on the road and WOULD NOT BE WITHOUT THEM AT ANY COST."

Red Cross Campaign Not Yet Finished

Necessary for Canvassers to Call on Subscribers Next Week.

No previous Red Cross canvass has been made under the difficulties that have existed this year. A week ago the teams were intact. During the week the organization became more or less demoralized through illness to the canvassers, to relatives or in business concerns. Many of the factories have been unable to make returns and it will be necessary to have the lists open practically all next week in order that all those who desire to give will have an opportunity of doing so.

Under the circumstances the response has been remarkable and goes to show that the Red Cross work has the deep sympathy of the citizens of Peterborough.

Many subscriptions are being left in at headquarters, 398 George street, and if you have not been seen your subscription in this manner will be appreciated.

Tells How to Stop a Bad Cough

Surprising results from this famous old home-made syrup. Easily prepared and costs little.

If you have a severe cough or chest cold accompanied with soreness, throat tickle, hoarseness, or difficult breathing, or if your child wakes up during the night with croup and you want quick help, try this reliable old home-made cough remedy. Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth). Pour this into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. This recipe makes 16 ounces of really remarkable cough remedy. It tastes good, and in spite of its low cost, it can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief.

You can feel this take hold of a cough in a way that means business. It loosens and raises the phlegm, stops throat tickle and soothes and heals the irritated membranes that line the throat and bronchial tubes with surprising promptness, ease and certainty that it is really astonishing.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and is probably the best known means of overcoming severe coughs, throat and chest colds.

There are many worthless imitations of this mixture. To avoid disappointment, ask for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

Neglect of Highway is a Most Costly Procedure

Dumping Loads of Gravel and Leaving Them for the Traffic to Wear Down is an Expensive Proposition.

ROAD TESTS.

Tests with a team of 1600-pound horses and with a two-ton truck hauling a three-ton load showed unsurfaced concrete to be the best road and loose gravel to require an expenditure of 840 per cent. more power than the concrete. The tabel follows:

	Pull in lbs. per ton.
Loose gravel, not packed, new road	263
Earth road, stiff mud top, firm beneath	218
Earth road, fine dust	92
Gravel road, good normal conditions	78
Concrete base, 1 1-2 inch top	69
Water-bound macadam, good condition	64
Concrete base, 3-8 inch skin of asphaltic oil and screenings	49
Unsurfaced concrete	28

MAKING THE GRADE.

A load hauled by a single horse on the level requires:
Two horses on a grade of 2 feet in 100.
Three horses on a grade of 4 feet in 100.
Four horses on a grade of 6 feet in 100.
Six horses on a grade of 10 feet in 100.
Nine horses on a grade of 15 feet in 106.
Cutting down the hill or going around it saves power.

Neglect is most costly in road work.

Small breaks quickly become bad holes.

Detours suffer the greatest. They are usually ordinary country roads, or roads less strongly built than main highways. Heavy trucks quickly turn them into a series of impassable mudholes with the coming of wet weather.

Concrete or brick are the most lasting but the cost makes them prohibitive in sparsely settled communities.

In many states and counties patrol systems have been established. Men and teams are constantly on the highways with scarifiers, and loads of stone or gravel, dragging in the ruts, filling up the small chuckholes. The system is expensive but in the long run it is cheapest.

On macadam road repairs are best made with broken stone bonded with bituminous material which coats the fragments and fills the interstices. Dirt roads passing over low places can be made good only by banking up or by removal of the road to higher ground.

Cutting a road out of the hillside will guarantee a good basis for a highway which will be quickly paid for by the lessened cost of maintenance.

Dumping loads of gravel and leaving them for the traffic to wear down instead of steam rolling the improvement, is an expensive proposition from the standpoint of traffic. It requires a 350 per cent. greater expenditure of power to roll down the gravel in this manner.

Eventually parallel systems of roads between the principal centres may give relief, permitting one at a time to be closed for repairs.

The county road system is being rapidly adopted by the counties, with the exception of Peterboro.

Commerce follows the good roads and as the railways in the past have brought prosperity to a community, so will well kept highways build up trade centres now.

GEORGE STREET METHODIST CHURCH

As there will not be any service or Sunday School at the George Street Methodist Church to-morrow, the pastor wishes to make a few suggestions to his congregation:

1—Let us worship God in the morning by reading in the following order:
Hymn 169.
Psalm 146.
Luke 4: 16-44 (Jesus the Healer of soul and body).
Hymn 651.
Then let us approach the throne of grace in prayer with a special remembrance of the afflicted and bereaved.

2—Let us spend a portion of the afternoon in the study of the Sunday School lesson. It will be found in Genesis 24.

3—At the eventide let the members of the household gather together for a chat, and let us discuss the subject, "The value of the church to the community."

Moreover let us not forget to render during the day some practical assistance to any who are sick and suffering. Such ministry is in harmony with the sanctity of the Sabbath.

The pastor offers these suggestions with the prayer that in every home in our city the presence of the God whom we worship in the sanctuary may be graciously felt.

HOW TO SAVE WHAT YOU SPEND

The butcher, in Peterboro, who cut off the beefsteak for his customer, wore a white apron and a pleasant smile.

The customer outside the counter wore a last year's suit and a pained expression when the butcher announced "Thirty-five cents a pound, six—three pounds, a dollar five, sir, thank you."

The customer knew that he had to have meat for his family, but he didn't know how or what to buy. The butcher knew his business, bought at high prices, sold at high prices—and kept the trimmings of his steaks.

But the real villains in this every day market tragedy were not present. They were profiteering meat packer in Chicago—and a careless and ignorant housewife at home.

We'll leave the meat profiteer for the government to settle—and scold the careless housewife.

It is the business of the efficient housewife to select the food for the family as well as cook it. Part of her business is to learn that not all nourishing meats cost thirty-five cents a pound—and that there are other cuts of beef than steak, and other meats than beef.

A two-hour study of the cheaper cuts of meat—information to be found in any good book on foods and cooking at the public library—and a semi-weekly visit to the meat market, for personal selection of the meat will reduce the butcher's bill from one-third to one-half.

Cuts of beef from the neck are considerably less expensive than steaks and roast. Neck cuts are good for stews, small pot roasts, hamburg steak, and beef loaf. Cuts from the shanks (legs) are suited for soup meat and stews. Other parts of beef, not commonly bought but good for food, are the brains which may be stewed or scalloped, the heart, to be stuffed or braised, the tongue, to be broiled or pickled, liver, for boiling or frying, tripe, broiled or fried in batter, beef suet, used in shortening, and the tail used in soup. They are all comparatively low-priced.

Meat and vegetable stews, rich soups and meat loaves are more economical than plain steaks and roasts.

There is no difference in the quality or nourishing value of different parts of the beef carcass. The difference in price is due to the greater demand for the best cuts. Save money by learning to buy and cook the less used parts. Next week this department will discuss the cheaper cuts of veal and mutton.

SPANISH INFLUENZA

This epidemic is now prevalent throughout Ontario, and in some localities is getting worse. Every precaution should be taken to prevent the spread of this dreaded disease. Keep your room well ventilated, eat no more nor less than what is required, as it attacks a great many people who suffer from indigestion. Wash the hands before eating, and every member of the house should have their own towels. Keep the mouth, throat and nose free from germs by using PYROLL as a spray and mouthwash two or three times a day.

PYROLL is not a Patent Medicine, the formula is on the bottle. Doctors, Dentists and Druggists recommend it as a preventative of La Grippe and Spanish Influenza. 3d-98

CURTAIL FURNITURE MAKING

WAR TIME RESTRICTIONS IN STATES BY WAR BOARD.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—Restrictions on the manufacture of furniture eliminating all new patterns for the duration of the war and curtailing active patterns 50 per cent. were announced yesterday by the War Industries Board. The new rule applies to bedroom, dining room and upholstered furniture, chairs, certain tables and mirrors. Beveled mirrors are eliminated, bedroom mirror plate curtailed 25 per cent., and the manufacture of dining room art chairs and toilet table chairs discontinued.

HEALTH BUREAU IN REGINA

STRONG ACTION TAKEN TO COPE WITH 'FLU EPIDEMIC

REGINA, Oct. 26.—Strong action was taken in Regina to cope with the influenza epidemic by the appointment of a Central Health Bureau, of which Alderman Dr. Rose is acting Medical Health Officer in the absence of Dr. Dow, who is sick. All stores will close at 6 p.m. on Saturday, and inquiry is being made as to whether the merchants favor closing at 5 o'clock daily. Owing to the complete disorganization of the M.H.O. office through sickness and the great pressure under which doctors and nurses are working, the reports of those sick cannot be obtained. Half the doctors and graduate nurses in the city are sick.

Peace Will Hardly Result From Recent Correspondence

Germany is Not in Mood to Accept the Terms Laid Down by President Wilson.

ALLIES SATISFIED

(United Press.)
(By Webb Miller.)

PARIS, Oct. 26.—In authoritative quarters the opinion is well defined to-day that no armistice and no peace will result from President Wilson's transmission to the Allies of his correspondence with Germany. On the whole, French opinion is satisfied with Wilson's action, but well informed persons declare that this nation would have been as well satisfied had the President not replied or had he refused to go further with the negotiations. In fact they predict that his step in turning the affair over to the Allies will, in the end, amount to the same thing as calling a halt to the correspondence.

The Guarantees.

It is believed that the Allied governments, after a consultation, will reply in one of the two ways indicated in Wilson's note, declaring either that the Allies are not disposed to make peace "upon the terms and principles indicated" and do not deem an armistice possible from the military viewpoint, or that the Allied military leaders and those of the United States will draft terms for such an armistice as will "fully protect the interests of the peoples involved," which terms, in view of the distrust of the present master of Germany, would amount virtually to unconditional surrender. It is considered practically certain that Germany would not accept such terms as would be necessary to insure the Allies against treachery, as Wilson stated in the note, the guarantees would have to be such as to make a renewal of hostilities by Germany impossible.

Armistice Terms.

It is pointed out that this means only one thing, surrender of guns, munitions, submarines, airplanes and all means of making war. Authorities here believe that Germany is not sufficiently beaten yet to accept the drastic conditions and extraordinary guarantees which are necessary. Therefore, it is predicted that negotiations will quickly come to an end.

As one well informed authority said: "There is no hope that negotiations will come to anything. The war must go on. Arms only, and not words, will settle the big differences between the viewpoints of the Allies and the Germans. Wilson has left it to Foch." All those interviewed cautioned against the people of the Allied nations raising up any false hopes of a quick peace until Germany is whipped once and for all.

The Allies will reply with all the necessary clear-sightedness and rigor recommended by President Wilson himself. Nothing will be left to chance.

Meanwhile the British armies are advancing toward Maubeuge and Mons, beyond which stretch the valleys of the Sambre and the Meuse, threatening to cut Von Hindenburg's forces between Metz and Holland in two, the same as General D'Esperey did the Bulgarians.

SAD EYES

By RIFLEMAN PATRICK MACGILL

Author of "The Great Push," Etc.

Spudhole Rubb, the Cockney soldier came in from the village street, and talked of a woman to the men in his billet. The soldiers were undressing, preparatory to lying down for the night. A candle stood on the floor, lighting up the centre of the barn, but unable to pierce to the dark corners of the buildings.

"It was in a cafe across the way," said Spudhole, sitting on the floor and unwinding his puttees. "And there was a bird behind the bar, a regular peach, and she gave me the glad—one of the nicest girls I ever set eyes on in this part of the world."

"It's the women that'll put ye on the wrong road one uv these fine days," said a tall, red haired man, who was lying down on the straw, his tunic bearing the gold stripe in triplicate across his chest. In his mouth was a little black clay pipe, and now and again he drew a long puff from it, sending a wreath of white smoke into the air. This man, whose name was Gahey, was the bosom chum of Spudhole Bubb.

"Catch 'em putting this kid on the wrong road," said Spudhole. "I'm too old to be caught by any woman."

'Regardin' meself, that was once me own opinion," said Gahey. "But bein' an old man, I know better. I have found out that it is the job iv a woman to lead men into ruin. Every part iv them is planned for that purpose. If it's not the lips that draw us into the wrong path, it's the pearly teeth, and if it's none of these, it's the cut iv their clothes, or the make-up they put on their faces to pass themselves off as queens when they're as dowdy as housewives in quilted petticoats."

Eyes Beckon On To Ruin

"Well, it wasn't any o' these things that struck me," said Bubb. "It was the eye, the glad eye of the bird in the cafe."

"That's what has been me own ruin many a time," said Gahey. "The eye the rollin' eye, blue, black, grey, or piebald, or whatever the color iv it happened to be, it's many the poor man it has led into sin and the black pit iv wrong. And me no less than any. Some day it will come to me turn to appear afore the Great Orderly Room to answer for me behaviour on earth. The question will be put to me: 'Why did you do this, Gahey?' or 'Why did you do that, Gahey?' Explain yourself.'

"'What's the charge on the sheet?' I'll ask. And maybe it'll be drunkenness. And I'll excuse meself by sayin' that a grey eye lookin' kindly on someone that wasn't me was responsible. If it's Pride, I'll explain that I was always the proudest boy home in me native townland iv Ballyrudden, all on account iv a blue eye that looked at me twice when I dressed well and held me head higher than anyone goin' to church iv a Sunday. And so on it will run for page after page iv sins that the eye was responsible for; all kinds iv eyes—eyes that glanced, eyes that winked, eyes that smiled, roguish eyes, rollicking eyes and all the other kinds iv eyes that temated me from the pathe of right a million times."

"Wot about black eyes?" asked Spudhole Bubb.

"They're in the tally, too; but they'll come under the headin' iv bad temper," said Gahey. It's theme the kind I give away in a ruction."

"So it seems that you'll have no eye to bring forward as testimony of your good behaviour on this world" said a voice from the corner of the barn where the darkness rose black as a wall of soot.

"Not so fast," said Gahey, pressing the tobacco down in the bowl of his pipe with his trigger finger. "Not so fast, me bucko. There's a pair iv eyes I remember well, and they may be used on me behalf one day. And these belong to Mother Lacroix, her that was at one time, and maybe is now, the mistress of the Cafe Rouge in the village iv Gorre.

"A grand woman she was entirely when first I knew her. Me and me mates were billeted in her house in the early days of the war. Her man was away fightin', and she had only one son at home, a lissome youngster that was as fine a boy as I ever set eyes on. His age might be eighteen or thereabouts, and when we were billeted in the house, he was called away to join army. And, poor woman, she was sad at her boy goin.' But she kept a cheerful face and a brave smile, though her heart was breakin' all the time. She was just like the other women iv France, the bravest, bar none, in all the seven corners iv the world.

"We went away a couple of days after that and into the trenches, and two years passed by afore we came back to Gorre again. The old Cafe was just the same, only for the roof that was knocked off the top iv it, and Mistress Lacroix was living most iv the time in the cellar. But ye could get beer to buy there as iv old, and better beer than ye can get anywhere else in France, at least from me way iv thinkin'. But war had done worse than the blowin' off iv the roof, for Mistress Lacroix. Her man was killed at Verdun, and on the day that we were there news came to her that her boy was killed as well. And her eyes when she got the news! They would break the heart iv a stone, for in them was all the misery iv the world. Her only child dead—and that is heavy on the heart iv a woman.

"Well, to look at her was enough for me, an there and then I made a vow that, come the next turn in the trenches, I would see red and go for the blackguards that were responsible for the war. And luck was in me way the next time we went up to the front. 'Twas a raid the first turn in, an iv course I went over the bags with the rest, but I didn't come back with them. When we got orders to come back after the work was done, I stayed behind and had a look around on me own, slinkin' down into dugouts and proddin' them that was tenants, throwin' a bomb here and there, and in my mind all the time the eyes iv Mistress Lacroix when the news iv her son's death came to her. And, Glory be! but it put ginger into me arm in the work of clanin' the world iv the spawn that were holdin' the inimy trenches. Sivin was the tally that time, and a pair of sorrowful eyes was responsible for the good work."

"I mind the night well," said Spudhole. "We came back without you, and we thought that ye were lost to the wide. And it's the first time I've heard wot ye did that night."

Gahey took the pipe from his mouth, emptied the ash from the bowl by striking it against the palm of his hand.

"Blow out the candle and get unto the scratcher with ye," he said to Spudhole. For its yerself that's the lazy bucko when ye get the order to show a leg in the mornin'."

ENGLISH DINERS WILL WANT FURS.

Well-lighted and heated hotels and restaurants will be unknown in England this winter. The rationing of hotels and restaurants and the catering trade generally, under the Fuel and Lighting Order, is being specially dealt with by the Coal Controller, who urges proprietors of these establishments to assist in every way by the careful use of coal, gas and electricity, and asks the public to co-operate by not demanding fire and light that can possibly be done without.

The Coal Controller points out that every form of display by means of lighting though it may be more apparent than serious, nevertheless is a subject of comparison and comment and would set a bad example to the householders who are showing every intention to use less coal and light in their homes. He asks for subdued lighting in lounge and dining rooms, for its abolition in show cases and for the ban of multiple lights in bedrooms.

It is essential that guests should realize that hotels and restaurants are severely rationed for light and fuel, and it is confidently hoped that the public, by sound and sensible support, will help to put the national interests before comfort and luxury.

WOMEN ARE CLIMBING

Tokio, Sept. 29. (By Mail.)—More than twice as many women and girls climbed Mount Fuji this season as in 1917—to be exact 5,984 this year and 2,873 last. This mountain, 70 miles from Tokio, and clearly visible in that city on clear days, is sacred to all Japanese, the mecca of pilgrims and the most familiar figure in Japanese art. During the two months season just closed, 68,580 men climbed Fuji, a decrease of 1,628, from last year, official records state. The marked increase in female climbers principally is due to increased popularity of mountaineering among girl students.

WHAT THE VICTORY LOAN MEANS TO THE FARMER

The 1917 Victory Loan enabled the Dominion Government to advance—

$100,000,000 to finance last year's wheat crop; also

Nearly another $100,000,000 to finance the sale of live stock products to Great Britain; also

Nearly $40,000,000 to finance exports of cheese to Great Britain.

The 1918 Victory Loan will enable the Dominion Government to finance the sale of the wheat crop to Great Britain; also

To finance the sale of beef, pork, and other live stock products.

To finance exports of cheese, butter, eggs and condensed milk to Great Britain.

Great Britain will take Canada's agricultural products, but cannot pay cash. The Dominion Government must finance the sales.

CHILD GETS SICK CROSS, FEVERISH IF CONSTIPATED

Look at tongue! Then give fruit laxative for stomach, liver, bowels.

"California Syrup of Figs" can't harm children and they love it.

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign the little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious "fruit laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside" cleansing. Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

DAYLIGHT SAVING ENDS SUNDAY

To-morrow, October 27th, the clocks in both Canada and the United States will be set back one hour to solar time and our first real experiment in "Saving daylight" will come to an end. The general feeling seems to be that it has been a success and it will likely go into effect next year again.

HOW TO LIVE LONG.

Many ailments find their beginning in ing Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to keep a torpid sluggish condition of liver, kidneys and bowels. As a matter of fact you can add years to the length of your life as well as comfort and happiness by using these organs regular and active.

RETURN TO FRANCE ALL WORKS OF ART

Germany Says They Were Removed to Save Them From Destruction..

LONDON, Oct. 24.—Valuable works of art belonging to museums and private owners in the regions of Cambrai, Douai and Valenciennes, now in the hands of the Germans, will be returned undamaged to their owners after the war. This announcement is made in a German Government wireless message received here.

These works of art have, under the orders of the supreme army command, been sent to a place of safety, to save them from destruction by bombardment, the message adds.

President of the Canadian Theatre Managers' Association on the Peterboro Situation

Mr. A. J. Small Believes Little Danger Would Result From the Opening of the Local Theatres—Places Could be Fumigated.

The following letter is self explanatory:

Toronto, Oct. 24th, 1918.

To the Edtior of The Examiner:
Peterborough,
Ontario.

Dear Sir,—In connection with the temporary embargo which has been placed upon the Grand Opera House, I respectfully submit that all citizens in your community should be treated alike and no distinction made as between places of amusement and any other place of business or quarter of the city where the public are wont to congregate or assemble for any purpose whatsoever, as no logic or reason can be found in endeavouring to abate the epidemic in one place if it is going to be encouraged in any other. The Grand Opera House in your city is thoroughly well ventilated and infinitely less dangerous to the public than departmental stores, market places, office building, elevators and street cars that are jammed to the point of suffocation during rush hours.

Out of Work.

I fully appreciate the sincerity which undoubtedly moved the Board of Health to take the action in question, but nevertheless feel that they cannot be fully aware of the very serious consequences to the managers of the theatres and those in their employ, and to the members of the various companies booked for engagements at Peterborough in the immediate future. The business has been brought to a complete standstill, all employees are thrown out of work, and the incoming attractions are forced to lay off and lose every dollar expended on salaries to their performers, customs duties on their scenic productions and advertising material that had to be paid before they could enter Canada at all, together with the hundred and one other items of expense incidental to the transportation and movement of theatrical companies from point to point in the Province of Ontario.

Loss of Income.

It is, unfortunately, a fact that those employed in the theatrical calling are not, as a class, saving people, and I can assure you that in the case of theatre employees in Peterborough the loss of income due to your closing order is going to be an exceedingly serious matter in very many cases. I am informed that several have already expressed themselves to the effect that they will be forced to go to other cities in search of work, and the disruption of the local theatrical business that will certainly follow, unless the order is very soon rescinded, will mean a financial loss to both managers and employees which it will be quite impossible to estimate.

Not Necessary.

I would not press this seemingly selfish point of view if I was not thoroughly convinced that the opinion of the Chief Officer of the Ontario Provincial Board of Health, Dr. J. W. S. McCullough, who expressed himself as not considering the closing of such places as theatres necessary, is founded upon sound judgment. I respectfully refer you to Dr. McCullough's published statement contained in the Toronto "Mail and Empire" of Tuesday, October 8th, in column three, on page five, and I also quote you the following from an editorial in the Toronto "Daily News" of Saturday, Oct. 12th: "We do not believe that the range or severity of the influenza epidemic is sufficient to justify the closing of either the schools or other places of public resort. Those who are suffering from the disease are at home. Why compel thousands of young people to expose themselves unnecessarily to infection by remaining in close touch with the patients?"

Would Fumigate.

If thought desirable by the Board of Health, the management of the Grand Opera House would be altogether willing, as a matter of more abundant caution, to fumigate the theatre under the direction of the Board, at such intervals as they might think proper. By keeping the theatre open, a well-heated place of amusement is furnished to hundreds of people who otherwise will be forced to spend their time in lodgings and other places where they will be much more liable to contract colds and influenza than they would in the comfortable surroundings of the theatre. Those who attend theatres are very rarely face to face and the danger of infection is by no means as great there as in places where large numbers of people are meeting face to face. The long continued wet weather appears to be over, and with it we may reasonably expect better health conditions.

Short Season.

In conclusion, the theatrical season is a very limited one, not more than nine months of the year at most, and the earlier portion of it (September, October and November), are the only months in which the managers of theatres are at least fairly sure of some profit and a reasonable rate of interest on their investments. After that period, the Christmas shopping season begins in earnest to the great detriment of the business of the theatres, the three weeks immediately preceding the holidays being invariably the dullest of the entire year—and once the Christmas and New Year's festivities are over it is but a short space of time until the Lenten season is ushered in and with its advent the theatre is always due for another protracted period of depression.

I sincerely trust, therefore, that your Board of Health will see their way clear to rescind the closing order and respectfully submit that in many parts of the United States, where the type of influenza is much more aggravated than in Canada, all theatres have been allowed to remain open with only this restriction, that members of audiences are warned beforehand that they must use their pocket handkerchiefs when sneezing or coughing under a penalty of ejection from the theatre.

Yours very truly,
Yours very truly,
AMBROSE J. SMALL.
President Canadian Theatre Managers Association.

Sad Fatality Near Tweed

Small Boy Grasped Live Wire With Fatal Results.

On Tuesday afternoon a most distressing fatality took place in Tweed when little Thomas Akey, the ten-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Akey, was electrocuted.

Mr. Akey is a section foreman on the C.P.R., his section extending east of Tweed.

They reside on Moira street, in the home purchased a few months ago from Mr. Jay Farrar. The premises is not far from the watering trough at the junction of the Actinolite and Bogart roads.

It appears that Thomas and a younger brother, Gerald, were after a pail of water. They went on past the trough just a few steps down to the river's edge and just at that point a guy wire from one of the electric light poles is anchored in the ground. As it is near the water's edge, it is very easy to grasp when one starts to climb up the bank.

This guy wire which is only a support for the pole should be a dead wire and perfectly harmless. A short distance from the pole it has an insulated eye but the insulating piece was broken out by some means. The wire even should still be dead, but in some manner was in contact with one of the lectric wires at the pole. This formed a circuit for the current.

In passing up the bank, Tommy grasped this wire which was alive with one of the electric wires at the iately he was thrown to the ground and was killed instantly. His brother Gerald was thrown to the ground and stunned.

CITY'S COAL RECORDS ARE NOW COMPLETE SELL IN 2-TON LOTS

eventy-five Cords of Wood Arrive —Sale at the Dock To-day Was Authorized Last Night.

The Municipal Fuel Yard received about seventy-five cords of wood from Stoney Lake yesterday, and last night the Fire, Water and Light Committee authorized its sale and delivery from the dock. It was also decided to sell city coal in two-ton lots to those citizens who have not yet obtained any supply.

The Committee suggested to the Fuel Commissioners, who were present, that the regulations should be amended to provide for the sale of a quantity of small coal to those citizens who have nothing but large sizes which they find difficult to burn in their stoves.

Registration Complete.

It was announced that the reports of the dealers have now been compiled up to the present, and that the daily records would be filed henceforth as soon as they are received. The clerks who are performing this work have already examined many of the coupons that were received from householders who indicated that they had failed to receive any coal, and it has been found that since these coupons were sent in many of the citizens have obtained supplies. In short, the fuel situation has brightened considerably, and it is expected with increasing confidence that all the homes will soon have secured sufficient coal for their immediate needs.

Mr. Murray's Conviction.

Mr. Alex. Murray, of the Fuel Commission, remarked that had the Commission been properly established and maintained the present difficulties would have been obviated.

"We couldn't get the right men in time," Mayor Duncan replied.

"You were too long weeding out for the right parties, Mr. Mayor," the Labour representative said. "I was after the Council all year. I was after the job but was refused."

Alderman Dobbin stated that the Commission could not have altered the seventy per cent. regulation, but Mr. Murray contended, producing a copy of the Fuel Controller's bulletin, that if an emergency was feared a local Commission had the power to modify that particular clause.

The discussion turned to the distribution of coal and the city's price. Mr. Murray declared that it seemed that the high prices always fell on the poor people. It was averred by some of the members of the Committee and also by Mr. Wearing that among the citizens who had been unable to obtain coal were a considerable number of men of means.

"They couldn't have had much power," Mr. Murray retorted.

Alderman Dobbin said that the books would show that the workingmen and poorer people were well represented among those who had already been supplied by the dealers.

"I've been trying to get coal since last spring," Alderman Saunders lamented, "but I have got only one ton."

Alderman Dobbin related his efforts to supply the wives of soldiers who are in service, and stated that all but two had received coal, and one of these refused to accept a load of coal when it was delivered to her.

Mr. Murray replied that in that case he believed it was a question of money that was this woman's difficulty.

"But she didn't have to pay for the coal when it was delivered to her," Alderman Dobbin explained, and described the means by which this detail was covered. He expressed the opinion that general statements that the poor people had been discriminated against in the distribution of coal served only to create distrust and uneasiness in the community.

"You wouldn't put any other idea in my head if you were to hammer away all night," Mr. Murray declared.

The discussion ended with Alderman Dobbin's assertion that the seventy per cent. clause had prevented the wider distribution that could have been carried out had the maximum allotment been apreciably less.

MORNING PRAYER IN BRITISH NAVY

In the tranquil waters of the anchorage a battleship is at rest. The morning sun, mounting in a cloudless sky, sheds his golden light upon sea and ship. The ripples sparkle as they dance. The steel flanks of the great guns gleam.

It is a workaday morning. The inspection of the sailormen (all of whom are in working rig) at divisions on the upper deck, is just over and each man has been handed a card on which is printed a number of hymns, selected from "Hymns Ancient and Modern." A murmur of talk goes on at the "Stand Easy." It stops suddenly.

"Toll the bell." The order comes from the commander, and is no sooner uttered than the long lines of men face aft at the right turn. A marine sentry tolls the bell. This is the summons—according to the king's regulations—to the ship's company (those of it who belong to the Anglican faith) to morning prayers on the quarter deck.

The band plays. The divisions, each led by an officer, march smartly aft to the strains of a well known hymn. The men form up on the port and starboard sides of the quarterdeck with faces turned inboard. The officers line up in front. A midshipman presides at a somewhat weatherbeaten harmonium which occupies a central position. A short silence ensues. Then—

"Caps off!"

As the order is given every head is bared, and the padre, with a smile on his fine fresh face and with his pincenez perched upon his nose, appears on deck in the vestments of his office. He glides to his place beside the musical midshipman, and announces the number of the hymn. One soft chord is touched, and hundreds of voices, led by the band, break into harmony.

I cannot imagine a more picturesque or inspiring sight—a perfect day, a blue sky, a calm, soft, sighing sea, and just abaft the muzzles of the huge turret guns, the padre in his white surplice, surrounded by the men, bareheaded and in working rig, all lifting up their voices in supplication to the Almighty.

The last chord has been struck, the last note sounded. Heads are bowed, and the padre's voice, mild and mellow, steals softly over the peaceful waters.

"Preserve us from the dangers of the sea and the violence of the enemy that we may be a safeguard to our most gracious sovereign.

"The grace of our Lord.....be with us evermore."

"Amen," deep and devout, from the men, and the padre is gone.

"'Shun! On caps, right turn, double march." The men are off to work, with the band playing a lively air.—London Daily Mail.

SWISS NIP GERMAN PLOT.

TERRORISM FOR ITALY CARRIED ON FROM KAISER'S CONSULATE

ZURICH, Oct. 25.—Linoi Androi, a deserter Engelemann, a German consular agent, have been found guilty in the Swiss courts for having in their possession bombs, infernal machines, and revolutionary pamphlets for use in Italy. Engelemann was sentenced to two and a half years' imprisonment to pay a fine of 5,000 francs, and the expulsion from Switzerland for life. Androi received a sentence of twenty months in prison, a fine of 1,000 francs an expulsion.

It was brought out at the trial that the Italian had conducted what was osensibly a green grocer's shop in Zurich. The shop, however, was headquarters for the "Terrorist section" of the German Foreign Office. Bombs revolvers, and pamphlets found in the shop were traced to Engelemann's bureau in the German Consulate at Zurich.

The revolutionary pamphlets found in the shop were printed at the office o La Paix in Berlin. La Paix is a pacifist organ directed by Herr Erzberger, the German Centrist leader, recently appointed Minister without Portfolio in the Cabinet of Prince Maximilian.

SNOW IN SASKATCHEWAN.

Four Inches of Snow Between Chamberlain and Craik is Reported.

REGINA, Oct. 26.—Snow fell at several points in Saskatchewan and incoming trains showed evidence that winter has come. On Wednesday four inches fell between Chamberlain and Craik, while Govan, Strassburg and other towns in central Saskatchewan received a share.

Dominion Police Have Grand Round-up in Hastings County

Defaulters Are Being Brought In From the Bushes and Rocks—One Man Tried to Shoot the Officer.

While Hastings County has won considerable distinction as a splendid recruiting centre since the opening of the war and hundreds of her noblest boys have died with their faces to the foe, and thousands more are in the ranks at this moment driving the Huns pell mell towards Berlin; it was well known that the bushes and rocks in some of the sparsely settled portions of the country were full of defaulters.

During the last few days, Chief J. J. Graham of Ottawa, head of the Dominion police, with a number of other special officers has been in this vicinity hunting up the addresses of a number of the above mentioned gents. These gents of the forest are so busy however that it has been extremely difficult for the Chief and his men to find them at home during calling hours. However he succeeded in locating five of them some time between sunset Monday and sunrise Tuesday morning.

They are entered at the vital statistics department as Frank Cassibo, Henry Cassibo, Martin Crivea, Garett Labarge and Peter Chamberlain.

The star of the outfit, Crivea, was a khaki clad gentleman and is not unknown in military circles.

Not First Atttempt.

This is by no means his first escapade and he seems to have been the only one of the bunch who resorted to what might be termed dangerous tactics against arrest.

The parties were armed with a number of guns and a quantity of ammunition.

Crivea threatened to blow the head off the first man that dared to enter the chamber where he was with his wife and children.

He soon found, however that he was up against the real thing and though he fired several shots, luckily they went wide of their intended victims and when he found that the bullets began to beat a tattoo about him, he was willing to surrender and came down out of that.

Chief Graham showed his great pluck in the capture of this man. Crivea fired point blank at him, one of the bullets passed his head by an eye lash, so close, that for an instant he was dazed, but recovering quickly he soon had Crivea under submission.

The five men were manacled and brought to town and Tuesday afternoon were given a farewell sendoff for Ottawa and we hope ere this they are on their way to the front line trenches to do a little something for their country before the Kaiser decides to throw up his hands and quit.

Two More.

By the crowd of citizens that flocked to the C. P. R. station, one would have thought the people were out to welcome home a Victoria Cross hero.

These deserters and defaulters however, have still a chance to redeem their honour by doing their parts bravely at the front, they may even distinguish themselves by winning some of the Military decorations.

On Wednesday afternoon Dominion Officers in charge of Sergt. Gardiner, Constable Simpson, Pearn and McBurnie returned to the scene and brought in two more chaps named William Caul and Jerry Delore respectively, and from what we have been able to learn the Military authorities are determined that every defaulter and deserter will be rounded up and made to face the music. If they will not come of their own accord, and they have had lots of opportunity, they will be brought.—Tweed News.

Must Prove Charge Against Douro Man

Another Story of the Chase After Defaulters in Douro Township.

Another case of concealing an alleged defaulter was brought before the Magistrate yesterday, when John McMurray of Douro township, was charged with harbouring and employing his son, Thomas McMurray, a defaulter according to the military police. The prisoner pleaded not guilty to the charge.

It was on October 11th that the military police called at the McMurray farm. Speaking to Mr. McMurray, who was in the field, he told them that he had a boy at the front. As the police approached the house two young men who were working at a pump, ran into the side door of the house, and out the front door. The police gave chase but lost them in a forest which is not far from the house. After the father was arrested he admitted that his two sons had been there all the summer working for him.

Did not Know.

Mr. McMurray testifying in his own behalf, said he did not know that his son was a defaulter. He had military papers in his possession but they were incorrect.

"How do you know that Thos. McMurray is a defaulter?" asked Mr. O'Brien, counsel for the defence, to the military police.

"How do we know that he isn't a defaulter?" countered the military policeman.

"We have orders to arrest all suspects."

Crown Attorney Hatton contended that the onus was on the accused to prove that he was not harbouring his son.

"You arrested him," said Mr. O'Brien; "Now you have to prove that he is harbouring a defaulter."

The Magistrate took the view of the defence but gave the Crown a week to procure evidence that Thos. McMurray is a defaulter. The case will be continued next Friday.

Rock These Grates Gently

The fire-box is the heart of the range, but the grates are the heart valves of the fire-box.

If the grates fail, the fire-box cannot make good.

The Pandora grate has three bars and each bar has three working sides which gives it three times the life of an ordinary grate.

They are fitted together like the parts of a good machine.

That is why they work with minimum effort—a gentle pressure.

And you rock them gently once to clear your fire of ashes. There is no racking "shaking" with Pandora grates—just one gentle rock.

PETERBORO SIXTY YEARS AGO

In addition to the interesting account given of Peterboro in the Directory of the year 1858, there are short sketches given of the different villages in the locality. It will be noticed that the roseate promises in some cases have not materialized, while others, whose prospects at that time were seemingly less hopeful, have prospered.

THE VILLAGE OF HASTINGS.

Is situated on the River Trent at the southeast corner of Asphodel. It has an excellent sawmill, cutting 2,500,000 feet of lumber annually; and a grist mill which last year ground 25,000 bushels of wheat. It has five stores, three hotels, one tannery, two carriage factories, one waggon shop, four blacksmiths' shops, etc. There is a good Presbyterian church in the village, and a new brick school house just completed. There are good gravel roads leading to Colborne, Cobourg, Brighton and Trenton, and an excellent bridge across the Trent is being erected jointly by the councils of Peterborough and Northumberland. It is six miles from Norwood, 9 frm Percy, 8 from Westwood, and 24 from Peterborough. The village contains about 436 inhabitants, and is very rapidly increasing.

THE VILLAGE OF NORWOOD.

This village is located on the 8th and 9th concessions of Asphodel, about 18 miles from Peterborough, on lots 16, 17 and 18, of both concessions. A stream of considerable importance for hydraulic purposes runs through the village, known as the River Ouse. It contains about 500 inhabitants; has one good grist mill with two run of stones, the property of Mr. rover; two sawmills; six stores; two cabinet shops; one carriage factory; six blacksmith shops; two saddlers' shops; six taverns, tin shops; tailors and shoemakers, in fair proportion, two tanneries, etc. It has four churches—Episcopalian, Methodist, Presbyterian and Independent; and an excellent Grammar School—for the use of which an excellent brick building has recently been erected. By a proclamation issued last year, semi-annual fairs are now held in the village on the second Tuesday in March and the first Tuesday in October.

THE VILLAGE OF WESTWOOD.

This village is situated between the 2nd and 3rd concessions of Asphodel, on a branch of the River Ouse, about 16 miles S. E. of Peterboro, 10 miles east of Keene and 7 miles west of Norwood. It has a grist and oatmeal mill and a sawmill cutting about 2,000 feet of lumber a day. It contains about 100 inhabitants. It has three stores, four taverns, shoeshop, blacksmith shop, waggon shop, Presbyterian church and a post office—the oldest in the township. Near to it is the newly surveyed village of Asphodel, where a number of new buildings will be erected immediately. There is already a sawmill and a shingle factory in the village. The sawmill is capable of cutting 15,000 feet of lumber a day, and is situated on the west branch of the Ouse, by which it is driven. The Messrs. Ewing are proprietors of it.

THE VILLAGE OF WARSAW.

Is located in the Township of Dummer, about 14 miles from Peterboro. It had a large grist mill and a saw mill driven by water—the Indian River—the property of Mr. T.Choate, which was recently destroyed by fire. A sawmill has been rebuilt, and preparations made to erect the grist mill. It has four stores, two taverns, three blacksmith shops, one shoemaker, one tailor, etc. Population is about 150.

THE VILLAGE OF KEENE.

Stands on lots 13 and 14, in the 6th and 7th concessions of Otonabee. It has a flour mill, saw mill and a tannery worked by water, from the Indian River, which passes close to the village; two carriage and sleigh makers, three stores, three hotels, three blacksmith shops, three shoemakers, etc. The village is the seat of the township meetings, and is about thirteen miles from Peterboro. It is about 3 1-2 miles from the line of the Cobourg and Peterboro Railway to the "Keene station" to which carriages are sent by the hotel keepers for the mail and passengers. The population is about 400.

THE VILLAGE OF ALLANDALE.

Commonly known as "Allandale Mills," the property of Thomas Short, Esq., is located on lot 18 in the 6th concession of Otonabee, about two and a half miles from Keene, to which it is likely to become a very serious rival. There is a very fine grist and oatmeal mill, fitted up with steam power to be used in the event of the water failing, as it sometimes does; an excellent saw mill, a foundry in which much of the machinery was made, carpenter shops, in fact all the appliances of a very large industrial establishment. Near the village on lot 20, 6th concession, Mr. Lang has a carding and fulling mill and a shingle machine.

SOUTH DOURO.

Or as it is sometimes called, St. Joseph, is a small village in the Township of Douro, the principal feature of which is the Catholic Church of the township. It is about nine miles from Peterboro and has a population of about 50.

LAKEFIELD.

Is a beautiful little village situated in the township of Douro, on the banks of the Katchewanoc Lake. It is the residence of a number of young Englishmen, who have come to the country with the view of learning the art of farming or "roughing it in the bush." There is an Episcopalian church in the village, a couple of stores, and an excellent sawmill recently erected by Mr. Nathaniel Shaw, capable of cutting about 7,000,000 of lumber annually. There is also a grist mill, the property of Mr. D'Arcy. The population of the village is about 80.

VILLAGE OF BRIDGENORTH.

This village is situated on the shores of Chemong Lake, in the Township of Smith, about 6 miles from the town of Peterborough. It has one store, three hotels and a couple of sawmills, the property of S. S. Kelly and Walter Scott; the first cutting 300,000 ft. during the summer months, the latter about 500,000 feet. There are three steamboats running from the place, the "Fly" and the "Ogemah" to Lindsay, the "Peterborough" to Bobcaygeon. It is a favorite resort for picnic and fishing parties. There is now in course of construction a railroad in continuation of the Cobourg Railway to Bridgenorth, which when completed, will make it an important station for the transhipment of the lumber and produce of the rear townships. The Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton Railway Company have it in contemplation to extend their road also to Chemong Lake. It has a population of about 75.

PETERBORO SOLDIER APPRECIATES PARCELS

LIEUT. LOGAN RECEIVES PARCELS REGULARLY WHILE IN PRISON CAMP

In a recent letter from Lieut. Logan he asks his family to express his thanks to individuals and societies to whom he owes so much of his comfort in a German prison camp. Letters being limited to two per month including business ones, he is unable to write as he would wish.

To the Red Cross Society he owes the deepest gratitude. Their food parcels which are sent to every prisoner have been reaching him regularly since he was finally located at Holzminden, and have been forwarded to him from Karlsruhe where he was first interned, showing that the parcels were despatched promptly and only his being moved about prevented him receiving them until after 3 months confinement. "And they are splendid parcels" he writes, "and with the personal parcels I am absolutely O.K. Please thank especially, Miss Williams and the members of the Collegiate Auxiliary for remembering me in such a substantial way. It is mighty fine of them. And tell everyone who can to write, write. Letters are like tonics and are looked for eagerly. We are in good spirits over here and very optimistic. To George's thanks the family add, theirs and a sincere testimony to the wonderful work of the Red Cross.

LIQUOR WOULD CURE SPANISH INFLUENZA

To the Editor of the Examiner,

Dear Sir:—

Enclosed I forward you a copy of a letter published by the Mail and Emipre from one trained nurse who has testified of benefits re...liquor, used in connection with the present epidemic. Hoping you will find space in your paper, also for the benefit of the Peterboro citizens who would like to be in touch with the proper cure—not Drugs! Drugs!! Drugs!!! The letter reads as follows:

Sir:—Permit me a small space in your valuable paper regarding the great necessity of whiskey at the present time. I am a trained nurse, and wish to say the large death rate is due to the want of it. I have found patients doped up with so much quinine and strychnine and digitalis that many systems can't stand the reaction of these drugs, where if good whiskey or good brandy had been given the patient would have revived. I have attended hundreds of patients during the epidemic in Scotland some years ago, where Prof. Beaston and Professor Simpson of the Glasgow University administered whiskey and brandy in hot milk which was both food and stimulant; and there was not one death in the hundred patients I nursed. I am attending a patient at the present time who got a line and caught the malady while standing in line. She had dropsy and needs it. She dropped down on the street. Drugs in this case would kill.

Yours, etc.,

A Trained Nurse.

Why Not Insure The Payment of Your Premium?

Suppose you are thirty-five years old, and carrying $10,000 of Life Insurance costing you, say $300.00 per year, would you not like, (in case of serious accident or illness destroying your earning power) to have the payment of this premium paid for you as long as you live?

Then Read The Following:

The Sun Life of Canada will give you a further insurance of $5,000.00 if you are still insurable, and if you become totally and permanently disabled from any cause, the Company will not only relieve you of all future premiums on THIS policy during such disability, but they will guarantee to hand you a $500.00 cheque every year, which you see will pay the premiums on your $10,000.00 and in addition will give you a handsome CASH XMAS BOX each year and, nevertheless, will pay the face of your policy at maturity or death.

Many people hesitate to take out Life Insurance, lest some catastrophy should force them to give it up. Well, that bugbear is removed by the Sun Life of Canada.

A PIGEON MESSAGE SAVES A YANK'S LIFE

By FRED S. FERGUSON
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Oct. 4. (By Mail.)—This is the specific instance of how a pigeon saved a man's life.

It happened in the days before the St Mihiel salient was wiped out and while the Americans were holding the four-year-old line before Seicheprey. It was an inky black night, but patrolling was necessary, and a little group of doughboys crawled over the parapet through the wire and out into No Man's land. One of the boys carried a pigeon basket on his back. The light wicker carrier fitted between his shoulders and he scarcely noticed the weight of it. The man with the pigeon basket was assigned to go to the right of the main patrol body, with the understanding that the entire unit would meet at a specified place at a certain time.

But the barrage came down. The boche heard the movement and turned loose artillery. The American was cut off. To escape the barrage he was compelled to take cover in a position from which he knew escape was impossible. A single American moving there would be certain to bring outposts upon him. A stronger force would fight the outposts off, or possibly get back to its lines without combat because enemy outposts would not care to start trouble with superior numbers.

The American thought these things over. Then he thought of the pigeon in his basket. He scribbled a note, giving his position and asking assistance. This he slipped into the little aluminium message box on the pigeon's leg. The bird flew away.

Ten minutes later a patrol was approaching the stranded American's position. Five minutes more he was on his way back to the lines with his reinforcements.

"How did you find out where I was?" the doughboy asked the patrol leader, as they climbed back over the parapet to safety.

"Pigeon message," came the response.

"Well, I'll be darned; I just played that as an outside bet, and didn't hope to win, the doughboy countered, "but I'll sure hang close to those pigeons from now on."

What happened was that when the pigeon was released from the American's hiding place near the boche lines, it flew straight to its cote near division headquarters. The message was quickly read, and the regimental headquarters called on the telephone. Regimental headquarters called the post command in the front line, and within a couple of minutes the patrol was scrambling out to the rescue.

In addition to flying in the most difficult weather, was pigeons have displayed the stamina and "nerve" by sticking at their work even when wounded. One pigeon arrived at a certain American cote with a fiesh wound in the breast. Others have had the closest possible calls by flying shell splinters, but always they have kept to the air until they reached home.

Trained "pigeon men" are in charge of the American birds in France. Capt. D. C. Buscall of Maryland, is in charge of one pigeon corps with Lieut. J. L. Carney, of Pittsburgh, second in command. At the cotes are Sergt. Thomas J. Fulton Pittsburgh; Corp. Ernest Kockler, Chicago; Corp. Charles Block, Gary, Ind; Pte. Harry W. Olsen, Boston; Pte. Charles Eldredge, New York; Pte. Warren Hague, Newark, N. J.

HAS TY COBB MADE BASEBALL ANY BETTER?

Old Timer Says All Ballplayers Owe to Peach Their Ability to Play Better Baseball

By PAUL PURMAN

Baseball is over until after the war.

When it is resumed there will be dozens of well-known faces missing from the big league diamonds.

There will be those men in the service who will have lost the high efficiency necessary to a baseball star there will be the killed and maimed. There will men the men who evade military duty, who probably will never be allowed to play ball again.

All of this was being discussed by a group of fans and old-time players in an Eastern city a few days ago.

"There'll be a lot of faces missing," said one fan reflectively. "I don't expect to see Jack Barry back there again, or Speaker, if the war lasts long, or Gowdy, or Cobb, or a lot of them."

"I guess outside of Detroit, there won't be a whole lot of grief among the players, if Cobb doesn't come back," commented another.

Which brought the following monologue from a ballplayer who left baseball soon after the peach had arrived. To everyone present it was a new angle on Cobbism in baseball.

"I've been out of baseball a good many years, but I keep pretty closely in touch with the game all the time. I've heard all sides to the Cobb controversy and it may be true that Cobb isn't liked by a large number of ballplayers.

"But regardless of whether they like Cobb or don't like him, there isn't a man in the American League to-day that doesn't owe something to Ty Cobb.

"Cobb's advent into baseball marked a new era in the game. Cobb's baseball was new baseball. He was continually pulling something to make his opponents look like dubs and a greater part of the time he was getting away with it.

"The result was that players who had to play against Cobb were continually trying harder, playing better baseball to stop Cobb. It made better ballplayers of them. An infielder, pitcher or catcher who caught Cobb napping off a base got more satisfaction out of it than he did out of all the rest of his putouts of the game. The minute Cobb stepped to the plate every man was on his toes.

"I really believe Cobb has been responsible for the superiority of play in the American League over the National League during the last ten years.

"It doesn't make any difference what these fellows think of Cobb, they all owe him something."

Whether or not this ballplayer's reasoning was true, it's something for the fan to think about.

PREPARING TO DEMOBILIZE ARMY

Two Infantry Regiments Revolt in Austria.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BASEL, Oct. 26.—Vienna newspapers are publishing articles relative to the preparations for demobilizing the army. One newspaper says that two infantry regiments stationed at Karlowitz have revolted.

Leonard of Red Sox Pitches Only No-Hit Game of 1918 Season

Pitchers Failed to Enter Hall of Fame During Past Year.

Only one major league pitcher added his name to baseball's prewar hall of fame during the curtailed season of 1918 by flinging a nine inning no hit game. This is the smallest output of hitless laurels for many years, as there were five such performances registered last year and four in 1916.

Dutch Leonard of the Boston Red Sox was the pitcher who delivered the only no hit feat in the season that closed on Labour Day. The husky southpaw performed that feat on June 8 against the Detroit team, then clouded his reputation by retiring to a paint and putty league, leaving his team-mates to win the pennant and the world's series without his assistance.

No National League team was shut out without a hit during the year. The best the hurlers in that circuit were able to do was to hold an opposing team to one safe swat in nine innings. This was done eight times in the National and nine times in the American league. Jim Vaughn of the Cubs did it twice, once against the Cardinals and again with the Giants as his foes. No White Sox hurler broke into the one hit list last season, but the Rowlands were held to a solitary swat twice during the campaign, Perry of the Athletics and Bush of the Red Sox being the slab performers.

There were sixteen National League games in which a team garnered only two hits in nine innings, and only seven such performances in the American League. Three hit games were numerous, but not nearly as frequent as in previous seasons, partly because of the curtailed season and partly because of the decided let-down in the efforts of the players after their endeavour was declared non-essential by Secretary of War Baker. It is noteworthy that very few low hit games were recorded after July 20 in either league.

A Really Thrilling Story, But Lacking Real Hero

St. Louis, Oct. 26.—Police and army officers were considerably disturbed here two weeks ago following a gutter battle with a soldier on one side of the curb and three police officers on the other. The officers, Detective Dennis and Stangler and Patrolman Murphy were knocked out for a long count by a soldier who said he was Willie Rickey. Later the soldier admitted that he was not Rickey, but Willie Ritchie, former world's lightweight champion.

Beaten by Willie Rickey, the police officers considered themselves disgraced. Beaten by Willie Ritchie, once world's lightweight champion, though, was another story.

The fistic book was consulted. It was discovered the Willie Ritchie back in 1911, fought twenty rounds with Freddie Welsh, 20 with Jack Britton, 20 with Johnny McCarthy, 20 with Matty Baldwin, the Boston terror, who died last week, and knockout Tommy McFarland in four rounds.

AND NOW—SAD STORY

The news drifted out to the far west, to the state of Washington, and there has been a return slip. There has been an answer, an answer from Willie Ritchie, not the Willie Rickey or Willie Ritchie who put up his dukes and swatted Dennis, Stangler and Murphy, but Willie Ritchie, former world's lightweight champion.

Willie Ritchie, ex-lightweight champion, furnishes ample proof that he was not anywhere near St. Louis at the time of the recent incident. In fact Willie has not been in St. Louis since June, 1917, when he attended the Advertising club's convention here as a member of the San Francisco delegation.

The original Willie Ritchie, whose real name is G. A. Steffen, during the past year has been boxing instructor at Camp Louis, Washington State. At present, however, the former champion is in Room No. 1, officers ward, base hospital, at Camp Gordon, Atlanta, Ga. He went to Camp Gordon to take a course of instruction in bayonet drill and physical training, but became afflicted with the influenza according to a letter received from him.

MR. FARMER Which Field Pays Best?

UNPRODUCTIVE FARM

PRODUCTIVE

Land Clearing Made Easy with C.X.L. Stumping Powder

The above pictures represent the same field before and after using C.X.L. Stumping Powder

With the increased demand for Agricultural Products, caused by the War, which is now devastating the European Countries, Mr. Farmer, can you afford to have unproductive land? Every acre of tillable land will be required to offset the great falling off in agricultural products, and it is up to you, Mr. Farmer, to take advantage of this situation.

C. X. L. STUMPING POWDER will enable you to clear your land quicker and cheaper than by any other method and place you in an immediate position to reap a revenue from land which has heretofore been unproductive.

C. X. L. STUMPING POWDER is an explosive manufactured expressly for the farming trade; it is less dangerous to handle than Dynamite and more effective for agricultural purposes. It has been rightly termed by thousands of satisfied users as "The Farmer's Friend".

To-day time on the farm means money just as it does elsewhere. Therefore, why spend hours digging and pulling at stumps and boulders when a few sticks of C. X. L. STUMPING POWDER will do the trick in a few minutes. The progressive farmer no longer plows and reaps around stumps and boulders; the money spent in repairs on machinery and harness will offset the cost of clearing that field which has meant so much hard work to get under crop and harvest. This is your opportunity now when the markets of the world are pleading with you to produce more.

How about that field that is not producing the crops you expect from it? Have you ever stopped to think that you have been turning over the same depth of soil year after year, coaxing the land with fertilizers, to half a crop? What about the valuable plant food contained underneath the plow line? Try a few pounds of C. X. L. STUMPING POWDER on that field, bore holes to a depth of 2½ to 3 feet, at intervals of from 10 to 20 feet apart, and explode half of a cartridge of C. X. L. STUMPING POWDER in each, thus loosening up that fertile subsoil and giving your seed a chance to get below the worn out top soil to benefit from the valuable volume of plant food stored there.

The leading Agricultural Colleges of the world are now advocating subsoiling with Dynamite. Experiment on an acre this year and note results.

Tree Planting with Dynamite has long since passed the experimental stage. Leading orchadists of Canada to-day are planting fruit trees in holes exploded with C. X. L. STUMPING POWDER instead of in spade dug holes. The subsoil is loosened up and enables the roots of the trees to immediately expand in search of nourishment and not remain cramped up in a limited space.

Dig your ditches with C. X. L. STUMPING POWDER and do in one day the work it would otherwise take you a week to accomplish with pick and shovel.

Now, Mr. Farmer, the above are all common sense facts, and can you afford to continue cultivating land strewn with stumps and boulders, getting only half a crop and spending a portion of your profits on repairs and renewal of equipment, or letting valuable land under stumps and boulders lie idle? Figure this out for yourself and see if you are getting the revenue you are entitled to. Send us a trial order for a 50 lb. Box of C. X. L. STUMPING POWDER and judge for yourself the benefits you will derive from this, the greatest of Labor saving agents for the Farmer to-day.

C. X. L. Long Term Contracts Are to be Things of the Past

A Horrible Example of the Federal League Period of Legal Baseball Architecture.

If the major leagues ever organize a museum of base ball they would do well to obtain from Jake Daubert his famous five-year contract with the Brooklyn club. This famous document—a horrible example of the Federal league period of legal base ball architecture—has just expired, after bringing into the Daubert bank account a little less than $43,000. The full amount called for was $45,000, but the cessation of league competition on September 1 cost Daubert something over $2,000 This something has brought his contract into the limelight, for Daubert sued Ebbets and the McKeevers for the amount which the government's order kept the first baseman from collecting. The Daubert document stated.

"The club agrees to pay the player or the seasons of 1914, 1915, 1916, 1917 and 1918, beginning on or about the 14th day of April in each of said years, and ending on or about the 14th day of October in each of said years, a salary at the rate of nine thousand ($9,000), dollars a season."

In addition, the contract had eliminated from it the ten day's notice of releas clause, nad also had inserted therein the following:

"It is further understood and agreed that the services of the party of the second part shall not be released, as signed, traded or transferred, without the consent of the party of the second part."

It is quite safe to say that the reconstruction in the big leagues will include a determination among the owners to do away with contracts such as that which Daubert got. Long term documents of any kind are done for and the game will be better for their elimination.

Last winter the sporting world, especially the boxing game, was dealt three hard successive blows when death claimed such famous characters of the squared circle as John L. Sullivan, Terry McGovern and Charley White. This fall the current epidemic of Spanish influenza has already taken from the world of sports nearly a score of men who were well known by all followers of sports. Of nearly every branch of professional and amateur sports, leading figures have fallen victims to the plague. The turf, ring, diamond, gridiron, speedway and track are mourning the loss of one or more of their set. Newspaper men whose duty it was to write about sporting events have fallen victims to the plague.

Cad Doggett, famous trainer, and up to the day of his death one of the leading figures on the American turf died after an illness lasting but a few days. Jim Stewart, the Brooklyn heavyweight pugilist, died suddenly at Camp Dix. At the time of his death Stewart was a boxing instructor at the camp. A few days after he passed away the news that Matty Baldwin, Boston lightweight, had fought and lost his last battle, spread through the sporting world. Two days ago Terry Martin, the veteran welterweight, died of pneumonia following an attack of influenza.

Baseball has lost Harry Glenn, formerly a member of the St. Paul club of the American Association. At the time of his death Glenn was a private in the aviation mechanic school in St. Paul. Dave Roth, former pitcher of the White Sox and the Baltimore club of the New International league, died of the Spanish plague at his home in Baltimore. Last summer Roth was a member of the Sparrows Point team and was employed in the plant of the Bethlehem Steel company.

Eddie Martin and Chandler Richter baseball writers of Boston and Philadelphia, respectively, both succumbed to pneumonia following attack of the epidemic. Martin died two days after his wife, and a double funeral was held.

James Skip McCarthy and Wooley, both of whom gained fame on the gridiron, could not survive the plague. McCarthy several years ago was a member of the Fordham football eleven and was considered the best player who ever wore a maroon uniform. Wooley captained the Wesleyan team.

From the ranks of the daredevil automobile drivers has dropped Johnny Aitken. Few speed contests were held in this country without him piloting a car. Jack Ryan, former distance runner of the Boston A.A. died at Fort Slocum several days ago. Last year Ryan won the senior national indoor championship and two-mile indoor championship of the A.A.U.

CANADA

DAYLIGHT SAVING ENDS SUNDAY October 27th at 2 A.M.

ORDINARY time will be resumed throughout Canada on Sunday, October 27th. At 2 o'clock in the morning of that day, all official clocks are to be put back one hour.

It is suggested that all private clocks and watches be put back one hour on the night previous.

Please note that the Gillette Safety Razor will continue to save time by day or by night, without change.

Daylight saving in its first year has proved a great convenience and a complete success. People who were inclined to be sceptical are now convinced of its merits. Like the Gillette Safety Razor, actual experience with it has banished indifference and opposition and given place to enthusiastic appreciation.

CONSERVER OF TIME

PITHY POINTS IN THE WIDE REALM OF SPORT

How many of the present crop of professional baseball players are likely to be back in the game when the time comes to resume after the war depends on how long the war lasts. A year of closed parks will make no appreciable difference in the playing supply. There will be enough seasoned players to insure quality in getting the game going again quickly. Only a few would drop out, and there would be an abundance of material with old and new, to furnish class for restart and class to hold with the old and the new, to furnish class for the restart and class to hold until places can be filled from a recruit crop. A year's absence from the diamond won't hurt the playing skill of anybody who wasn't ready to drop out anyway. Skill, knack, aptitude in baseball last a long time, and most of the returning players will have the youth, suppleness and recuperativeness to be back quickly in the old stride. Moreover there will be enough new faces to add zest to the game after the war time hiatus.

Meanwhile, there is an important question for the magnates to mull over. It concerns the principle of the game, for the game's sake. There has been a shortage of this, and in what disregard there has been for the principle players in their conduct on the field have been no more remiss—they have been steadily improving, in fact—than club owners in their conduct of the game. Players to a large extent will take their cue from club owners and if in planning for the game's resumption, its welfare, and how to conduct it along better ethical standards the need of the game for the game's sake spirit is kept dominantly in mind by the club owners, which on the part of all of them has not been the case in the past, baseball will emerge from its coming arid period on a firmer basis than ever before.

The true indictment has been brought against magnates, true as regards some of their number, if not all, that the commercial side of the game has been very prominent. But are all baseball writers guiltless? Those who are not do their share in placing the commercial above the sporting aspect of the game, and that sometimes while criticizing the magnates for the very same thing. Of course, there are legitimate news stories of the finance of the game. It is the newspapers' place to print the story of the $50,000 deal, for instance, though on the magnates' part the $50,000 is bad stuff, bad for the game. All such frenzied business is commercialism run rampant. So, too, on the writers' part, repeated exploitation of salary lists, profits, big wages to stars, gate receipts, and the like, is not particularly interesting reading and does not do the game any good. For the most part there is no occasion for it, no demand for it. Let us have more of how the star stands at the plate and swings his bat and less of how much he is paid for it.

Sport writers who have been at it for ten or fifteen years have the most pleasant recollections of Capt. Palmer E. Pierce, now Brigadier General Pierce, member of the General Staff of the United States Army "Captain" Pierce was, and doubtless still is, a stanch friend of amateur sport. When stationed at West Point, he looked after his football. He was a leading spirit in the organization of the National Intercollegiate Athletic Association, which body has done much to put college sport, particularly football, on a better plane. He was prominent in bringing about reforms in the rules of football and therefore in saving that game when it was in danger of general condemnation. Since he was a captain at West Point, I believe he has served at Leavenworth and in the Philippines.

BAN JOHNSON TO ADVISE AMERICAN LEAGUE OWNERS NOT OPERATE NEXT YEAR.

CHICAGO, Oct. 24—President B. B. Johnson, of the American League said that he would vigorously oppose any suggestion to resume major league baseball before the season of 1920.

"Let's win the war first and then play ball," was his terse comment. "I am going to urge American League club owners when they hold their annual meeting in December, that they put aside all thought of operating next year."

Mr. Johnson said: "I believe that now is the time for everyone in the country who is a genuine patriot to put his shoulder to the wheel and not think of anything that does not have to do with winning the war.

"Personally, I believe the war will be won before the end of next year, yet there is no reason why, I, for instance, or anyone else, should leave undone a single act that in any way will hasten the conclusion of the struggle."

OBITUARY

RICHARD CAVENAGH.

On Saturday, October 19th, at 2.30 p.m., Mr. Richard Cavenagh passed away at his home in Douro, at the age of 65 years. Deceased had been ill for some time, and his death was not unexpected.

He leaves to mourn his loss besides his sorrowing wife, five daughters, namely, Mrs. Frank McCarthy of Peterborough, Mrs. T. Forsythe of Douro, Kathleen, nurse-in-training, Guelph, Bessie and Irene at home, and four sons, Valentine of Buffalo with the U.S.A. army, Jack, who has lately returned from service in France, Thomas and Kenneth at home.

The funeral took place Monday morning at 9.30 to St. Joseph's church and cemetery.

The pall-bearers were his three sons, Jack, Thomas and Kenneth and two son-in-laws, F. McCarthy and T. Forsythe, and brother-in-law, Michael O'Brien of Peterborough.

MR. WATSON BUTCHER

Watson Butcher, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. M. T. Butcher of this city, passed away at his home, near Kincaid, Sask., Friday morning, after an illness of typhoid fever, of eight weeks' duration. He leaves his wife and brothers, William and Charles of Kincaid, his parents and his sisters Olive of Peterboro, and Mrs. James Campbell of Gravenhurst, also relatives and many friends at Peterboro to mourn his loss.

JAMES FAGAN.

The many friends of Mr. James Fagan formerly of 413 Sheridan street, Peterborough, will learn with deep regret of his sudden death at St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto, from bronchial pneumonia. The deceased young man had gone to Toronto with his parents to reside only a few weeks ago, when he was taken to the hospital and died after a week's illness. He was well liked by all who knew him, possessing many good qualities which had won for him a large circle of friends both here and in his new home. He was eighteen years old and came to Peterborough six years ago, where has lived until a short time ago. There are left to murn his loss his father, mother, one sister and one brother overseas, Mr. and Mrs. Fagan had buried their five year old boy just a week ago.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE DONALD DENHAM

The remains of the late Donald Power Denham only son of Mr. W. H. Denham were laid at rest yesterday afternoon in the Little Lake Cemetery. Service conducted by Reverend Canon Davidson was held at the house, 475 Hunter street at 2:30 also at the cemetery. An unusually large number of beautiful floral offerings testified the great sympathy felt for Mr. and Mrs. Denham in their bereavement.

The pall bearers were Messrs. Gerald Wood, Harold Hall, R. Munro, Fred Roy, Herbert Rush, Gordon Matthews, Charles Robertson and Douglas Carlisle.

FUNERAL TOOK PLACE ON TUESDAY

Mrs. James McLean, Mount Pleasont, widow of the late James McLean, died on Monday, October 21, in her 86th year.

The pall-bearers were her four sons and two sons-in-law, Mr. William Greig and Mr. M. Rosenberg, of this city.

Besides many grand-children and great-grand-children, the following children survive: W. J. McLean, Toronto; Mrs. W. G. Marsh, Richmond Hill; T. W. McLean, Port Perry; Herbert McLean and Mrs. William Greig, Mount Pleasant; A. P. McLean, Winnipeg.

Mrs. McLean, who lived all her life in Mount Pleasant, was ill for only a few days. She and her husband were married 62 years.

The funeral took place on Tuesday, October 22, to Emily Presbyterian cemetery, Rev. Mr. McInness officiating.

Military News

In view of the great scarcity of paper of all descriptions, orders have been issued to officers commanding to have all newspapers, others than those actually in use, stored in the quarter-master's stores. These will be collected monthly.

Interred Here.

The remains of Pte. York, who died in the Mowat Hospital on Wednesday, were removed from the undertaking parlors of R. J. Reid to the Grand Trunk station at noon yesterday. The band and gun carriage of the R. C. H. A. accompanied the remains, which are to be interred in Peterboro.

Great Care of Men.

Great care is being taken by the military authorities to maintain the physical efficiency of the men during the continuance of the epidemic, and this very fact has an important relation to the small number of the men in uniform who are victims of the disease. Provision has been made for the training of all men who come in contact with isolated cases of infectious diseases in all subjects without interruption. The training of men undergoing dental treatment will not be relaxed. In the majority of cases it is considered that these men should be able to continue their training, and steps are to be taken to ensure that this is carried out.

A parade of all the troops of the Kingston garrison is to be held on Monday evening in connection with the campaign for the Victory Loan.

Victory Loan Campaign Opens on Monday Next

Chimes Will Herald Opening of Campaign in Peterboro.

Peterboro's share in helping along victory, by buying Victory Bonds, will start on Monday morning at 9 o'clock, when the five teams will set out to cover the city. The chimes will ring to herald the opening of the campaign, and the manufacturers of the city have promised to have the whistles blow. This year the workers are endeavouring to raise the percentage from last years figures to one in five and hope to reach one in three. The progress of the teams in doing this will doubtless be interesting.

For the convenience of those who cannot wait for a canvasser to call upon them, men appointed by the government will be waiting at the government headquarters, 168 Hunter street. The government staff will be glad to give all information in connection with Victory Bonds.

The factories have all been thoroughly organized for an internal canvass.

SALE OF HORSES IN SOUTH MONAGHAN

One Team Was Valued at $600.00.

That the increasing use of motor trucks has not a very depressing effect on the price of heavy draft horses, was made very plain a few days ago by a sale of horses in South Monaghan.

Mr. Morrison, the well known horseman of Concession two, lot 10, of that township, sold to Mr. Ludgate, of Parry Sound, five horses for which he obtained the handsome sum of $1200. One team was valued at $600.

TO FACILITATE EQUAL DISTRIBUTION OF COAL

FUEL CONTROLLER MAY STOP OR RESTRICT USE OF ANTHRACITE.

OTTAWA, Oct. 26.—Regulations to facilitate the equitable distribution of anthracite coal in each community in Canada have just been approved by order in council, at the instance of C. A. Magrath, Fuel Controller.

These regulations are devised to prevent disproportionate deliveries of anthracite to large consumers at times when the ordinary householder cannot be supplied. The Fuel Controller is given the right to prohibit entirely, or to limit in any manner he may deem advisable, the use of anthracite coal in any building. This does not apply to private residences using less than forty tons of coal annually.

Whenever the Fuel Controller decides that it is in the public interest at certain points to give effect to the regulation above outlined, he will issue a formal order through the local Fuel Commission of any city or town within his province. In the absence of such official, the Administrator may notify any consumer to the same effect.

By a RED CROSS WORKER
(Written for the United Press

Paris, Oct. 1. (By Mail.)—It was a young army doctor I met at a "social evening" who said to me:

"I wonder if you Red Cross people couldn't do something for a chap we've got down at the Hotel Ste. Anne? He's managed to get on the soft side of all of us, but there isn't a thing we can do for him. You see, he had been ten or fifteen years in the regular army, and when the outfit was booked to go to France, they decided he was too old and there was something the mater with his heart. So they gave him his discharge. He was all broken up about it, because ever since our declaration of war, it appears he had just been living to get to France with 'the boys.' Well, he found when they were going, and stowed away on the transport, hoping they would relent when they got over here. For ten months he has been hanging about without a cent of pay. He takes on so when they try to send him back, that I guess the officials are letting things drag along in the hope the old boy will kick off before they can get him transportation home. He just can't do enough for the boys who come in from the front. The fellows pass him a bit of change now and then, of course he gets his meals free at the army canteen He has no right to the uniform, but no one has the heart to take it from him. Besides it wouldn't do, for he hasn't anything else to wear. We can't give him work in our hospitals, because he isn't in the army, but there are lots of things he could do, and he's crazy for a job with the soldiers."

A day or two later, I dropped in at the Hotel Ste. Anne, and asked for the man who had stowed away on the transport. Presently they produced him, and the sight of him warmed my heart. For anything more pure Yankee than his lean, keen, kindly face would be hard to imagine.

"The Red Cross needs a man in one of its military hospitals," I said, "a man who will tend fires and do odd jobs of plumbing."

"That's me," he said.

So now the stowaway has his heart's desire—working with "the boys" and wearing his uniform unmolested, and also, incidently feeling that he, too is "doing his bit."

Mother Burdick Stopped an Army

By FRANK J. TAYLOR
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Oct. 3. (By Mail.)—"Mother" Burdick, the little Texas woman who invented "shrapnel cake" and won the heart of every doughboy who flocked into the little Salvation Army hut for cake and doughnuts and pie, has a new stunt which delights the soldiers.

It is the "all night chocolate service."

Recently a new division suddenly appeared in "Mother" Burdick's area, or rather the first units of it appeared. They were going to the front, the first doughboys told her. She was business at once. Calling "Pa" Burdick and her other assistants, "Mother" Burdick got pots of chocolate on the stove at once. I was then fairly late at night

Then "Mother" Burdick went out to find the general commanding the division. In the dark, it was pretty hard to locate the general, but she finally cornered him. He was surprised. Being a new-comer in France, with the new division he had never heard of the Salvation Army women.

"Mother" Burdick told him in a few words, ending with, "We've already put every pot we have on the stove full of chocolate. When one is emptied we'll make more. Those boys should never go to the front without each one having a cup of chocolate. I want to stop them in companies just long enough to fill their cups as they go by the hut down the road."

The new general was not used to being talked to in that way, and it was hardly within campaign orders to stop men in companies for chocolate. But the general had brought his men a long way that evening and they had farher to go before morning. He knew how hot chocolate would brace the boys.

So he gave the order for groups to stop one by one for rest at the Salvation Army hut, as they passed through. Then the general stopped himself for a cup of hot chocolate They worked all night at "Mother" Burdick's hut, and two other huts nearby assisted so that more than 15,000 cups of chocolate were given to the boys that night.

Many Cases of Mutiny Occur Among Disaffected Enemy

Several Drafts of New Soldiers Have Refused to Go to the Front in Past Three Months—Vigorous Measures are Ordered—But Observers Say Foe Not Yet Licked.

LONDON, Oct. 28.—The German armies should not be considered as definitely and finally beaten, military observers here say. Allied soldiers who are fighting their way forward in the face of great enemy resistance know that the enemy is not broken and that much heavy fighting probably will have to be faced. At the same time reliable reports continue to reach London of increasing disaffection among the German soldiers. This disaffection and lack of discipline has led to actual mutiny in many cases. Several drafts of new soldiers have refused to go to the front in the past three months and they have been taken there by force in small batches.

Late in July the German War Ministry issued an order which has just reached London, that most vigorous measures "must be imposed" on the recalcitrant troops. The order adds: "In all quarters cases of insubordination have occurred. The troops obey neither orders nor instructions and they have often even offered resistance and assaulted their superiors.

"The essential point is that no man shall at any time feel free from all supervision. If necessary, resistance may be broken by force of arms. Requests for assistance are to be sent by wire."

Tar and Feathers, Kidnaps and Boycotts for Farmers

Weapons Against Farmers' Parties in Western States—But They Win—What of Ontario?—How are Chances of New Move Here After Its Initial Victory?

What are the chances of the new farmers' movement in Ontario, which is going around to-day with a scalp on its belt after the Manitoulin bye-election? asks the Toronto Star. How far may it go? To what extent may it cut into the older political parties?

Time alone will answer these questions, but meanwhile a glance at the Western American States may give some indication of what might happen.

The story from out there is exciting. It involves tar and feathers, kidnapping, boycotting, arrests, indictments, and all sorts of sensational events which make it look as if the farmers' successes have preyed on their opponents' minds and led them to rather ridiculous methods of fighting them. The violence of the conflict shows how grim it is, and how vitally it is affecting the people of these States.

It started in North Dakota in 1915, with the formation of the National Nonpartisan League, organized by the farmers as a protest against existing economic and political conditions. In former years, the farmers used to send delegations to the legislature asking for redress, but they were practically told to "go home and slop the hogs." They rather tired of being confined exclusively to this occupation, put their heads together, organized the Nonpartisan League, and nominated candidates for the governorship and other offices.

The Fun Begins.

Then the excitement began. League organizers were arrested; they were forbidden to hold meetings in certain places; boycotts were started by merchants against them; banks refused to cash cheques of depositors for fees paid to League organizers. In spite of these obstacles, probably because of them, the farmers went ahead more ardently than ever, with the result that their league swept the State, elected their candidate for Governor, and secured control in the Legislature and the executive. The Governor's name is Frazier; he was a working farmer when he was given the nomination.

After two years in power, practically all the organization's candidates were nominated again in the primaries this autumn.

North Dakota, of course, is overwhelmingly agricultural; 89 per cent. of its population is either on the farms or in towns of less than 2,500 population. Not only is the movement spreading in similar agricultural States such as South Dakota, Idaho and Montana, but it is also making its way eastward to Minnesota Iowa and Wisconsin, which have more varied interests.

In Minnesota Too.

In Minnesota, the opposition to the farmers' movement is as strenuous as it was in North Dakota. Organizers have been tarred and feathered, and warned out of counties, and there has been a general "hubub." At the recent primaries, although the League did not succeed in nominating its candidate for Governor, it did poll 150,000 votes, which is ten times what was considered possible a year ago. A majorty of the men it endorsed for the Legislature were nominated, and it looks as if they will at least hold the balance of power in the new Legislature.

In Iowa theer is the same story Organizers have been warned to keep out of certain counties; members have been kidnapped at night and taken to distant places, where they have been compelled, under pressure, to sign pledges of withdrawal from the organization. The movement seems to thrive on such opposition and grows apace.

In all these States it is not only the political parties which have been working against the newly rising order, but many of the business interests as well. Up to the present they have not been able to scotch or to kill the movement.

HISTORY OF PAPERS FROM ANCIENT TIMES

The first newspaper came into existence when written accounts of the Imperial armies of Rome were sent to the generals in commond of all parts of the provinces.

In 1566 the first official news-sheet were published in Venice. They were written by hand and exhibited in public places, people paying the small coin of a gazzetta to read them. Hence the name.

The Church, averse to all diffusing of knowledge, tried to impede this source of education, and Pope Gregory prosecuted the editors.

The oldest form of newspaper in England was in the beginning of the reign of James II, the so-called 'Newsletters,' written by hand, and sent by post to subscribers in the country. In 1907 the first daily paper, the 'Daily Courant,' was issued.

The oldest of the London daily papers, the "Morning Chronicle," appeared in 1769, edited by the famous Woodfall. The 'Morning Post' is the oldest of the existing morning papers It was found in 1772 followed about 1788 by the first daily evening paper, the 'Star.'

The 'Times' first appeared in 1788 as a continuation of the 'Daily Universal Register,' and its originator and owner, Mr. John Walter, succeeded in 1814 in printing the 'Times' by steam power.

In 1854 the 'Daily News' was founded with the help of Dickens, and it was the first paper to lower its price from 6d to 3d.

A Victory Loan

Q. What is the Victory Loan, 1918? A. It is Canada's second Victory Loan and fifth war loan.

Q. What is a victory bond? A. It is the promise of the Dominion of Canada to repay the lender the sum named upon it at the time stated.

Q. What security stands behind this bond? A. The entire assets and wealth of the Dominion of Canada.

Q. When was the last Victory Loan raised. A. In November, 1917 when $420,000,000 was subscribed.

Q. What became of that money? A. It has been used to prosecute Canada's part in the war and to finance and carry on great industries at home.

Q. For example? A. Millions were spent in raising, equipping and sending forth the Canadian reinforcements.

Q. How was the money spent at home? A. In many ways. The British Government was given large credits and out of these great orders were placed in Canada for munitions, wheat, spruce, salmon, and other things needed by the army.

Q. Why did Great Britain need these advances from Canada? A. They wer needed to offset Britain's advances to Canada in army expenses overseas.

Q. How does the loan affect the people of Canada? A. Without it our war effort would collapse, our industries would suffer a great breakdown, our manufacturers and farmers alike would lose their foreign market.

Q. What has the loan done for the farmer? A. It has bought the greater part of the wheat crop, and provided a market at good prices for his dairy and animal products.

Q. What would have happened to these products without the loan? A. Most of the wheat would have been unsold, the price would have been greatly reduced, and the cheese and bacon would have been a drug in the market.

Q. Has the Loan established any new industries? A. It has revived ship-building and created new and bustling ship-yards on the shores of the St. Lawrence and the Great Lakes. It has brought into being great plants for the making of aircraft.

Q. What do these mean to the country? A. The employment of thousands of well-paid men and women and their development into highly skilled workers.

Q. Does the Loan reach widely in the distribution of the money? A. It reaches virtually everybody in Canada. All the great industries are benefitted, while the financial and mercantile classes all reap their share as middlemen.

Q. Why is it necessary to raise the Loan in Canada? A. Because there is no other place to raise it. Our Allies are burdened to the limit, and we must carry our own load.

Q. Why is Germany fighting? A. To dominate the world and crush civilization under her cruel militarism. General Von Bernhardi wrote years ago: "Our next war will be fought for the highest interest of our country and mankind. World power or down fall will be our rallying cry."

Q. Why is Canada fighting? A. To save herself and civilization from this dastardly attack on the world's liberty.

Q. What part has money in this fight? A. While armies of men are indispensable, no country can make war without "silver bullets."

Paper Controller About to Order Cutting Off of Unpaid Subscriptions.

AT a public hearing in Ottawa last week in connection with paper conservation, the Paper Controller for Canada intimated that regulations about to be issued would include one to the effect that:

Publishers of daily newspapers must cease sending their newspapers to subscribers three months in arrears unless subscriptions be definitely renewed and all arrears fully paid.

The reason for this regulation of the Paper Controller is that it is the practice of some publishers to send their newspaper until ordered stopped, and in cases of removal from that city very often the paper is continued at a loss, in which case there is virtual loss of paper. It is to prevent paper waste that the new regulation has been decided upon.

The manufacture of paper consumes labor, wood, coal, chemicals and transportation facilities, and every ton of paper saved means just so much more labor, raw materials, chemicals, fuel and transportation available for urgent war needs. For these reasons the Government insists that paper shall be saved, and proposes that only those who pay for their publications shall receive them.

Under these regulations The Examiner will have no choice in the matter of dealing with subscriptions in arrears for over three months.

You need The Examiner, and we want to continue sending it to you. So, if your subscription is in arrears please pay up at once to prevent a discontinance of your subscription, in compliance with the ruling of the News Print Commissioner.

THE WIFE

BY JANE PHELPS

Brian Accepts the Fact That Ruth is Working, But is Angry.

CHAPTER XXIII

Ruth went immediately to work on the plan left with her. She became so absorbed that she neither saw nor heard La Monte when he came up to her desk.

"You have an hour for luncheon, Mrs. Hackett," he said, smiling at her start of surprise.

"I never thought of luncheon. And I don't know where to go. I am not a New Yorker, you know. If I were I reckon I'd know my way about better."

Her soft southern drawl delighted La Monte.

"There is a quiet, refined little place just around the corner on the side street. A sort of lunch and tea room. The food is very good. I often take my wife there when she comes down town."

So he was married. Someway she never had thought he might be. In a way, she was glad. It would be comfortable to be associated with a man whose wife occasionally called at the shop.

Ruth thanked him, and in a few moments went out to find the tea room he had told her about.

When she had gone he picked up the plan she had been working upon. He glanced at it then looked more closely.

"Perfect! absolutely perfect!" he said aloud, just as Mr. Mandel appeared on the floor.

"What is so perfect, La Monte?" he asked, reaching for the large sheet of paper on which Ruth had outlined her ideas of what she thought would make the room attractive.

"Gad, you're right! Its a scheme of coloring I never should have thought of trying. Odd, too, for it is just the right thing for not only that particular room, but for the house." Then he passed on. Not even his confidential clerk, would he show just how wonderful he thought Ruth was, or how delighted he was at his "find," as he had called her in his thoughts.

The afternoon passed happily and swiftly. Among Ruth's duties were those of talking with, and advising, customers. She saw that she would have no idle minutes; yet, when five o'clock came and she prepared to leave, she was far more rested than when she left home in the morning—the unwashed dishes the necessary dinner, to get to the apartment in time for Brian's homecoming on her mind.

She took a car. She would get off at the market and carry her dinner in with her, just as Mrs. Murphy, the janitress did; just as she had been doing since she married Brian.

She bought a steak. It was getting late and she must not keep Brian waiting for his dinner, the first night she was employed. He would have reason, then, to find fault.

By the time she had taken off her street clothes and pared her potatoes, it was time to set the table. There could be no dishes washed until after dinner. Well, never mind, she would wash them up all at once, or, if she could she would get Mrs. Murphy to do them.

Just as the steak was ready, Brian came in. He glanced quickly at her before he said, a happy ring in his voice:

"Still on the job, aren't you? I thought you would be," and he kissed her fondly. "I was pretty much of a crab this morning wasn't I, dear, to go off the way I did? But you had me worried for fair."

"What do you mean, Brian?" Ruth had been putting on the dinner and had not quite understood all he had been saying.

"Oh, that flossy stuff about your working! As I said, you had me pretty well grouched."

"But I AM working, Brian," as she poured his tea.

"You are"—

"Yes, I am working at Mandel's, as I told you. I have been there all day. Got home about half-past five. And I am so happy, Brian! It is the most wonderful place; the most exquisite stuffs to handle in place of soiled dishes and scrubbing brushes. You must come down and see me there. Mr. La Monte (he's the head clerk) says his wife often comes." She stopped for breath, and for the first time during her long excited speech, looked at her husband.

Brian had dropped his fork, and was staring at her. Incredulity, unbelief, and anger striving for supremacy in his face.

"Why Brian, what's the matter?" her heart sinking as she noted his expression.

"Matter enough! You mean that you really went to work to-day after all I said? You knew I disapproved."

"Yes, Brian, I took the position, and have worked all day." Her joy evaporated. "If you realize how happy it has made me, dear, you wouldn't object."

"It serves me right for marrying a girl who had been pampered and allowed her own way. Please talk of something else. I don't want to hear another word about it until you come to your senses and tell me you are leaving."

"I will remember, Brian," was all Ruth said, but tears filled her eyes and overflowed down over her cheeks.

Striking Likenesses.

There are some curious coincidences in the strong likeness which has been noticed to exist between celebrities belonging to different ages. For instance, in Charles MacFarlane's "Reminiscences of a Literary Life" he describes how, meeting Shelley in the Royal Bourbon Museum at Naples, he showed him a statue of Agrippina, the mother of Nero. "I told him," he says, "that the Bonaparte family considered this the very image of their mother. When Madame Mere was in Naples, her daughter, Queen Caroline, induced her to sit by the statue, and made a large party remark on the striking resemblance." A similar coincidence between two great men of the same age was the likeness between Motley, the historian of "The Rise of the Dutch Republic," and Byron. It was so marked as to be described by the poet's wife as "most wonderful."

Ambitious.

"Such good news from my dear cousin, Corpl. Smith, in India. He writes that he is now convalescent.

"Mercy on us! What a boy he is for promotion, to be sure!"

Different.

"Hotel waiters are not at all like they used to be."

"No. Formerly you told a waiter what you wanted to eat. Now he tells you what you can have."

MOODY REBELLED.

Moving a Vote of Thanks Was Not In His Line That Night.

Dwight L. Moody during his first visit to England attended a meeting at which the Earl of Shaftesbury was chairman. The duty of proposing a vote of thanks was assigned to him and the announcement made:

"Our American cousin, the Rev. Mr. Moody of Chicago, will now move a vote of thanks to the noble earl who has presided on this occasion."

The whole thing was quite out of Mr. Moody's line. With an utter disregard of conventionality he burst upon the audience with the bold announcement:

"The speaker has made two mistakes. To begin with, I'm not the Rev. Mr. Moody at all. I'm plain Dwight L. Moody, a Sunday school worker. And then I'm not your American cousin. By the grace of God I'm your brother, interested with you in our Father's work for his children.

"And now about this vote of thanks to the 'noble earl for being our chairman this evening.' I don't see why we should thank him any more than he should thank us. When at one time they offered to thank our Mr. Lincoln for presiding over a meeting in Illinois he stopped it. He said he'd tried to do his duty and they'd tried to do theirs. He thought it was about an even thing all around."

That opening fairly took the breath away from Mr. Moody's hearers. Such a talk could not be gauged by any known standard. Mr. Moody carried his English audiences with him from that beginning to his latest labors.

The Intelligent Newcomer.

We are credibly informed that Englishmen are the greatest colonizers in the world, the greatest sportsmen in the world and the greatest outdoor people in the world. Sometimes, out in the newer parts of Canada, people are willing to argue that. A western bishop hired a new come Englishman to cook, as he was the only one in the party who could not cook, and cautioned him to be sure to wash the meat before cooking it. He did—with soap.

It was an Englishman not yet across the water who wrote to find out about the proper outfit for Canada and who inquired whether moccasins or snowshoes were regarded as the warmer for footwear.

It was an Englishman on the Athabasca river who bored a hole in a floating scow to let the water out. And yet another Englishman, when asked to set a watermark at night to determine whether or not the river was rising, carefully made a mark at the water line on the side of a floating boat.

On the whole, there seems to be a great difference between colonizers and colonists.—Saturday Evening Post.

How Absinth Is Made.

An old Moor to whom a trader tried to explain the tyrannous nature of the order forbidding the sale of absinth in Morocco took a wholly unexpected attitude.

"Absinth," he said, "is an invention of the evil one. On its roots he pours the blood of a peacock; then when the leaves begin to grow he sprinkles them with the blood of a monkey; then he dips the stalks in the blood of a bear; lastly he mingles with the juice of the plant the blood of a pig.

"So that when the faithful drinks absinth at the first glass his appetite awakes, and he arises proud as a peacock; at the second glass he becomes excited and gesticulates like a monkey; at the third he becomes quarrelsome and spiteful, like a bear; at the fourth he becomes besotted and falls to the earth and rolls like a hog in the mire.

"May Allah protect us, the order is right."—New York Times.

IN BEAUTIFUL FRANCE.

A Description of the Beauties of the Marne.

"I am sure that you never heard of Huiry. Yet it is a little hamlet less than thirty miles from Paris. It is in that district between Paris and Meaux, little known to the ordinary traveller. It consists of less than a dozen rude farmhouses, less than five miles, as the bird flies, from Meaux, which, with a fair cathedral, and a beautiful chestnut-shaded promenade on the banks of the Marne, spanned just there by lines of old mills whose water wheels churn the river into foaming eddies, has never been popular with excursionists," Mildred Aldrich wrote in 1914, in "A Hilltop on the Marne," describing her new home.

"The house stands in a small garden, separated from the road by an old gnarled hedge of hazel. It is almost on the crest of the hill on the south bank of the Marne — the hill that is the watershed between the Marne and the Grand Morin.

"From the lawn, on the north side of the house, I command a panorama which I have rarely seen equalled.

In the west the new part of Esbly climbs to the hill, and from there to a hill at the northeast I have a wide view of the valley of the Marne, backed by a low line of hills which is the watershed between the Marne and the Aisne. Low down in the valley, at the northwest, lies Ile de Villenoy, like a toy town, where the big bridge spans the Marne to carry the railroad into Meaux. On the horizon line to the west the tall chimneys of Claye send lines of smoke into the air. In the foreground to the north, at the foot of the hill, are the roofs of two little hamlets—Joucheroy and Voisins—and beyond them the trees that border the canal.

"On the other side of the Marne the undulating hill, with its wide stretch of fields, is dotted with little villages that peep out of the trees or are silhouetted against the sky line—Vignely, Trilbardou, Penchard, Monthyon, Neufmortier, Chauconin, and in the foreground to the north, in the valley, just halfway between me and Meaux, lies Mareuil-on-the-Marne, with its red roofs, gray walls and church spire. With a glass I can find where Chambry and Barcy are, on the slope behind Meaux, even if the trees conceal them."

"This is a rolling country of grain fields, orchards, masses of black currant bushes, vegetable plots—it is a great sugar-beet country—and asparagus beds; for the Department of the Seine et Marne is one of the most productive in France, and every inch under cultivation. It is what the French call un paysage riant, and I assure you, it does more than smile these lovely June mornings. I am up every morning almost as soon as the sun, and I slip my feet into sabots, wrap myself in a big cloak, and run right on to the lawn to make sure that the panorama has not disappeared in the night. There always lie—too good almost to be true—miles and miles of laughing country, little white towns just smiling in the early light, a thin strip of river here and there, dimpling and dancing, stretches of fields of all colors—all so peaceful and so gay, and so 'chummy' that it gladdens the opening day, and makes me rejoice to have lived to see it. I never weary of it. It changes every hour, and I never can decide at which hour it is loveliest."

The Murman Coast.

The landing of the Allied troops on the Murman coast would have been a subject of supreme interest to Richard Hakluyt, for in his day the coasts to the north of Norway were often visited by the seamen adventurers in their endeavors to find a northeast passage to China. In May, 1553, Sir Hugh Willoughby, "a goodly gentleman," got as far as the entrance of the White Sea and eventually landed at a suitable place on the Murman coast. Hakluyt says he was accompanied by "pilots, maisters, merchants and mariners" and had three ships "well furnished, to wit, the Bona Speranca, the Edward Bonaventure and the Confidentia." Richard Chancellor was the pilot of the Bonaventure, which ship got separated from the other two and anchored on the shores of the White Sea where Archangel now stands. From there Chancellor travelled to Moscow and returning to his ship eventually got home to London. Hakluyt in these days is particularly worth reading again on these early relations and communications with Russia, and on the daring and enterprise of the seadogs of his century.

Buildings of Salonica.

Brick is the most common kind of building material in Salonica, and in all New Greece. Wooden structures are rare, on account of the shortage of timber. Stone is little used, except for underground walls and foundations. Ordinary walls are built with both plain and hollow bricks. The former, being more solid, are generally used for the building of lower stories, while hollow bricks are commonly employed in the upper stages. The principal kind of roofing used is made of flat tiling.

When a man who has been stung on a deal says he "doesn't mind losing the money, but it's the principle of the thing he doesn't like," we usually write it down in our mind that he spells it "principal."

In "In the Matter of a Private" Kipling tells how an English soldier in India goes suddenly crazed and shoots up his regiment. Recently it happened in Peshawar barracks, and three fell dead before the lunatic himself was shot.

The Case of Bert Carter, Slacker

By BARBARA KERR

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"So you're after our wild man from Borneo, are you? Well, here he comes. Hi! Kid, get a move on you; here's a friend of yours from Hays, Kansas."

Sheriff Beardsley felt the good-humored sarcasm in the boss' tone. He had swaggered a bit; how did he know what sort of fellows ran the Mine Prop camp on the Narrow Guage? He had got off at Mineral Hot Springs and come overland with a guide and two donkeys—maybe 'twas three.

Bert, quickened his pace, came forward frankly and held out his hand. "From Hays, did you say, Jim? Well, I'm sure glad to see some one from Hays. How's everybody? What did you say your name is?"

"Sheriff Beardsley," grinning rather sheepishly into the boy's honest blue eyes. "I'm up here after a slacker. Know anything about him?"

"Search me!" replied Bert innocently, at which the men laughed.

Beardsley explained to Bert, who made no comment except that they'd counted on getting out 'some extra props; the trip would interfere.

But his camp comrades were outspoken in their disgust: "Why, anyone can see with half an eye that the kid's not more than twenty," declared the Boss, who was too fond of Bert to take it calmly. "It's simply a cooked up mess by some of those foreigners; they're combing the country for men to make up their quota."

The sheriff found himself nodding—then hastily: "Well, I was sent up here to get him, boys; so I'll have to take him along."

After two years in the mountains, with only a day off occasionally at Salida, or Moffet, for supplies, Bert was interested in everything except his forthcoming trial.

"Of course, if it's up to me, I'll go. I've had some experience; killed more snakes than any other man in camp. If I'm busy and one gets away, I just take a walk till I find one in his place. Why? Because they frighten women."

The sheriff, on arriving at Hays, recommended bail for Bert till trial day; in the meantime he loitered about the village. His father and mother had gone to South America a year ago on business; he had not been to Hays for five years, as he went from school to the mountains for his health. You'd agree that he found it; six feet in his stockings; bronzed as an Indian, with an innocent, direct gaze that was a bit disconcerting till you knew him. So when the board called "Case of Bert Carter, slacker," he arose to his feet, marched up front and looked them squarely in the eyes.

The three men looked at him with honest admiration, but Mary Marvin, the secretary, wanted Bert to feel that she disapproved of him. She was the prettiest girl in the village, the staunchest patriot, and always ready to punish slackers that came her way.

Bert could not help feeling her attitude. At first he was mildly curious as to what peeved the pretty lady, but the more he looked at her the sting of it got under his skin. He wanted to ask her outright what was wrong with him.

He told the board that he believed he would be twenty-one the third of June, 1918, but in the absence of family records, would swear to nothing. He was interested to know on what they based their accusation that he was a slacker.

To the board this seemed fair enough, but the way he said slacker made Mary want to jump to her feet and scream: "Just as you might say bread-and-sugar, mother!"

Since the board had brought him to Hays at behest of gossips, they must bring in his accusers.

Mrs. Ted Livingwood swore that he was the same age as her Rachael; Rachael was twenty-three last June. "Ra'll be obliged to her mother," snickered some one; twenty-three was getting on toward old-maidhood, here.

Mrs. Ben Hopper swore that he was the same age as Tommy; twenty-one in May; she knew, for the boys had many a time celebrated their birthdays by swimming in Big Creek. Bert smiled, then chuckled behind his hand—boys' birthdays were like Easter, movable feasts, when swimming was the celebration.

Things were hopelessly tangled—birthdays of town's contemporary children were told, as was time of establishing line fences, buying of livestock, tearing down of old landmarks—but no corroborating testimony.

Mary was in a white heat: "How can he sit there like a lump on a log and the whole town wrangling about his age?" she whispered.

The board was crazy with the futility of it, when the old editor of the Free Press walked in with a newspaper file and asked to be sworn; opening it he read: "Born, yesterday to John and Mary Carter, a fine boy. Congratulations, John." To the board: "The date is June fourth, 1897; the boy will be twenty-one June third, 1918." Without comment, he walked out.

Without further ado the board adjourned, congratulated Bert, and closed the incident, but the secretary's angry eyes held Bert. Without apparent volition he walked up to her and asked if she wished to speak to him.

"Yes, I do!" exclaimed Mary, vehemently. "How could you sit there that way? Why didn't you get up and say you'd go, anyway?"

"Why, Miss Marvin, I thought a trial was a trial. It would be queer for a man to say: 'Oh, stop it, I'll confess I'm guilty,' just to stop the fuss, wouldn't it?"

"Well, yes," Mary admitted, "but you needn't let it come to that. Why do you suppose the Lord gave you all that strength if not to defend your country?"

"Oh, why," stammered Bert, "I'll go if you want me to." But Mary had walked away, her head in the air.

Bert was puzzled. He had heard little discussion of the war. To him it was a matter of age. He'd go when called. What was the matter with the girl? He'd go ask her.

Mary hesitated, then held out her hand. "I—mother says I was rude to you today. Forgive me and I'll tell you how I feel about it."

So Bert received his first lesson in patriotism from the lips of a pretty girl, too much in earnest to remember that she was pretty; that Bert was handsome—or anything else except that she wanted him to be a soldier.

Presently Mrs. Marvin came in and Bert spent the happiest evening of his life. When he arose to go he asked and obtained permission to come again.

Returning to the Windsor, he saw a light in the Free Press office and went up to thank the editor for his kindness. He disclaimed any credit, saying that he was a friend of his family; intimated that Bert was glad not to go to war.

"Why, no, Mr. Pressman, I don't care much either way. Thought I'd go when called; but I've made up my mind to enlist. I'm not a coward." But the editor dismissed him with a curt nod, to Bert's chagrin.

His lessons in patriotism progressed till the town wondered if Bert would stay in Hays or Mary go to the mountains. Bert was sure that life without Mary was not worth living. But Mary tearfully but firmly refused him, dearly as she knew she loved him; she could not marry a man younger than herself—she was past twenty. Bert did not tell her he had enlisted, but said good-by and took the first train back to camp. A dreary journey, but more than one indifferent chap who talked to Bert had his views changed about his duty to his country.

His camp fellows met him eagerly, glad that he was back; they had missed him; had some mail for him, too.

It was a belated letter from his mother, telling him of sickness, discouragements and inability to get mail, but the paragraph that held his attention read: "You are now of draft age, my dearest son, because after you were hurt and missed school, I gave you the birthday of the baby that died, so you'll not seem so behind in school work. No one knows this, dearest, but mother and you. Do as your heart bids you."

"Heart's all right, mother dear," he whispered, kissing the letter. Then to the camp:

"Well, fellows, I came back to tell you the news. I'm engaged to the prettiest girl in Ellis county, and have enlisted in Uncle Sam's army—in Colorado—didn't want to stand in the way of any Hays patriots—so better be good to Bertie while you've got a chance."

Of course, the announcement of his engagement was a bit hasty, but Mary corroborated it when told the particulars.

TO ALL WOMEN WHO ARE ILL

This Woman Recommends Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—Her Personal Experience.

McLean, Neb.—"I want to recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all women who suffer from any functional disturbance, as it has done me more good than all the doctor's medicine. Since taking it I have a fine healthy baby girl and have gained in health and strength. My husband and I both praise your medicine to all suffering women."—Mrs. JOHN KOPPELMANN, R. No. 1, McLean, Nebraska.

This famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, has been restoring women of America to health for more than forty years and it will well pay any woman who suffers from displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, backache, headaches, nervousness or "the blues" to give this successful remedy a trial.

For special suggestions in regard to your ailment write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of its long experience is at your service.

SOMETHING NEW IN COLLARS

Sort of Second Cousin to the One Made of Celluloid Has Recently Been Introduced.

The separate starched collar was invented about ninety-two years ago by the wife of a blacksmith living at Troy, N. Y., who made one for her husband. Since then it has grown in popularity until there is probably nobody who has not worn a starched collar at some time or other. Now its popularity is on the decline again, partly on the score of comfort and partly as a result of the war.

The crux of the matter does not lie with the collar itself, though that is made from material which is useful for bandages. It's the starch that is to be saved—valuable foodstuff that ought not to be wasted on collars, says Popular Science Monthly.

A permanently stiffened collar is being introduced which is not celluloid, but is a regular fabric collar treated with a kind of varnish that makes it possible to clean it under the tap or with a damp cloth. Automobilists should be among those who appreciate this new fabric, for, in spite of road dust, it is always possible to "feel clean" in a clean collar. A collar of this kind will last from two weeks to a month.

Chinese Omens.

The Chinese people never associate dreams with lobster salad. Their artist represents dreams pictorially by means of spiral or curl, as of vapor, proceeding from the dreamer's head and broadening out until large enough to receive the figures which enter into and compose the dream.

They believe that gorillas and bears are omens of sons, and serpents and snakes of daughters. (The ladies have Grandma Eve to thank for that.) If you dream of a dwarf, things will not go well; your enterprise will stick half-way and you will be a laughing stock to all; if of sweet perfume, you will meet women and girls; of bamboos, you will become a recluse; of combs, there will be a separation; of willows, you will shortly travel, and if you dream of a broken bed some ill will befall your wife.

Many a young fellow who expected to fade and die three weeks after a sweet little girl had thrown him over has developed into a big, robust specimen of masculinity.

The movement for the standardization of the modern dances is good as far as it goes, but it should be extended to include magazine poetry, after dinner speeches and political platforms

A German scientist estimates that the human race has existed for 150,000 years. Judging by some of the news of the day, the race is certainly old enough by this estimate to know better.

There's a Double Economy in Wearing RUBBERS

OF course, rubbers save your shoes—save the valuable leather, and make shoes wear longer. That's the economy you can recognize and appreciate.

But—there's another saving when rubbers bring you and the children safely through the wet Fall and severe Winter without even a cold—when you don't have to lose a day from work or spend a cent for medicine.

Isn't that the greater economy? To guard your health—prevent you from being ill—protect the children—save your money.

Look to your rubbers—see that toes and heels are sound and free of cracks—if not, get each pair of shoes fitted with its own size and shape of rubbers. Do the same for the children. Then you'll get long wear and comfort.

Do it now—and be prepared for bad weather.

There's a style and shape for every shoe,—for men, women and children—in these six Dominion Rubber System brands, carried by the leading shoe stores:—

"Jacques Cartier" "Granby"
"Merchants" "Dominion"
"Maple Leaf" "Daisy"

These marks on Rubber Footwear distinguish a

Dominion Rubber System Product.

Ask for these brands—they give the best wear. 11

CURE FOR OLD AGE

Easy and Pleasant and Costs but Little to Try It.

A GOOD WAY TO CHEAT DEATH.

The Prescription Is to Mix Open Air and a Hobby, Shake Well and Take as Many Hours a Day or Night as Possible—The Cure In Real Life.

Old age can be cured. The prescription is a simple one. Mix open air and a hobby, shake well and take as many hours a day as possible. No one begins to age until he is bored, and the first gray hair comes when a man suddenly thinks to himself, "What's the use?" Then is the time when a hobby makes life interesting again.

There was an official on one of our great railroads who was retired at seventy. "He'll die now," said his friends kindly. But he didn't. Instead, he became interested in the wild flowers, and now he is too busy in looking for the ram's head orchid and trying to find a new station for the hart's tongue fern and tramping around in the woods and fields in all kinds of weather even to think of dying. Anyway, he would not have time until he's finished his monograph on the willows of the United States.

There is a woman in Baltimore, seventy-two years old, who years ago sought to forget a great sorrow by learning the butterflies. Her city home has become a rendezvous for entomologists all over the world and houses a famous collection. While her contemporaries are dozing their lives away in caps and easy chairs she spends her summers in the mountains and her winters in Florida with a butterfly net. Twenty-one new species to identify are her contribution to the lepidoptera, and she plans to live until the last goal of an entomologist is reached—the using of her single initial species.

An octet of men in Philadelphia, all well past their threescore years, some in business and some foot loose, belong to the same ornithological society. They are afield every day of the year, rain or shine, to watch the ever changing bird life. In the spring each prepares migrant sheets showing the arrivals of the hundred odd migrants that pass through every place every year. There is great rivalry as to who shall score the most warblers or identify the largest number of birds in one day. At present writing the oldest of the eight holds a record of seventy-five different kinds of birds seen or heard in one day between dawn and dark—one for each year of his age and one to grow on.

A man in North Carolina by the sudden death of two of his family was left alone with but little money, no friends and the cheering dictum from his doctor that he had only a year to live. To while away the few months still left to him as well as to help out his household expenses he took up the study of edible mushrooms. At the end of a year in the open he notified his indignant physician that he had become too much interested in his hobby to confirm his diagnosis. In ten years he has discovered, classified and tested 170 kinds of edible mushrooms and has published a book which is one of the standard authorities for mushroom eaters of the world.

Another septuagenarian attributes his long life to the stars. Confined to business during the day, he sought the open air at night and began to study the changing constellations and the perplexing planets. Then he found that with an opera glass he could detect their colors and reveled in the blue light of Vega, the green glare of Sirius, the rose red of Aldebaran, the flame color of Betelguese and the strange shades of other gleaming sky kings. Finally he bought a small telescope. Now, at seventy, he has published a monograph on the double stars, besides a quaint little star guide that has interested thousands in his hobby.

None of the nature studies requires much money or time. A cheap illustrated guidebook, an opera glass and, if possible, some walks and talks with an expert, and you will learn almost immediately to identify a score or more of flowers, or birds, or constellations, or mushrooms, and you will have found a hobby on which you may ride away from Death.

Try it, young men, lest you grow old. Try it, old men, before you grow tired. Escape into the open from these narrow indoor days and learn the way to where the wild folk dwell. In their land you will find the help of the hills and hope wide as the world, and strength, and youth, and happiness. Try it.—Samuel Scoville, Jr., in Lippincott's.

Across the Atlantic.

The narrowest part of the Atlantic is between Brazil and Guinea, where the ocean is only about 1,800 miles wide. From Newfoundland to Ireland, the narrowest breadth north of the equator, is nearly twice as far. From New York to the nearest point of France is nearly three times as far.

The Lesser Evil.

"It's Mr. Boreleigh. I think I'll send him word I'm out."

"Won't the still, small voice reproach you?"

"Oh, yes, but I'd rather listen to the still, small voice than to Mr. Boreleigh's."—Boston Transcript.

The most deadly foe to success in the future is the inertia which springs from self satisfaction in the success of the past.

His Complaint.

"Let me see," said the doctor as the patient walked into his office. "What is your complaint now?"

"Why, your bill is too large," was the quick and startling reply.

CHILDREN MUST BE PROTECTED

The children must be safeguarded, for, if they do survive the frequent coughs and colds, it is often with the lungs so weakened that they become chronic sufferers from bronchitis or consumption. Being composed of simple ingredients of undoubted value, Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is admirably suited as a treatment for children. It is pleasant to taste. So much so that children delight to take it on this account, as well as because of the quick relief it affords them.

ANOTHER PREJUDICE MAY BE WAR VICTIM

(By United Press.)

London, Oct. 1. (By Mail.)—Englishmen are overcoming their old-fashioned prejudice against "brainy" women, and nowadays all sorts of jobs are being tackled by women with wonderful success.

But there is one sphere which has always been open to them and which has proved more or less a failure, and that is the medical profession. The failure of women in this branch, strange to say, is the prejudice of women.

At present there is a shortage of doctors, but there are in training 2,250 female medical students. It remains to be seen to what extent English women will patronize them.

Meantime the authorities are urging expectant mothers to engage women doctors to bring their children into the world.

DRIVING AMBULANCE TOO TAME FOR "CASEY."

(By United Press.)

ROME, Oct. 6. (By Mail.) — Kenneth "Casey" Campbell wants to follow in the footsteps of his brother Douglas, the first ace among the American aviators in France. "Casey" has been attached to a Harvard ambulance unit of the American Red Cross in Italy and this unit left Rome on Saturday night "homeward bound."

But Casey means to stop off in Paris to enlist in the ranks of the American aviation corps if that is at all possible. He along with the rest of his unit has been decorated by the King of Italy for bravery at the front, but he is anxious to get a "closer up" view of hostilities than falls to the lot of the average ambulance driver.

Campbell is a member of the class of '21 Harvard and is a native of California, being a son of Prof. Campbell, astronomical instructor at Mt. Hamilton, San Jose. His brother Douglas, who was slightly hurt in a fall from his plane in France, is now recuperating in America.

Supreme War Council is Holding a Meeting for Purpose of Discussing Terms of Armistice

Premier Lloyd George Leaves for France—Enemy Reply Was Very Brief—Austria is Ready for Peace.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 28. — Germany's answer to President Wilson's latest communication says:

"The German Government has taken cognizance of the answer of the President of the United States.

"The President is aware of the far-reaching changes which have been carried out, in the German constitutional structure, and that peace negotiations are being conducted by a people's Government in whose hands rests, both actually and constitutionally, the power to make the deciding conclusions.

"The military powers are subject to it.

"The German Government now awaits proposals for an armistice, which shall be the first step towards a just peace, as the President has described it in his proclamation.

(Signed) "SOLF."

ALLIED WAR COUNCIL TO MEET.

LONDON, Oct. 28.— It is understood in authoritative quarters that the Allied Governments will not reveal their armistice terms until Germany has replied to President Wilson's last note.

Premier Lloyd George and Foreign Secretary Balfour, accompanied by naval and military officers, have gone to France.

QUICK REJOINDER.

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28 — Germany's quick rejoinder to President Wilson's last note was rather unexpected here, and pending receipt of the official text through the Swiss Legation, comment was withheld. Generally, however, the note was not regarded as one requiring an answer. The diplomatic situation is just where it was when President Wilson informed the German government that its request for an armistice and peace had been transmitted to the Allied governments. The next step expected was submission of terms of armistice to Germany.

An announcement from London that Premier Lloyd George and the Foreign Secretary had left for France with naval and military advisers foreshadowed an early meeting of the Supreme War Council at Versailles. While military and naval members of the Council are drawing terms of an armistice, which will be tantamount to surrender by Germany, political representatives of the Entente powers are expected to discuss individual peace terms of their governments with a view to formulating a complete programme to be presented if Germany accepts the terms of the armistice.

OPINION DIVIDED.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Oct. 28.— London newspapers are divided in opinion regarding Germany's reply. "The note is virtually an unqualified acceptance of President Wilson's demands," says the Chronicle. "It carries the situation no further."

The Mail declares: "President's refusal to believe the Kaiser and Company has not been met."

"Germany's new position warrants us in believing that the peace note is not only in sight, but within reach," was the opinion of the Daily News.

A BRIEF REPLY.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Oct. 28.—"The brevity of the German reply to President Wilson's last note is a measure of significance," says the Daily News. "President Wilson's note put an end to further argument. It is due to Dr. Solf, German Foreign Secretary, to say that his note is precisely what the occasion demanded "If peace, as the new posture of Germany warrants us in believing, is coming within reach," the newspaper continues, "there must be no delay in taking steps to end hostilities. There is no justification in fighting on for what can be had for the asking. The terms of the armistice must be rigorous, but must not be needlessly so."

The Chronicle says: "The German reply is in effect an unequalified acceptance. Nothing remains but for the associated powers to announce without delay the programme of naval and military measures which the armistice necessitates. The Daily Mail hopes and believes the Allies "will not do anything so foolish" as to immediately disclose the terms upon which they are willing to grant an armistice.

READY AND WILLING.

Special to The Examiner:

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 28.—Austria in her reply to President Wilson, accepts all views expressed by the President in his note of October 18. Austria says she is willing and ready, without waiting the result of other negotiations, to negotiate peace and an immediate armistice on all Austro-Hungarian fronts.

"A DIRTY TRICK."

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Oct. 28.—A Copenhagen despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company, quotes Maximilian Hardon,

THE FIGHTING IN BELGIUM— This map of the sector around Valenciennes shows the scene of the present desperate battle. Maing, captured by the British, is to be seen a little below Valenciennes, and Vendegies-Sur-Ecaillon, also taken by the British, is a little below that to the right. The Mormal Forest is seen still further to the right in the centre of the map. This territory will be of especial interest for the next few days.

Resignation is Accepted

Police in Hungary Called Out to Squelch Peace Demonstrations in House of Parliament.

Special to The Examiner:

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 28.— Emperor Karl has accepted the resignation of the Hungarian Premier Wekerle, according to a Budapest despatch received here to-day. A Budapest despatch to the Vossisshe Zeitung says: Count Karolyi, now head of the National Council, will request the Emperor to appear before the Hungarian Diet and proclaim Hungary's independence. Peace demonstrations occurred in the Hungarian House on Saturday. The police were forced to intervene, it is reported.

Germany's Latest Note

The Official Text of the Note Had Not Arrived Early To-day.

(By Robert J. Bender.)
(United States.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—Germany appeared to official Washington to-day to be attempting to force an early submission of the Allied armistice. Her latest note, for which there appeared no particular excuse or need, carried the plain suggestion that she is struggling now to make the Allies appear on the initiative in suggesting an armistice. The official text of the note had not arrived early to-day, but was expected soon. Opinion was divided as to its importance, some officials seeing another step forward in Germany's efforts and others declaring it merely more camouflage, more flattery of the President, designed to keep him interested—and containing nothing new or important.

Oriental Hotel is Being Converted Into a Hospital and Will be Open Wednesday

Building Will Provide Accommodation for One Hundred Patients—Ten Rooms Will be Open for a Starter—Will Take Care of Influenza and Pneumonia Cases—Will Relieve Local Hospitals.

On Wednesday morning the Emergency hospital in the old Oriental Hotel, will be opened for the care of patients suffering from influenza and pneumonia, providing the heating apparatus is in proper condition.

Closed up since 1916, the old hotel has since Saturday been the busiest spot in the city. All day Sunday the Relief Officer, Mr. F. W. Miller, and the Sanitary Inspector, Mr. Charles Stapleton, washed windows, swept floors and prepared generally for the voluntary army of workers who came in to-day to take over the business of cleaning up.

At nine o'clock, when the whistles blew for the first shot of the Victory Loan, the work became organized, and Mrs. Achilles Turner, Mrs. A. E. Coulthard, Miss Nan Hall, Mrs. Sharpe, Miss Gladys Fife, Miss Daisy Stocker, Miss Ila Giles, Mrs. Thomas Stevenson, Miss Marion Powell and Miss Gladys Pentland, armed with soap, pails, brooms and cloths, set out to give the rooms a final cleaning. One of the first to volunteer in any capacity was Adjutant Buntin, who upon offering to serve in any capacity, donned overalls and set about scrubbing the floors.

Ten Rooms Open.

At an hour's notice, Mr. Stapleton had the coal in the building on Saturday evening and the building opened up for work. At present the ten rooms on the west second floor are opened up, and under course of cleaning, with number 26, at the head of the stairs, in splendid order for the dispensary. As they are needed more rooms may be opened at very short notice until, if necessary, one hundred bed rooms will be ready for patients.

The Superintendent.

Miss Hattie Reid, Superintendent of the Isolation Hospital, will take charge of the hospital, and Miss Alford is busy organizing the nurses for the rest of the work. Miss Reid's room, the first on the west side, is already available for her.

Kitchen Ready.

The plumbers worked all Sunday and all last night to help on the speedy opening of the hospital and at ten this morning the huge stoves in the kitchen, which were in perfect order fortunately, were alight, and hot water ready for the voluntary workesr. Early to-day the kitchen was made ready for the cooks to step in and take up the work. Quarters for the help have been provided behind the wards on the left side.

Dining Room Ready.

The old dining room is ready now to be the hospital dining room directly tables and chairs have been procured.

With the opening of the hotel doors this morning donations in the ways of beds and bedding began to arrive. As the hospital will be run practically free to patients, keeping down the expenses will be a great consideration, and the committee will very thankfully receive any donations of beds and bedding. Upon being notified such articles will be sent for.

Clergy Help.

As the morning wore on a strangely assorted corps of volunteers assembled. In the hall of the ward Rev. Robert Pogue dusted the ceiling while Rev. Mr. Mackenzie did odd jobs about the building. Several of the school teachers, including Miss Ross and Miss Rannie, joined the scrubbing brigade; also Mrs. (Dr.) Eastwood, Miss M. English, Miss Nina Borridale, Miss Knox and Miss Marjory Fanning. As the day wore on more volunteers arrived to help on the work. Conspicuous amongst these was Mr. G. W. Powell who with Mr. J. S. Knapman and Mr. Hill, assisted Mr. Stapleton and Mr. Miller in the Sunday preliminary operations.

THE ITALIAN OFFENSIVE

Over Four Thousand Prisoners Captured, Together With Many Guns.

REMOVES MENACE

(Special to The Examiner.)

WITH THE ITALIAN ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Oct. 28. — The slopes of the four mountains wrested from the Austrians and held in the face of the most determined counter-attacks are strewn with dead. The bodies are mostly those of the enemy. A separate battle was fought for each one of the peaks. More than 4,000 prisoners, including 150 officers, were taken and many machine guns were captured. By reconquering the peaks, which were lost last December, the Italians brought to an end the continual Austrian menace of a descent upon the plains.

The bulk of the enemy's resistance was put up by nine divisions of German-speaking Austrians.

BITTER FIGHTING.

VIENNA, via London, October 28. —Bitter fighting continues east of the Piave, where the allied troops forced a crossing, the Austrian War Office announced to-day.

AVIATORS WILL TAKE PART IN LOAN CAMPAIGN

Two Flyers are on the Way to Quebec.

(Special to Examiner.)

MONTREAL, October 28.—Two aviators, one from Deseronto, and the other from Leaside, are expected to arrive to-day to take part in the Victory Loan demonstration. They were due last Friday, but have been delayed in starting by the foggy weather ,and will await clear weather. A hangar has been completed at the Polo grounds and a corporal and two mechanicians have arrived to take charge of the machines. A similar staff has been sent to Quebec and will have headquarters on the Plains of Abraham to which one of the aviators will fly to help Quebec City in the campaign.

MR. W. B. CUMMING WAS CALLED HOME TO-DAY

Mr. Wallace B. Cumming, county organizer for the Victory Loan in this district, received a telegram this morning informing him that his father was dying at his home in Almonte. Mr. Cumming left on noon train for home. His father is seventy years old and has been failing in health for some time.

GENERAL ELECTION BEFORE CHRISTMAS

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Oct. 28.— Arrangements have been completed for a general election in Great Britain before Christmas, the Daily Mail said to-day. The date will be announced this week.

PTE. THOS. H. SKINNER
Of Peterboro who is officially reported wounded.

Mrs. Thos. Skinner, 354 Stewart St. has received official word from Ottawa that her husband, Pte. Thomas Henry Skinner, Canadian infantry is officially reported admitted to No. 1 Australian General Hospital, Rouen, on October 21st, suffering from gun shot Skinner enlisted here early in 1915 with the 39th Battalion and after transferred to the 21st Eastern Ontario Battalion with which he has been fighting for a long period. Pte. Skinner has four brothers overseas.

SHOCK FOR THE GERMANS

The Fall of Ludendorff Will Have a Very Disturbing Influence on German Mind.

THE NEW BOOM

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Oct. 28.—(British Admiralty Wireless.)—The effect of General Ludendorff's resignation on the German people, who are already suffering from recurrent shocks of a very disturbing crisis, can scarcely be over-estimated. Despite the failure of Ludendorff's ambitious project to seize Paris and Channel ports, and the subsequent reverses which overtook the German army, his military prestige still remained high, and the Germans for the most part continued to have faith in him to extricate them from the gravest military disaster. Numerous explanations are of course, already forthcoming to account for his fall, but the outstanding fact is that the faith of the Germans in their military machine has experienced one of the rudest shocks of the whole war. Only a few days ago the new German War Minister, Gen. Schench, was appealing to the people to give to his administration. "That confidence which is particularly at the present moment indispensable for our resolute work." To what extent the public he addressed will approve of the policy of this "new broom" will probably be realized by Schench in a very short time.

LONDON, Oct. 28.—It is learned this morning that Ludendorff resigned because the German army was placed under civilian control, and he has gone to Grand Army Headquarters to say good-bye to the army.. Hindenburg remains Chief of Staff.

A SUCCESSOR.

ZURICH, Oct. 28. — The German newspapers proclaim that General Von Seckt, chief of staff of General Von Mackensen, during the latter's Roumanian drive, will succeed General Ludendorff as head of the German armies.

Civilian Control.

(Special to The Examiner.)

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 28. — The new civilian control ousted General Ludendorff, following disagreements with him, according to advices received here to-day.

Court Martial.

(Special to The Examiner.)

ROME, Oct. 28.—Field Marshal Von Hindenburg is expected to order the court martial of General Ludendorff, according to information received here to-day, from German sources.

Premier Will Visit States

Venizelos of Greece Will Present His Country's War Aims.

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28. —Premier Venizelos of Greece will come to America soon, probably early in December, the Greek Minister, Roussos, declared to-day. Venizelos, in response to a cable from the Greek Legation here, indicated his intention of visiting America when his present mission in London and Paris is finished. Venizelos will lay Greece's war aims before President Wilson personally, and a conference will be held regarding the specific application of President Wilson's war aims to the Balkans. Conferences on this question are now on between Venizelos and Lloyd George and Clemenceau. Venizelos will see Col. House informally on the same subject in Paris.

Peterboro Casualties

Mr. and Mrs. G. Melton, 567 Patterson street, city, have been officially notified that their son, Pte. Geo. Melton, No. 195158 of the 21st Battalion, (late sergeant of the 93rd Battalion), had been admitted to No. 22 General Hospital, at Camiers, France, suffering with gunshot wounds in the left hand, abdomen and shoulder, on October 19th. A later cable from friends stated that he is now in England in hospital. No further word has been received regarding his condition.

This is the third time Pte. Melton's name has appeared in the casualty list, first, in 1917 he was for a long time ill with trench fever. In May, 1918, he was wounded in the thigh, and returned to the firing line in August, where has been until he received these later wounds.

SECOND CANADIAN VICTORY LOAN WAS OPENED TO-DAY

Bells and Factory Whistles Re-Echoed Across Canada in a Call to Patriotic Citizens Whose Help in This Work is Well Repaid.

THE "MOPPING UP" LOAN

The opening of the second Canadian Victory Loan was synchronized all over Canada this morning at nine o'clock, announced by the blaring of factory whistles, the sweeter tones of bells, and the jagged blasts of railway engines that swelled the noise. In a few of the larger cities that boast of cannon, ceremonial guns gave to the signal salvos something of the inner meaning of the new loan but in Peterboro the Canadian General Electric Company's whistle fulfilled the duty of calling the entire populace to the common service of co-operating with the Government in the raising of the second Victory Loan.

This morning's chorus was a rolling discord of glorified noise, the feebler whistles striving for a hearing with the awesome roars of the C.G.E. giant whose overtones carried a sublime appeal into every home in the city and far into the country in a deep circle radiating from the engine room.

The interpretation of the whistles' message might have been a suggestion of the music of "Britons Never Shall Be Slaves" or "We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall." The sentiment at any rate was patriotic, but there was also a subdued motif of economy, an appeal to thrift and investment from the fact that the new loan is free of taxes and pays interest at the rate of 5½ per cent. with every likelihood that the price will go up as the peace negotiations assume definite form.

This was the meaning of the nine o'clock uproar this morning. Long experience has created an instinctive dread of the C. G. E. whistle when it varies its regular summons to workers and this feeling was not absent this morning in the hearts of the people who caught its echoes. But the inspiration behind the somewhat terrifying blasts was one rather of elation and rejoicing in the fact that the end of the war has been brought appreciably nearer of late, with the reminder that the material for mopping up the Huns must be provided by the folks at home through the new loan.

PETERBORO'S PART.

Hence, the local corps of workers under the direction of Mr. Wallace B. Cummings launched their campaign this morning confident that Peterboro would subscribe a handsome share of the new loan. The city has not failed yet in any of its undertakings, and in this appeal there are the dual opportunities of helping the Government in its conduct of the war and also of investing in bonds that are literally gilt-edged, just as sound as is this country, tax free and paying 5½ per cent.

HOW TO FUMIGATE YOUR HOMES.

Dr. C. H. Amys, M.O.H., advises the citizens that the most effective means of fumigation of shops, factories, houses, etc., is to take one pound of chloride of lime, mix in a pail of water, and use a diperful of the solution in another pail of water to use for scrubbing floors, etc. The authorities agree that fumigation by sulphur, formalin, etc., is of doubtful value.

Revolution in Vienna

The Archdukes Have Taken Refuge in a Castle.

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, Oct. 28.—A revolution has broken out in Vienna, according to advices received here to-day. The archdukes have taken refuge in the castle at Godollo, and Emperor Karl, it is said, will soon leave for Debreczin.

Godollo, which is 150 miles northeast of Budapest, is the site of a Royal Palace. Debreczin, 116 miles east of Budapest, is a manufacturing and commercial centre of about 75,000 population. There are three archdukes, Francis Joseph Otto, aged 6; Robert Karl Ludwig, 3, and Felix Freidrich Auguste. There is also an archduchess, Adelheid, aged 4.

PARIS, Oct. 28.—Grave troubles have broken out at Budapest as a result of the appointment of Count Julius Andrassy, who is suspected of Germanophile tendencies, to be Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister. A committee of workmen and soldiers has been formed to represent the Extremist party in impending events.

The Epidemic in Peterboro

Spanish Influenza and Pneumonia Go Hand in Hand.

Mr. C. H. Amys, M.O.H., said this morning that while the epidemic of Spanish influenza does not appear to be on the increase, it has now taken a more severe type, with pneumonic complications.

The call for voluntary assistance for nursing the epidemic, has met with hearty response, both for nursing and help in anyway.

The volunteers not yet called upon will be called as needed.

CONSTABLE WALKED FOURTEEN MILES

David Crowley, of Otonabee Township, Was Apprehended.

Half a dozen young men appeared before the Magistrate this morning and were assessed $2 and costs, amounting to $6.10 for not carrying their military papers. Needless to say they all promised to carry them in the future.

"Are you married?" was one of the questions asked William W. Webster, who had no military papers when apprehended by the military police.

"No, I'm not."

"Well, you ought to be fined for that," said the Magistrate, at the same time fining him $6.10.

An Absentee.

David Crowley stood in the prisoner's dock and readily affirmed that he was an absentee. Constable Fred J. Cole, of the Military Police, walked seven miles into Otonabee township yesterday and slipped the nickel-plated bracelets on Crowley's wrists. Crowley put up a determined resistance, but it was of no avail and walked the whole seven miles back with Constable Cole to the police station. He was handed over to the military authorities and will be dealt with in Kingston. Constable Cole thus had a round trip of 14 miles yesterday.

AUSTRIA REFUSED TO CARRY MESSAGES OVER THEIR WIRES

(Special to Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—Austria is refusing diplomatic messages of its former ally, Bulgaria, to pass over the telegraph wires in the Dual Monarchy. With the consent of the State Department, the Bulgarian Minister, Panaretoff, recently filed a code message to his government. The Austrian government turned it back, but it was re-routed.

THEY WON'T HAVE TO HANG THEIR HEADS LIKE DOGS

(By United Press.)

LONDON, Oct. 2.—(By Mail.) — Posted at all the kennels of the army is the story of two French war dogs.

It was during the German offensive, and the dogs had been sent out for a message. Their keeper stayed in the rear of the retreating French army till the last possible moment, waiting for the dogs to return with the message.

When they returned there was no way of escape except by swimming the Marne.

The man could not swim, but the dogs could. He chained them together, and clung to the chain, and so they got him safely across under heavy fire.

When those dogs become proud fathers, they will have their answer ready if the pups ask them, "What did you do in the Great War, Daddy?"

SAFETY FIRST.

According to the general testimony of medical men, one of the principal causes of the spread of Spanish influenza, as well as one of the chief reasons for the development of serious complications is the haste with which a large number of those suffering from the influenza hurry back to work. It is a natural thing for those who have been ill to want to get back to work as soon as they begin to feel better, and the result is that the "flu" victims have gone out too soon, running the risk of a dangerous relapse, and helping to spread infection among those with whom they are working. It is a fact that many of the fatal cases have been among those people who feeling themselves convalescent, have been too eager to get back to work, and have developed a fresh attack with pneumonia complications. Safety first is a splendid motto in these times of epidemic. The advice of physicians is that patients should remain in bed for at least two or three days after the fever has subsided, and should keep away from other people, and out of danger of fresh colds, for some days after they are well enough to get up. Because many people are ignoring this advice the infection is being spread far and wide, making the fight of the health authorities against the epidemic correspondingly more difficult. For their own sake and for the sake of the general public, influenza patients should carefully follow the instructions of the doctors as to their course of action during convalescence. If the oredrs are observed as they should be, there will be less personal danger of a relapse and far less risk of infecting others.

REAL SERVICE.

The action of the Trinity Methodist Church Red Cross Society in opening the Sunday School on Reid Street as a headquarters for the plying of soups, hot drinks, and other comforts to influenza sufferers, is a real service, and the health authorities and those who are interested in the fight against the epidemic will welcome the assistance of the Trinity organization. Not only will the Society supply these much-needed delicacies, but they are also prepared to furnish a number of nurses. The work they have volunteered to undertake is of vital assistance. The great danger in an epidemic like Peterboro is facing at present is that the number of cases become so great that doctors and nurses can hardly handle them. Sometimes a whole family is laid up at once and there is no one to look after the patients. The result is that what would usually have proven a simple case, with ordinary care and attention, often develops into a serious one. Already in Peterboro there have been several such cases, and it is reported that one unfortunate woman who passed away from an attack of pneumonia, following influenza, was for several days unattended, and when her condition was finally discovered there was practically no chance to save her life. The action of the Trinity Red Cross in deciding to furnish as many nurses as possible will, it is hoped, make incidents of this kind an impossibility in Peterboro.

There is a real call for service in the appeal that is being made for volunteer nurses. If it were to fall on deaf ears the fatalities from the epidemic that is raging in Peterboro may become much more numerous.

NEXT YEAR'S COUNCIL.

With the prospects of a successful peace coming next year, many citizens are beginning to consider the question of after-the-war problems and reconstruction. Co-incident with such consideration there is an under-current, quiet but deep, of speculation as to the personnel of the city council for next year. Thoughtful citizens are beginning to realize that in the years immediately after peace is declared, the best brains and business ability of the community should be at the services of the city for strong municipal leadership and guidance, will be necessary as never before. The council that will be at the head of civic affairs in the period that is coming should be composed of big men, men that have made a success in a big way of their own careers, and who are capable of infusing into municipal affairs the same acumen, energy and constructiveness that have distinguished their business life. No longer should aldermen be chosen because of their ability to get pavements or street crossings built in the section where they live, or because they are hail fellows well met with many of their constituents.

In the past, particularly under the ward system of electing aldermen, there has been difficulty in inducing citizens of the right calibre to offer themselves as candidates. They saw with what regularity the people voted for the old "war horses" of municipal politics, the men who year after year were to be found in the fight. Such incidents as the defeat of Mr. B. F. Ackerman for the School Board, after giving splendid service, make business men hesitate, and there has been a scarcity of good candidates.

In the coming elections, which will be conducted on a general system, there may be a change. There is a steadily growing sentiment that bigger men should be brought out. Several citizens have brought forward a proposition to have a representative slate of energetic, successful business men arranged, possibly by the Board of Trade. It is felt that if such a slate were drawn up and induced to enter the field, that the citizens generally would rally behind them, and give Peterboro a council composed of men trained to deal with big affairs. That such a Council will be needed in the after-the-war period of reconstruction, no thinking citizen can doubt.

THE DRIVE IS ON.

Canada's Victory Loan Campaign, the drive that is going to help finish the career of the Beast of Berlin, and bring peace nearer, is under way. This morning saw the beginning of the offensive and for the next three weeks Canadians should drop everything else on one side and help in the biggest effort of the war as far as Canada's home front is concerned. Canada has a splendid example to guide her in the task that lies before the people of this country. She need only emulate the spirit shown by the Canadian army at the front to win complete success.

The epidemic of influenza is a handicap of course, but it does not begin to approach in difficulty the obstructions that General Currie's men have gallantly swept over in the past three months.

The Canadians at the front are offering their all; we at home are only asked to loan our money at a higher rate of interest than any bank will give us. There is, therefore, little sacrifice in investing in Victory Bonds, but there is however, the satisfaction of knowing that by lending our money we are supplying the driving power for Canada's war effort. Victory bonds mean food and ammunition for Canada's soldiers, they mean the tanks that tear through the enemy's defences, they mean the aeroplanes that spy out the German positions, and harass his battered troops; they mean the big guns that smash a safe path for the infantry, they mean that the wheels of industry will be kept turning in Canada; they mean that Great Britain will continue to buy our surplus products, they mean that the Kaiser will be beaten, they mean that the atrocities of the Hun on land and sea will be stopped forever and finally they mean peace—glorious triumphant peace.

Invest to the limit—Victory Bonds will bring the end of the war nearer.

LIQUOR PRESCRIPTIONS.

There is a considerable difference of opinion among doctors, as there is among laymen, as to the efficacy of liquor in the treatment of influenza. Some physicians deprecate the administration of alcoholic stimulants in such cases but, on the other hand, many of their profession unhesitatingly prescribe alcohol as an effective cure. Under such circumstances, it is time that the Ontario Government took some action to protect the public against the present system by which those for whom liquor is recommended by reputable physicians are being forced to pay ridiculous prices. As a local physician pointed out to the Board of Health the other night, people are compelled to pay $5.00 for $1.00 worth of whiskey. There is something radically wrong with a system that allows such profiteering. If liquor is effective in fighting influenza, and many physicians say so, the Ontario Government which has recognized the medicinal value of alcohol by allowing it to be furnished on the prescription of a physician, should go further and protect the public in the matter of prices, as well as provide means by which those for whose treatment physicians consider that liquor is necessary, may secure what is required. The spectacle, frequently seen in Toronto, of hundreds of people, many of them ill themselves, standing in front of a liquor dispensary for hours, waiting to be served with what doctors have certified is needed, is not a very happy commentary upon the liquor regulations in the province.

The action of a number of prominent citizens in appearing before the Board of Health to urge that a dispesary be opened here during the epidemic, was caused by a recognition of the conditions as outlined above. It was not actuated, as one member of the Board remarked, in a desire to help thirsty citizens. It is a simple open and shut proposition. The Ontario Government admits that liquor is of value in some cases and legalizes its sale on the prescription of a physician. So far so good, but the unfortunate individual for whom it has been prescribed, may be dead before the prescription can be fulfilled unless he happens to live in one of the few centres where dispensaries are located. In the latter case he is charged an outrageous price for the alcohol the doctor has said that he needs.

The whole system of handling prescriptions for liquor is an outrage.

PREVENTING EXORBITANT PRICES

The recent regulations by the Government to assist in preventing exorbitant prices for the necessaries of life have not proved effectual. The system contemplated was that each municipal council should appoint a "fair price commission" with powers to investigate supplies and prices, to fix "fair prices," to publish results in local newspapers, and to report to the Minister of Labor would take action, or send on the evidence to the Provincial Attorney-General. This roundabout way of handling the matter could not be a success.

It was hardly to be expected that in the smaller cities and towns municipal councils would be eager to antagonize important local business interests. The enforcement of laws against profiteering should be in the hands of Dominion officials. The war on food profiteering should be conducted by the Food Board acting through a board or representative in each municipality. For instance, let us look at the summary way things are sometimes done across the border. In New York recently 200 butchers were hauled before the Federal Food Board for asking exorbitant prices for lamb. A fair basis of profit had been fixed, ranging from 7 to 8 cents for legs and shoulder to 11 and 13 cents for chops. The accused were proved to have extracted 20 to 25 cents a pound profit. In fining them heavily, the chairman said:

"Anyone who has taken advantage of war conditions to enrich himself cannot expect the authorities are going to give him a clean bill of health because he refunds the amount he has unjustly taken. If a man picks another man's pockets, it is not adjudication to the defence if he simply return the money he stole to the victim."

The Dominion Goverament regulations provide that necessaries of life shall be sold "at a price not 'higher than is just or reasonable.'" How many prosecutions have there been in Canada on account of excessive profits in food purveying? Except in a general way, under broad rules set forth by the Food Board, there is no sufficient attempt to regulate or limit prices of foodstuffs as they pass through the hands of the several middlemen. Theoretically, if municipal government was at the high pitch of efficiency it should be, perhaps some effective control might be exerted, but anyone who knows municipal administration will say there is no hope of mayors and aldermen prosecuting important business interests of their community for extracting exorbitant profits.—Mail and Empire.

THE "SACRED SOIL" OF GERMANY

(By Rev. Dr. R. W. R. Tayler.)

(President of Schenectady Unconditional Surrender Club.)

We are hearing a lot of Hunnish rot about "the sacred soil of Germany." Such truck as this:

"The invader must not be allowed to touch the sacred soil of the Fatherland." "The soil of Germany is too sacred to be trampled upon by the swinish hordes that is waging war on the defenders of our Fatherland."

Now just a word with you, Mr. Hun. Stand up and listen to some plain American talk.

Is the soil of Germany any more sacred to you than the soil of Belgium is to the Belgians or the soil of France to Frenchmen?

Yet you have ruthlessly invaded both without any thought of sacred soil. You planted your vulgar, hob-nailed boots on territory as sacred and holy as any on earth, saving the Holy Land of Palestine. And even on that you dared to intrdnce your insufferable presence.

Yes! You invaded the sacred soil of beautiful France. You destroyed its vineyards, you despoiled its richness, you ravaged its cities, you violated its sanctities, you polluted its temples, you sowed red hell and carnage wherever you could. And now you are whining and whimpering about the "sacred soil of the Fatherland!"

There is one thing only that will make your soil sacred. It is the rhythmic tramp of the millions of invaders crossing your borders to dictate peace at Potsdam. Can't you hear them coming? Canadians to avenge their crucified! Englishmen with their "contemptible little army" to plant the Union Jack alongside the Stars and Stripes beyond the Rhine and make sacred every spot over which their shadows float! Americans to avenge the murdered women and children of the Lusitania, and the treacheries of spies who have nested their serpent brood in the soil of our free republic! Frenchmen, yes, Frenchmen, whom no power on earth can stay from sweeping into your "sacred Fatherland," in whose hearts are burning the words of "Alsace," "Lorraine," "Rheims," "Picardy"! Frenchmen whom you sought to enslave, whose wives and daughters you violated, whose little children you impaled on your bloody bayonets out of sheer damnable deviltry! They are coming, Mr. Hun, they are coming! And God help you when they come.

Hear them coming! Serbs, Italians, Russians, Australians, Belgians, arm-in-arm with the picturesque Ladies of Hell! The Japs of the Eastern Seas and the slant-eyed avengers of your Pekin pillering. They are shaking the earth with the thunderings of their unceasing tramp, tramp, tramp! When those marching footsteps echo from the pavements from Berlin then you may prattle about "the sacred Fatherland has become sacred to freedom and regal with liberty. When we have buried deep under your soil the Hohenzollern horde of Hunnish hooligans that have made a hell of it, then you may prattle about "the sacred soil of the Fatherland." But not till then!

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Lend as they fight.

Stop, look and loosen.

Victory Bonds help Canada, and hurt the Kaiser—two excellent reasons for investing.

Buy a Bond for baby.

What interest would the Kaiser give if he won the war and wanted your money?

Canada's Victory Loan is a pledge to the boys at the front. Help to make that pledge good by lending to the utmost.

Think of the Victory Loan; work for the Victory Loan, and invest in the Victory Loan, and you'll be too busy to worry about the influenza.

Speaking of vaccine, Victory Bonds are the best serum to prevent Prussianism.

Innoculate yourself with the Victory Loan sprit, and you won't be troubled with the "flu."

Food Board Flashes

Patrons of hotels and restaurants are requested not to ask proprietors to break the regulations of the Canada Food Board. It should be kept in mind that the proprietors are under license and that in meeting the demands of unreasonable patrons they are making themselves liable to the cancellation of their licenses and the payment of heavy fines into the bargain.

AN INTERNAL QUESTION.

Basel, Oct. 28. — The question of Alsace-Lorraine is purely a German internal question, declares Karl Hauss, the new Governor of Alsace-Lorraine, in a statement published in the Strassburg Gazette. The statement is a reply to declarations made in the Reichstag by Dr. George Ricklin, a deputy from Alsace-Lorraine, and amounts to a governmental manifesto. It is issued in agreement with other deputies from Alsace-Lorraine.

The statement of Herr Hauss declares that the future of Alsace-Lorraine must be decided by a vote of the people, and that it is an internal question in Germany with which a peace conference could have nothing to do. It concludes by saying that a new era is opening for Alsace-Lorraine which will enable the two provinces to form a point of reconciliation between France and Germany, "and to collaborate in establishing a compromise between two civilizations called to work in common for the safety and prosperity of humanity."

SAYS CONDITIONS ARE IMPROVING IN QUEEN CITY

Churches and Theatres Will be Permitted to Re-open In a Few Days.

Special to Examiner.

TORONTO, Oct. 28. — Churches may resume their regular services next Sunday, and the Toronto theatres may reopen next Monday. Probably on that day also the ban will be lifted on all other places which have been closed, and all meetings which have been prohibited, because of the influenza epidemic.

Such was the announcement made to-day by Dr. Hastings, M.O.H., at a special meeting of the Board of Health. There was almost a note of jubilation in the doctor's voice when he told of the "Flu" situation as it is to-day in Toronto. "Things are relaxing wonderfully," he declared; "yesterday's calls for assistance were only a fraction of what they were a week ago. The city doctors with whom I have come in contact tell the same story. It is a wonderfully early time to be getting 'over the top.'"

U. S ARMY MOVES TO OVERCOME FLU DELAY

ALL WORK THAT CAN BE DONE OVERSEAS WILL BE ELIMINATED FROM SCHEDULES

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.— Army training camp commanders have been ordered to eliminate from their schedules all work that can be done after the men arrive overseas, as one of the moves of the War Department to speed up the enlarged war program and overcome delays resulting from interference with draft calls by influenza.

If peace talk has had any effect at the War Department it apparently has spurred everybody to further exertions to swell the number of troops going to France. The October draft calls held up because of influenza epidemic, are beginning to go out again, and nothing will be permitted to interfere with the movement of soldiers overseas at the rate of 250,000 monthly.

Canadian Pacific Steamer Was Hammered to Pieces on the Vanderbilt Reef

Three Hundred and Forty-six Lives Lost—Big Steamer Struck a Rock and Not a Soul Survived—One of the Victims Came From Campbellford.

150 BODIES RECOVERED.

WHITE HORSE, Y.T., Oct. 28.—A despatch received from the Dominion Telegraphs from Juneau late last evening says that 150 bodies of victims of the Sophia wreck had been recovered by nightfall.

VICTORIA, B.C., Oct. 28. — Pounded by mountainous waves and driven before wind of terrible severity, the C.P.R. steamer Princess Sophia, slid from the comparative safety of Vanderbilt Reef, in Lynn Canal, midway between Skagway and Juneau, early Friday evening and carried 346 persons, passengers and crew, men, women and children, to their death in the raging northern waters. There were no survivors on the ship.

The Sophia left Skagway Wednesday evening last for Vancouver with a passenger list made up largely of Dawson people and Alaskans, from interior points eager to get "outside" for the winter. Four hours out she ran into a blinding snowstorm, in which, it is supposed, she got out of her course slightly and piled up on the reef, where she rested for more than 40 hours in what was thought to be a position of no danger. Lighthouse tenders and gas boats responded to the wireless call for assistance, and the Princess Alice was despatched from Vancouver to take over the passengers. Even though the seas were running too high to permit of the transference of the passengers on board on Friday, no alarm was felt. Capt. F. L. Lockem, of Victoria, a veteran seaman of the northern coast, on the night of the disaster had wirelessed his office here that the ship was hard and fast on the reef with her bottom badly damaged, but she was not taking water and the passengers were normal. It is evident that he believed the Sophia was planted so firmly on the rocks as to be secured from the severity of the storm which continued to rage.

GOT WITHIN 400 YARDS.

Friday morning the United States lighthouse tender Cedar had got within 400 yards of the Sophia, but her anchors wouldn't hold on the rocky sea bottom, and the seas forced her back.

The waves were such that lifeboats could not have lived. When night shut down the Sophia was still on the reef. The wind increased and the air was filled with snow. At 8 o'clock the Cedar picked up the last wireless from the Sophia. The Sophia was sinking. She had been driven across the reef into deep water, in which her shattered bottom offered no support, and she filled quickly and went down. The Cedar rushed to the vicinity, but could see nothing of the Sophia.

When morning broke her foremast was visible above the water. There was no sign of life, no wreckage; and the bodies had scattered if they had not gone down with the ship.

It was not until late Saturday afternoon that word of the disaster came out. Unconfirmed reports carried up and down the coast earlier in the day that the Sophia had gone down, and these were finally confirmed by a wireless message from Juneau. Details have come through slowly.

SOME BODIES RECOVERED.

The body of one woman was picked up, with four overturned boats, on Lincoln Island Sunday morning. Reports to Canadian Pacific Railway officials in Victoria to-day announce the recovery of nine more bodies, eight of them women, and all so far unidentified. Four of the bodies were one one of the Sophia's collapsible rafts. The message added that there was no sign of life and no hope of any survivors.

Vanderbilt Reef it is pointed out, is three and one half miles from the nearest point where boats would drift ashore and it was impossible that rafts or lifeboats or passengers with lifebelts could have survived for such a distance in the huge seas which prevailed Friday night. The search for bodies is being maintained.

The passenger list was cabled from Skagway Saturday night, and shows that 285 passengers sailed on the Sophia, of whom 230 were men, 37 women and 18 children. The crew comprised 61 persons, including one woman, Miss H. Browning, of Vancouver, a stewardess. According to these figures there were 346 persons aboard, 290 men, 38 women and 18 children. The passenger list gave the names only, and it was impossible to identify all of them.

DAWSON HARD HIT

The city of Dawson was hard hit, and despatches from that city state almost two-thirds of the passengers were Dawsonites. William O'Brien, member of the Yukon Legislature and of the Dawson City Council, accompanied by his wife wife and five children were on board. William Scoux, of Seattle, who was lost, hoisted the first bucket of fabulously rich gold gravel on Eldorado, the most noted of Yukon creeks.

Mrs. Charles Vifquain, the wife of the assistant general agent for the White Pass and Yukon Company at Dawson. She was accompanied by her child.

John Seacarrelli, John Helwinkle, A. D. Pinska, with his wife, and Sam Henry made up a party of prominent Dawson business men.

SOME DAWSON VICTIMS.

Other Dawson victims included: Walter Byrnes, one of the richest Klondyke hydraulic operators and his brother, Allan, of Vancouver; Edward S. Ironside, collector of Customs for Dawson, en route for Ottawa on official business, accompanied by his mother; U. G. Myers, formerly U.S. Commissioner in Eagle City; Murray Eades, Dawson hotelman, and his wife; Oscar Tackstrom, a pioneer Dawson business man, with his family; Harry Bridges, a Dawson restaurateur, and his wife; Capt. Augustine Steward, a veteran of South African wars! Jack Chis- of South African wars; Jack Chis- contractor, and his wife, and Dave Williams, a Dawson business man.

The passenger list included a large number of steamship officials who had been operating for the summer on the Yukon River. Among these were: C. J. Bloomquist, Victoria, B. C., captain of the steamer Dawson; W. W. Schillingtaw, Victoria, B.C.; B. Wilkinson, Victoria; R. C. Haws, Vancouver, B.C.; P. Vint, Vaucouver, B.C.; Captain J. F. Douglas, New Westminster, B.C.

Most of the passengers belonged to Yukon and Alaska and the Pacific coast, and none have been identified as yet as belonging to eastern Canada. Included in the crew was C. J. Black, of Campbellford, Ont., assistant purser. The balance of the crew were coast men. D. M. Robinson, Vancouver, the wireless operator, was a lad of 20, and stuck to his post to the last. Formerly he was wireless operator on the Empress of Russia.

The Sophia is reported from Dawson to have carried a cargo of gold worth a million dollars or more. She had a score or two of horses, but otherwise little cargo. She was a steel screw steamship of 2,320 tons gross and 1,466 tons net register, and was built in Paisley in 1912.

The White Pass and Yukon Railway Company, which operated steamship and rail lines in Yukon and Alaska, have issued a list of 84 of their employes lost on the Sophia, three of them accompanied by their wives. Most of them are Canadians. The following comprised the crew of the Sophia.

Captain R. Locke, Victoria; First Officer Jerry Shaw, Victoria; Second Officer J. G. Goss, Victoria; Third Officer A. Murphy, Victoria; Purser C. B. Beadle, Victoria; Assistant Purser C. J. Black, Campbellford, Ont.

Wireless Operator D. M. Robinson, Vncouver; Engineers Charles H. Wallace, chief engineer; Second Engineer Duncan Ross, Third Engineer J. M. Macey, all of Vancouver; Barber L. Wood, Vancouver; Firemen M. Dorris, J. L. Apirre, N. E. Dibble, J. E. Carson, Vancouver; Oilers J. Evans, E. Dougherty, and one unknown; Chief Steward J. King, Vancouver; Second Steward A. Cartwright Vancouver; Stewardess Miss H. Browning, Vancouver; Cooks Joe Shimada, Giles Holmes, Waiters A. McDernell, J. C. Doppins, C. King, O. M. Phillips, J. Morrison, V. Whitcross, D. Templemen, all of Vancouver; Seamen G. Walker, H. Simpson, H. G. Irish, G. Roney, G. Parker, W. D. Stewart, Chas. Bowman, P. S. Griffith, H. Slattery, H. Darling, V. Herbe, S. W. Macey, G. Clarke, P. Gaynor, M. Walsh, W. D. Goynegan, F. Verburggen, T. Park, H. D. Park, A. Munro, A. Dallas.

1,600,000 is Peterboro's Allotment to the Loan

The City Has Been Apportioned $800,000—Last Year's Allotment Was Surpassed by One Million Dollars—List of Canvassers.

C.G.E. MEETING TO-DAY

Peterborough County's allotment og the new $500,000,000 Victory Loan is $1,600,000, made up as follows:

City of Peterborough	$ 800,000
Norwood and Asphodel	100,000
Lakefield and Douro	125,000
North Monaghan	100,000
Otonabee	135,000
Smith	100,000
Belmont and Methuen	50,000
Havelock	40,000
Dummer	50,000
Ennismore	35,000
Harvey	10,000
Burleigh and Anstruther	10,000
Total	$1,600,000

The Canvassers.

The canvassers in this district working under the direction of the County Organizer Mr. Wallace B. Cumming, and Mr. W. H. Bradburn, chairman of the local committee, are as follows: City—North Ward—T. W. Robinson, D. H. Kerneghan, P. Rutherford; South Ward—J. R. Corkery, Ward Patterson, W. G. Howden; East Ward—C. H. Moore and D. W. Lewis; West Ward—V. J. McEldery, H. J. McCannan, E. Walton; Centre Ward—D. H. Moore, H. Rush, F. Whitehouse.

Norwood and Asphodel — J. L. Squire, B. W. Squire, E. C. Squire, and J. F. Elliott.

Lakefield and Douro—W. Sherin and Thompson Bradin.

North Monaghan—J. A. Gibbs, Hunter street.

Otonabee — W. Weir and John Lang.

Smith—Robert Duff and George Ruth.

Havelock—E. C. Pace and T. P. Lancaster.

Dummer—Ed Hawthorne.

Ennismore—J. K. Galvin.

Harvey—Robert Shaw.

Burleigh and Anstruther — W. Thompson.

Last Year's Loan.

Peterborough's allotment of the first loan was $750,000, which was over-subscribed by nearly one million dollars, the total being $1,758,700. The success of last year's work here is a practical assurance that this year's campaign will be equally successful. At this time the epidemic of influenza obstrudes an influence that will undoubtedly hamper the canvass, but it is expected that it will not seriously interfere with the work.

At the C.G.E. To-day.

At nine o'clock this morning Mr. Cumming met the shop canvassers at the C.G.E. works, explained the method of issuing bonds and taking subscriptions. He also answered the questions of the men, and left everything ready for the shop campaign. The company has agreed to arrange for the payment out of the employees' salaries of instalments by which loans may be paid by those who deside to subscribe, and it is expected that the C.G.E. with other factories in the city will be able to report a one-hundred per cent. subscription, in short that every employee will buy a Victory Bond. Any persons moving from Peterborough will have returned to them the amount of their payments. There is no possibility of loss, and there is a splendid opportunity of making an investment that will become more valuable as when the last payments have been ade.

A Sad Death in Brownton

Deceased Had Only Been In Peterboro a Couple of Days When He Took Ill.

A sad story is told of the circumstances surrounding the death of Mr. William Laurin Wood, who died in the hospital Friday night of Spanish influenza.

Mr. Wood, who is a young man 28 years old, came to Peterborough over a week ago from Guelph to work in the Henry Hope plant and took a house on Frank street, Browntown. It is thought that Mr. Wood contracted influenza on the train coming from Guelph. He had worked only two nights at the munition factory when he took sick with the influenza. Subsequently his wife took the dread disease and the two children, one a baby of eight months and a little boy of only 4 years, contracted it. Another young couple, the husband a returned soldier by the name of Davis, who were in the same house, both contracted influenza and lay helpless in another room of the house.

It is thought the whole household, consisting of six people, lay for days without any attention whatever. Mrs. Wood managed to gain enough strength to call Dr. Malcolm McCulloch, who placed a nurse in the home. Wood's case was almost hopeless from the first and last Tuesday he was taken to the hospital, together with his wife and two children. The Davis family are rapidly recovering. On Friday evening Mr. Wood died and Mrs. Wood's condition is now critical. The civic authorities wired Mrs. Wood's parents in Montreal of her condition.

Died as Result of Eating Pills

McDonnell Street Infant Met a Tragic Death.

Marjory McKee, the 3-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert McKee, 344 McDonnel street, is dead as the result of eating some iron pills which she found on a sideboard.

Mr. and Mrs. McKee had been taking these pills after recovering from an attack of la grippe. Mr. McKee, who works for J. E. A. Fitzgerald, Coal and Wood Company, had returned to bed after eating his breakfast, and the little girl, unknown to the parents, had come downstairs and reached the box of pills on the sideboard. She ate four of the pills, and when found by the parents was in great agony.

Mrs. McKee tried to get several doctors on the telephone, but all were away except Dr. Malcolm McCullough, who arrived at the house just after the little girl had died.

HAS WON FLAG AND TWO CROWNS

Thamesville Subscribes in Half Hour After Midnight $48,000.

THAMESVILLE, Oct. 28.—The Victory Loan committee of the village of Thamesville was so full of enthusiasm that it could not wait for the dawn of day to start its canvass, but as soon as the midnight hour had struck Sunday, in an auto, with a piper and a trombone player to arouse the people, the canvassers started right out. Thamesville was asked to subscribe $25,000, and by 12.30 a.m. $48,000 had been subscribed, $60 per capita for the whole population. The objective was passed, the flag won, and two extra crowns, all in twenty-five minutes.

Germans Realize Their Danger

Captured Document Urges Strong Resistance.

(United Press.)

(By William Philip Simms.)

PARIS, October 28.—A German document captured by the French shows the reason for the extraordinarily desperate resistance with which the Germans are fighting the Americans. The document, signed by General Von Der Marwitz, calls upon the soldiers to resist to the bitter end. It proves that General Ludendorff attached tremendous importance to the ground which the Americans are gradually gaining. The document says:

"The enemy's object is to cut the Longuyn-Sedan line, which is the most important artery of the western army; also to render it impossible for the exploitation of the Briey basin, upon which depends our steel. Thus the fifth army faces the heaviest task during the next few weeks. Upon the fifth army depends the security of a great part of the western front, perhaps the fate of the people. The country counts upon every man to do his duty to the bitter end."

Soup Kitchen Working Overtime

Over Thirty Families Have Been Cared For.

The soup kitchen, opened under the auspices of the Trinity Red Cross Society for the relief of families who have several members ill, was well patronized to-day, and before twelve o'clock over thirty families of every denomination had been supplied with hot soup, jelly, custard, hot drinks, etc., while calls came in constantly all day Sunday.

To-day the kitchen was in charge of Mrs. Malott and Mrs. R. F. Downie, assisted by Miss E. Tomlinson, Mr. R. F. Downie, Mr. George H. King, Mrs. Neill, Mrs. Johnston, Mrs. Morrison, Mrs. Kidd and Mrs. Walsh, the organizer.

The families who were in need of relief were reported to headquarters, which immediately sent hot drinks. In three different families there were seven ill with no one to nurse them, so some idea of the need for action can be surmised.

Kitchen Non-denominational.

As the soup kitchen is absolutely non-denominational, the ladies in charge will very thankfully receive donations from any person who feels able to send in relief. Phone 705. Rev. F. E. Malott.

HON. W. H. HOYLE DEAD: WAS FORMER SPEAKER

Hon. W. H. Hoyle, former Speaker of the Ontario Legislature, died yesterday at his home, in Toronto. He had not been in the best of health for some time.

Elected to the Legislature from North Ontario in 1898, Mr. Hoyle was returned in the general elections since that time. He was elected Speaker at the opening of the Legislature of 1911.

Before he entered Provincial politics he was chairman of the school board of Cannington, where he resided. He was also a county councillor.

Mr. Hoyle was born in Devonshire, England, where his father was the customs officer of the Port of Barnstaple. He was educated in his native town and came to Canada in early life. He was 76 years of age.

FLU IS SWEEPING BRITISH ISLANDS

LONDON, Oct. 27.—Influenza is increasing throughout Great Britain and Ireland. Two hundred and fifty-five persons have been buried in Dublin since last Monday. The authorities are sprinkling the streets with disinfectants. Two priests who attended the victims have died.

One hundred and fifty-two deaths have occurred at Leicester during the week. All public functions have been cancelled and the Council has requested the people to stay away from places of amusement. One thousand cases are reported at Newry. The spinning mills are short-handed and the schools have been closed.

An Important Collection of New Hats at $3.98

It is generally supposed that if you want an impressive, individual hat, you must pay a price accordingly. As a rule, this is true and the store that merely buys merchandise and sells it at a profit, is compelled to follow this plan. However, we believe that every expensive hat can be duplicated by eliminating certain expensive features and the most brought down to almost half. So you will find that practically every hat in the group is modeled after styles seen in New York Shops at $10, $15 and $25. The new ideas are brought out strikingly in these brown tones, in the large black hats, novel turban and scores of other models that bring out strikingly different suggestions.

Hats at $2.98

Our hats at $2.98 have a single idea back of them, as a rule. No great amount of trimming. It is the idea itself that makes this model stand out. This hat is a turban with a tall fancy at the front. Softly shirred. Petit.

Smart Fall Hats at $4.98

Wouldn't you turn your head back if you saw someone wearing an extremely odd yet fashionable hat? This hat is just the type that makes you want to glance at it a second time.

Has a most unusual draped crown of black velvet, one side chicly tilted down, the other raised; banded about with beautifully colored feathers.

He Won't Salute But He Will Fight

(By United Press.)

Paris, Oct. 4. (By Mail)—"The Chief" has smiled for the second time since he came to France—and it is the talk of the—th Infantry.

"The Chief" is Pte. Ross, a full-blooded Ute Indian. About a year ago he threw up his job herding sheep in the barren hills of Southern Arizona, walked 50 miles down to Bisbee, "rode the rods" to El Paso and enlisted. In the training camp he was nicknamed "The Chief." There also it was discovered that "The Chief" had unusual scouting abilities —both hereditary and acquired.

He was assigned as battalion scout. That's when he smiled the first time. Chief Ross is hardly a model soldier. He hardly ever salutes an officer and says "Ugh" for "Yes, sir," and shakes his head for "No, sir." Although he has a fair command of English, he talks very little Once only he was detected saluting an officer—that was when he had gone to the officer three times to ask for a leave pass. The third time he saluted.

But "The Chief" wiped out the little black marks for sins of omission in the fighting up on the Vesle.

A lone machine gun in a stone building about 200 yards in front of the Americans was holding up the advance. It was broad daylight—3 o'clock in the afternoon. The task of silencing the machine gun was given to "Chief" Ross and a picked patrol of three other men.

The patrol disappeared in to the brush with "The Chief" leading, with his pistol ready and two hand grenades in his hip pockets. The emplacement was "spotted" in the upper window of the stone house. Two men were left out in front in the bushes to draw the fire of the gun, while Ross stealthily worked up toward one side of the building, and his companion on the other. Ross crawled up to the side of the building unobserved, and edged around to where he could see the muzzle of the machine gun protruding from the window. Two seconds later a well-placed grenade burst in the room with the Germans, killing two and shattering the machine gun. The surviving German executed a strategic retreat through the rear window and slid down to the ground behind the building where he would be protected by another machine gun further back.

It was sure death to try to reach the running German from either side of the building The German was cunning, but not so cunning as "The Chief." He swung himself up to the window and crawled rapidly up the roof toward the ridge-pole. From that point of vantage he could see the enemy without danger to himself.

Three shots stopped the fleeing boche.

That was when "The Chief" smiled the second time, the boys of the —th Infantry declare. Some of them aver that "The Chief" emitted the Ute warwhoop, surprising the Germans so much that they stopped firing for a few minutes.

Once before the incident of the Vesle, so the boys say, "The Chief" almost smiled. A lieutenant expressed a desire for a pair of Germn field glasses within the hearing of Ross. That night he went out and came back within forty minutes with a fine pair of German glasses. As he presented them to the lieutenant he merely said "Heap easy," and almost smiled.

Milkmen and dancing masters are often at a loss without their pumps.

It's a pity some folks do not lose their tempers where they cannot find them again.

Army Bakery Does Excellent Work

(By United Press.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Oct. 4. (By Mail.)—"Where do you get this fine white bread?" is the question asked hundreds of times a day of the girls of the Red Cross canteen at Dijon

Then follows the explanation that the bread is obtained from the army bakery presided over by Capt. Ward, who has made a record famous throughout the army in France.

The plant started in October, 1917, with an output of 18,000 pounds of bread per day. It is now shipping 510,000 pounds of bread every twenty-four hours. And it doesn't tell the boche anything to say that the army bread factory is located a few miles from Dijon because its output is shipped over a territory of 180 miles.

To get in the supplies of flour, salt yeast and sugar needed for half a million pounds of bread is no small job, with transportation facilities as they are. Then the 250 tons of baked bread must be made and shipped on an unfailing schedule or some of Uncle Sam's soldiers will go hungry.

As the summer progressed conditions became easier at the army bakery in France. All through last winter and spring the bakery site was a sea of mud. French army camions which are notoriously venturesome, refused to risk themselves in the deep mud which surrounded the ovens.

All the fighting of the early months of 1918 was not done in the front line trenches. The baker boys fought in trenches half full of water in front of their ovens and boilers.

How they faced the job is evident from the signs they placed on the ends of these bakery trenches "No Fishing Allowed!" "No Bathing Permitted!" were among signs displayed by men who made a joke of the hardships incident to their part in winning the war. Some were bakers at home; most of them were not, but they all went cheerfully to work in hip boots baking bread in a morass of mud when that was the job assigned to them.

The force employed at the army bake shops numbered more than 2,000 by the end of August. Every section has a trade-mark, which is baked in the loaves it turns out. Every shipment is inspected, checked and dated, so that in case anything goes wrong the responsibility can be placed exactly.

The bread from Capt. Ward's bakery is sold to and served by the American Red Cross canteen, because it feeds from 8,000 to 10,000 soldiers per week on their way to and from Eastern sectors. Not all of them stop for bread, but the minimum ration served is coffee with milk and sugar.

Outside the canteen are five ten-gallon containers suspended from a framework. Each container has four spigots at the bottom for filling cups. When a troop train of 1,200 or 1,500 men is to be served there are no minutes to be wasted, but you can imagine what has happened sometimes when you see the sign displayed above the rack:

"Fill your cups. Don't drink of the spigot."

SALVATION LASSIES MAKE PANCAKES FOR SOLDIERS

Hot cakes for breakfast in trenches—that is the Sunday morning treat that allied soldiers are enjoying in France.

At home hot cakes are more or less of a treat, but in the trenches amid fire and shell—even the boys themselves can't describe what such a dish means to them.

Close to the front-line trenches, Salvation Army lassies are frying hot cakes for the boys.

It's a big job, too, as Captain Geneva Ladd, one of the American Salvation Army girls in France, writes in a letter just received by a friend at home. She writes:

"Pancakes is now the Sunday morning treat for the boys, and we make thousands of them. We usually start pancaking at eight in the morning and the other morning at eight o'clock the line was still so long with boys waiting that you couldn't see the end of it.

"We serve four to a boy in the front line, and more if he can get back again for seconds, or 'buts' as they call them. Maybe it isn't a big job serving those cakes hot! And if you think it isn't a job choose a real hot fire, and wear a soldier's all-wool O. D. shirt, and it's a grand and glorious feeling."

A Business Proposition

CANADA looks to YOU for help in making this great Victory Loan a success.

Canada needs your MONEY.

Ours is a country whose individual citizens are more prosperous than those of any other country in the world.

Canada has come to YOU--her citizens--with a straight business proposition.

That proposition, in a nutshell, is this:

"I need Three Hundred Million Dollars to help finish up my business over in Europe. Lend me the money for a short time at 5½ per cent. interest, payable half-yearly, and I pledge the return of every cent of your loan."

Plan to take all the Bonds you can possibly pay for. The payments are as follows:

10 per cent. on application.
20 per cent. December 6th, 1918.
20 per cent. January 6th, 1919
20 per cent. February 6th, 1919

The Manufacturers Want Duty Imposed on Electrical Goods Coming Into This Country

Present Condition Works Hardship on Canadian General Electric Company—Public Meeting Will be Held on Friday Evening on the Market Square—Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., and Mr. Frederick Nicholls Will Give Addresses—Mayor G. H. Duncan Will Preside

The Mayor has called a public meeting on the Market Square, with the permission of the Medical Officer of Health, for Friday evening. The matter to be discussed is vital to the interest of all manufacturing centres in Canada, and especially affects Peterboro at this time.

It appears that some little time ago the Canadian General Electric Company interviewed Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., regarding the fact that the C. G.E. had tendered on a large munition contract, and that the company had been turned down due, it is said, to the fact that the Union Government at Ottawa, had allowed the Canada Cement Company to import machinery and electrical equipment free of duty. This discrimination, it is claimed, deprived the C. G. E. plant at Peterboro of a $10,000,000 contract.

Mr. Burnham and Mr. E. G. Patterson, Superintendent of the C. G. E., went to Ottawa, saw the Minister of Customs and Sir George E. Foster, chairman of the War Trade Board, and verified the fact of the order in council. Meanwhile, at Mr. Burnham's request, the Prime Minister called for a report on the question.

Senator Nicholls, Mr. Burnham, M.P., Mr. Gillespie, M.P.P., and others, will speak at the meeting of protest on the market square, on Friday evening.

These matters are vital to Peterboro, and the government has been made to understand that such discrimination cannot be permitted.

The Letter.

The following letter from President Nicholls was addressed to Mr. J. H. Burnham:

Toronto, Oct. 26, 1918.

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P.,
Peterboro, Ont.

Dear Mr. Burnham: Please accept my thanks for the trouble you have been at in visiting Ottawa on our behalf. It is inconceivable that such regulations should be placed in force apparently without having been submitted to the Cabinet, or even to the Minister of Customs, particularly in view of the fact that one of the beneficiaries is the Canada Cement Company, of which Mr. T. P. Jones is the General Manager; Mr. Jones also being vice-chairman of the War Trade Board, which latter organization is responsible for the permit to import United States' goods into Canada free of duty.

This is a case of the grossest discrimination, as the fact that such imports could be made free, has not been made generally public, and our company, in common with many others, has paid large sums into the treasury for duties on machinery, which it was necessary to import, in order to enable us to engage in the manufacture of munitions and other war requisites of the United States.

Primarily Peterboro is at a disadvantage in so far as the loss of this business precluded us from employing as large a staff as we would otherwise be able to do, and I believe that the authorities at Peterboro should take some joint action towards bringing this matter officially to the notice of the Prime Minister.

Again thanking you for your personal consideration,

Yours sincerely,
Frederic Nicholls.

The German Armies Have Begun a New Retreat

British Troops Repulsed a Determined Enemy Counter Attack Heavy Fighting in Some Sectors.

OFFICIAL DESPATCHES

PARIS, Oct. 28.—Germany's armies have begun a new retreat, this time between the Oise and the Aisne. General Debeney's first army, in the teeth of stubborn resistance and repeated counter attacks, has succeeded in swinging on the right flank so that it faces east. It has reached Guis and Guise-Marle Road, driving the enemy before it. General Debeney is now in a position to push rapidly along the upper Oise Valley toward Hirson and Vervins through a level country devoid of streams. The first result of his progress is to force the enemy opposing the tenth and fifth French armies, exhausted by fruitless counter-attacks, to begin a backward movement which is eventually bound to extend to the front before Rethel. This will open to the fourth army a double passage of the Aisne and Ardennes Canal. General Debeney's success was won by sheer hard fighting. The importance of the enemy attached to stopping this progress up the Oise may be gathered from the fact that the Germans yesterday threw in three fresh divisions which, however, were knocked out.

ON FRENCH FRONT.
(Special to The Examiner.)

LONLON, Oct. 28.—"On the Lys front, south of Deynhe, French troops captured a farm which had been organized for defensive purposes taking 100 prisoners," Field Marshal Haig reported to-day in his special Belgian communique. "There is nothing to report on the left flank of the Flanders group of armies."

British troops Sunday repulsed a determined German effort to drive them from Famars, south of Valenciennes. Many Germans were killed in street fighting in the village. On the borders of Mormal Forest, south of Valenciennes, and north of Raismes Forest, north of Valenciennes, the British have improved positions slightly.

ARTILLERY ACTIVE.

HAVRE, Oct. 28.—"The enemies' artillery was active yesterday especially against the front lines and our communications," the Belgian War Office announced early to-day.

LONDON, Oct. 28.— (Official.) — British troops in their offensive on the Austro-Italian front up to last night had captured more than 5,600 prisoners. British also captured 25 guns, including six 9-inch howitzers.

The British advancing in Mesopotamia, have cut the road from Shergliet to Mosul, one of the principal lines of Turkish communication. This probably will force the Turks to fall back on Mosul.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of the Examiner.

The so-called "daylight saving scheme" from which we have just emerged is merely so much camouflage, which is used to deceive the ignorant, by manufacturers and other profiteers at the expense of the factory hands and others similarly engaged. The millionaires of the United States and of this country and those whom they control by their enormous wealth, have sufficient influence with the Governments of both countries to serve their own purposes. It was at their instigation that the measure was passed, so it has been said, on account of their interests in factories and workshops of all kinds.

When the agitation for better production of foodstuffs was inaugurated mechanics and others were urged to give at least one hour each day for that purpose. Now it it a well known fact to scientists and doctors that a man who works ten hours a day in a badly ventilated, overheated or non-heated factory, his first hours work will yield more satisfactory results than the last two hours, and so that in order to get his first and best hours of work, this legislation was secured. It created a lot of confusion and inconvenience, as farmers and other wise people did not observe it. I trust that such a measure will never be foisted upon us again.

Yours, etc.,

SUPREME WAR COUNCIL

the editor of the Die Zukun, of Berlin, as saying in an interview with the Berlinske Tidende of Copenhagen: "We started the war with a dirty trick and our subsequent victories have been results of dishonesty. William the 2nd is a film hero and Germany a vulgar cinematograph. We sit to-day on the ruin of thirty years of Hohenzollern politics."

BILL WILL STICK.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Oct. 28.— Emperor William has no intentitno of abdicating but is willing, if it is for the good of the people, to ordain that his right shall be reframed, according to a statement attributed to German court circles. So that the Kaiser shall become an "hereditary president like the King of England."

The communication is regarded here as merely an acknowledgment of the President's communication with an indication of an anxious desire of those in power at Berlin to hasten the coming definite statement of terms upon which their enemies will permit hostilities to cease. The President is expected to make no rejoinder. His personal exchanges with German authorities, officials said to-day, ended when he transmitted the correspondence to the Allies. The next step must be on the part of the co-belligerents.

ACCEPTS ALL VIEWS.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 28.—Austria, in her reply to President Wilson, accepts all views expressed by the President in his note of October 18. Austria says she is willing and ready without waiting the result of other negotiations, to negotiate peace an an immediate armistice on all Austro-Hungarian fronts.

HARVEY TOWNSHIP HAS INFLUENZA

That the influenza epidemic is not confined to the comparatively congested urban centres was indicated by the statement of Mr. Robert Shaw of Harvey ,this morning, who stated that there were many cases throughout that township. Mr. Shaw is the Harvey canvasser for the Victory Loan.

British Seamen's Grim Ledger May Upset Any Trickery in Peace Settlement With Huns

By Charles Edward Russell.

(Former European Director of United States Government Committee on Public Information and Member of American Labor Commission to European Allied Countries.)

"When the war is over we will do this, that and the other."

So say many eminent minds in the statesman and big business way of life genially settling affairs from large comfortable chairs in commodious offices.

When the war is over—yes. Well, the great question is whether, when the war is over, these Eminent Ones are going to have any hand on the machine or any say about the running of it.

On the morning after the Boche brutes had sunk the hospital ship Llandovery Castle the secretary of the British Merchant Seamen's League entered his office, took down an account book, like a ledger, and proceeded to make therein certain entries that probably will have more to do with things after the war than the executions of any eminent mind.

"Two hundred and thirty-four in one year, one month and six days," said the secretary." And add two months for the hospital is one year, three months and six days. And five years, eight months makes six years, one month and six days." So he added it up and struck off the total and put the book back on the shelf.

Nobody thinks very much now about that book and its grim accounts. It may be we shall all have to think a lot about it before we get through with this business.

SEAMEN HAVE A SCORE OF THEIR OWN

Many amiable souls imagine that when we cease to fight, the world will settle its little troubles and slip back into the old grooves and hum on as before. Maybe it will and maybe it will not.

Part of the commercial world looks forward to a restoration of trade with Germany and wonders how much Germany will want of raw materials and other things that can be sold at a profit; also how cheap certain German products are going to be after the war.

It is overlooking the fact that to transport things to Germany you must have ships and to operate ships you must have sailors, and if the British Merchant Seamen's League holds to its present purpose there will be no ships to trade with Germany, because there will be no sailors to operate them.

That is what the secretary meant the morning he was making marks in his book, and that is what the marks meant.

Every time the German pirates sink a ship and lives are lost the fact goes down in that book, and a certain fixed number of months or days is added to the period in which, after the war, British sailors will refuse absolutely to sail on ships that trade with Germany. It is a very large organization and very determined, and there are certain reasons why, when it starts upon its boycott, it will be likely to have its own way.

GREWSOME DEBT THAT GERMANY MUST PAY

In the rush and hurry of military events little has been said about the fact, but sailors of the British mercantile marine have suffered terribly in this war. German pirates have killed at sea more than fifteen thousand non-combatants—men, women and children—and of these about nine thousand have been sailors peaceably engaged upon their harmless occupation. Some of these have been shot while in the water struggling to save the lives of others. Many have been carried off to Germany and compelled to labor as slaves on the fortifications and in the munition plants.

All this, of course, has been in absolute violation of international law. The Hague treaties and solemn agreements as much as it has been in violation of all the dictates of humanity and decency.

The carefully verified records of some of these crimes will always read like the exploits of bands of homicidal maniacs. It seems clear that commanders of German submarines have made a point of treating with especial savagery every British seaman who has fallen in their way. Many times when a steamship has been sunk and the crew has been thrown into the water the Germans have opened the conning tower of the submarine to practice rifle shooting at the men in the waves and to jeer at them as they drowned.

FIENDISH TREATMENT OF HELPLESS MEN.

More than once the diabolical cruelty practised upon the unfortunate crew of the Belgian Prince has been repeated. More than once the sailors have been drawn upon the forward deck of the submarine to be taken to a place where they could be drowned without hope of rescue. More than once boats containing survivors of sunken steamships have been run down by submarines or shot to pieces with rifle fire.

These things have gone into the records of that book—every one of them. Day after day the account has mounted; for every murder so many days, for every ship sunk so many, with double count for hospital ships, because they sail upon errands of mercy that all men who are not Germans respect and protect.

The league has solemnly pledged itself and sworn that no matter what governments may promise or Cabinets may do, the long, blood-dripping score shall be paid in this way before there will be any trade with Germany. Into every agreement, into all the shipping articles to be signed by British seamen, there will have to be a clause exempting the crew from taking the ship into any German port. No seaman of the league will sail with Germans, handle any German goods or recognize Germany as a civilized nation until the account is squared—the account that grows with each new German crime.

One thing that prevents statesmanship here from taking a blithesome view of this prospect is the fact that the league evidently means what it says, and the British Seamen's Union of which it really is a part, has already proved its great power, stubborn will and disquieting readiness to butt in upon the sacred precincts of eminence.

SEAMEN'S UNION HAS SHOWN ITS POWER

Again and again governments have been willing to allow very well known men, classed as pacifists, to go to Stockholm conferences or to go to America on lecturing tours. The ships on which they have embarked have never left the docks, because the members of the Seamen's Union refused to work on any ship that carried such men.

Governments proposed, but the union disposed, and the word of the union stood.

If therefore, the union holds fast when the war is over there is no question that it can have its own way about some things, no matter who shall attempt to say it nay.

Germany (if we leave a Germany) will, of course, insist upon full commercial freedom, equal trading rights and no discriminations. Suppose the peace conference agrees to these demands or any of them. The Seamen's League can knock the peace conference's agreement through the ropes with one punch.

Because in free countries there is no possible way to make men work when they don't want to work. It can be done in Germany, but not among the democracies. If the sailors refuse to sail on ships to Germany the ships stay right where they are—tied up to the piers.

SEAMEN SAY TRAFFIC WILL NOT MOVE

Also suppose that under such conditions an attempt should be made to handle the boycotted traffic in German ships or neutral ships.

The 'longshoremen would refuse to touch them.

The cargoes would lie there and rot before they could be loaded or unloaded.

Railroad men would refuse to handle such freight at the terminals.

The people would support the strike; there could be no attempt to break it.

Statesmen may as well begin now to mull over this problem. If they think to save out of the approaching wreck a Germany that can turn the steam on again and go ahead as before, they will have the British shipping workman to deal with. He does not say much, but he has a habit of holding on when he clenches his teeth down on anything, and he seems to be hard set on this. The thousands of little homes in this country that have been darkened by the U-boat pirates may be forgotten by statesmanship, but they are well remembered by the Seamen's League, and are likely to be.

Yes, German submarine commanders have had great fun shooting British sailors who were struggling for life in the water. German newspapers rejoiced in the cold-blooded murder of Captain Fryatt. German crowds have jeered merrily at British sailors beaten and almost incredibly mistreated in German streets. But it looks as if a time were at hand when Germany will wish she could get away from the relentless record of all these things.

BOILER IS SHOEBOX.

(By United Press.)

PARIS, Oct. 4. (By Mail.) — Thirty thousand French refugees from the invaded districts are wearing new pairs of shoes as the result of an American woman and the enterprise of a Toledo business man. After seeing thousands of homeless, shoeless refugees in France, Mr. Mulholland of the Chautauqua Delegation, offered to supply the Red Cross with second hand boots collected in Ohio. Shipping space was at a premium, and the government needed every inch to transport men and food. But Miss Alice Archibald, of the Metropolitan Canteen Service, was undaunted. She arranged through relatives in Philadelphia to have the shoes shipped in the interior of locomotive boilers from the Baldwin Locomotive Works.

Pole Failed to Report to Police

Mr. Gordon Appears for "A Well-Meaning Pole."

Stanley Wilk, a Pole, employed by the Henry Hope Company was charged this morning with failing to report to the Chief of Police although an alien.

It seems that Wilk had reported since the beginning of the war up to about 10 months ago. Mr. G. N. Gordon conducted the defence.

"What will the fine be," asked Mr. Gordon.

"$2 and costs?"

"Yes" answered the magistrate.

"But your Worship," protested Crown Attorney Hatton this is a serious offense. He can be fined up to $500."

"And down to what?" asked Mr. Dumble.

"Fifty cents,' 'interrupted Mr. Gordon.

"Now you mustn't take the last drop of blood from a well-meaning Pole," said Mr. Gordon to the Crown Attorney."

"Not when you get it," retorted Mr. Hatton.

"Transfusion as it were."

COAL DEALERS MAY CHARGE 50C EXTRA FOR CARRYING COAL

The charges that dealers may make for carrying coal into houses are set forth in the following letter from Mr. C. W. Peterson, Deputy Fuel Controller, in which he first quotes the query received from the local Commission as follows:

"I am directed by the Board of Fuel Commissioners for Peterborough to say that they have been informed that coal dealers have, in addition to the prices for the coal, charged for bagging, for drawing and for carrying from the vehicle to the house, and to ask if it is legal for dealers to make a charge for any one or more of these services in addition to the price of the coal as allowed under Order-in-Council."

The gross margin is to be calculated on receipts and sales of tons of 2,000 lbs.

By gross margin is meant the difference in the cost of the coal f.o.b. cars at Peterborough, and retail selling price of such coal delivered in loads of one ton or thereabouts to the customers, when such coal is sluiced or shovelled into the customer's bins, and subject to the qualifications below. This maximum gross margin does not include freight or demurrage, but does include the cost of discharging, receiving, handling, delivery and overhead charges together with the profit as formerly allowed.

When the coal is carried into the customer's premises by the dealers' employees, an extra charge of 30c per ton is permitted. If the coal is carried upstairs an extra charge of 25c per ton per flight over this 30c will be allowed. These latter figures apply to loads of one ton or thereabouts but for delivery of half ton or less, the carrying-in charge will not exceed 35c and 15c extra for each flight up. In invoicing of coal dealers are required to show all extra charges for carrying-in, etc., as separate items on their invoice.

This maximum gross margin contemplates establishing the cash price and dealers' attention is called to the fact that they shall post in their office in a conspicuous place their credit price and any discount that they may allow for cash.

They will also notify the Local Fuel Commissioner of their city in writing of the prevailing price, and furthermore before any charge in their selling price is made, they are required to notify the Fuel Commissioner of such proposed change. The enforcement of the provision above referred to establishing a maximum gross margin supersedes for the time it is in force Section 14 of the Consolidated Regulations limiting a retail dealers' profit to 50c.

Shot Himself in the Head

Naturalized German Committed Suicide in Montreal.

(Special to Examiner.)

MONTREAL, Oct. 28. — Shooting himself in the head with a revolver, a naturalized German named Otto Oliver Hoffman, 28 years of age, employed at the hospital for incurables, Dunn avenue, Toronto, was taken to the Royal Victoria Hospital, from Bonaventure station last night, and died in the hospital later. He was found unconscious near the door of the Grand Trunk detectives office on Chaboillez Square by a constable from the Montfort street station, and by Detective Samson, of the Provincial police, who happened to be in the station at the time, and heard the shot.

People Asked to Conserve Coal

Influenza Epidemic is Effecting the Available Supplies.

There is a mistaken idea abroad that people having or obtaining soft coal will be prevented from obtaining hard coal. There are no restrictions whatever on soft coal and having soft coal does not prevent a person obtaining hard coal. People would do well to get in a little soft coal.

At the last meeting of the Fuel Commission an order was made allowing persons having egg coal to obtain a ton of nut or pea coal and persons having nut or pea coal to obtain a ton of egg coal.

People are urged to conserve coal this weather. Word has been received that owing to labour conditions due to the flu epidemic coal may be much scarcer than has been already anticipated.

Agrees to Regulation of Province of Alsace-Lorraine

German Foreign Secretary Declares Wilson's Programme Will be Loyally Fulfilled—A German Internal Question.

Amsterdam, Oct. 28. — "As for Alsace-Lorraine, it is at once clear that as these territories were expressly mentioned among Preside t Wilson's fourteen points, we agree to regulation of these questions," said Dr. W. S. Solf, German Foreign Secretary, in addressing the Reichstag (in the address referred to, President Wilson said that "the wrong done to France by Prussia in 1871 in the matter of Alsace-Lorraine, which has unsettled the peace of the world for nearly fifty years, should be righted.")

"Moreover, having accepted President Wilson's programme as the basis of the entire peace work," Dr. Solf continued, "We will loyally and in the sense of complete justice and fairness fulfill the programme in all directions and at all points."

Dr. Solf said that Spanish Minister Villalobor, representing British and Belgian citizens, and Commissioner Van Bree of the Belgian Relief Organization, visited Tourna, Valenciennes and Denain on Oct. 18th and reported that the German military authorities had done everything in their power to alleviate the condition of fugitives and residents in the bombarded towns.

Dr. Solf also said that it had been reported to him that the German authorities had tried to protect the people of those cities against plundering, and that efforts had been made to safeguard food supplies and save art treasures. Only men of military age had been forcibly removed, and even then exceptions had been made in the cases of prysicians, clergymen, firemen, policemen, and those employed in supplying food.

Referring to questions asked on the previous day, the Foreign Secretary said that the Government emphatically repudiated any doubt of its intention honestly to carry out the principles laid down by President Wilson. He added:

"Having in reply to the President taken its stand on his messages, the government is resolved to act accordingly."

Prominent Business Man Discusses New Victory Loan

32 Yonge St., Toronto, Oct. 18, 1918.
To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir:—On the eve of the Victory Loan I think that everyone, whether rich or poor, should make up his mind to do his share towards making it a success. We, who have been privileged to stay at home, well-fed, warm and comfortable, secure and safe, should feel bound to offer some help towards winning the war, and every true Canadian citizen, man or woman, can and should lend to the Government so that our men abroad shall be fed, clothed and armed.

Quite aside from the impelling force of duty is the attractiveness of the security itself. In the first place it yields nearly twice the interest one receives from a banking account, and as to security—it is guaranteed by every bank and article of value in the country whether it belongs to an individual, a municipality, a province, or to the Dominion Government.

Then as to the ability of Canada to carry out her obligations—

Some days ago I was looking over a pamphlet issued by the "National City Company" of New York, and according to its figures, Germany's War Loans per capita to date amount to $306; Great Britain's to $297; Austria's $202; France's $171; Australia's $187; Hungary's $107; the United States $97, and Canada's $93. Indeed Holland's mobilization Loans alone amount to over $44 per capita. To be sure the burdens on all countries will be heavy, but "In the kingdom of the blind the one-eyed man is King," and in this case Canadians will at worst be the "One-eyed Man" because our War Debt is considerably less than that of others and our resources incalculably more per capita.

It will, I think, be reasonable to assume that Canada in the future will progress in population as the United States did from the time they possessed a population of seven millions. In that case it is fair to imply that in twenty-five years Canada will possess a population of fifteen millions which would cut down our per capita debt by one-half. This is quite aside from the probability of our enemies paying our total war expenditure.

Then as to our capacity for production—

In 1900 Canada produced 56 million bushels of wheat, in 1917 she produced 234 million bushels, and only ten per cent. of our arable land in the North West is under cultivation.

Just as the relative value of money has for centuries been shrinking so will our debt as we pay interest and principal in produce. In the thirteenth century a bushel of wheat could be bought for seven pence, a cow for ten shillings and a sheep for a shilling and six pence, while a labourer's wage was three pence per day. In 1500 the price of an ox was twenty-two shillings; that of a sheep two shillings and four pence, and the wage of a labourer, six pence a day. The products of our labour will continue to enhance in value in their relation to gold, and I take it that the debt in twenty-five years will thus automatically reduce itself because it will take much less produce to pay its interest or to pay the debt itself. A labourer's wage has trebled in my time, when it reaches six dollars a day our debt will be reduced by half as this would be an infallible sign that labour can produce things to double the value in currency that it now does.

I have not by me, at the present, figures of the per capita wealth of Canadians, but in the case of the Americans in 1912 this amounted to about $2,000. If is fair then to assume that Canada's per capita wealth is a similar sum, in which case our total wealth amounts to about Fifteen Billions.

In 1912 or 1913 the German Government, preparing for war, imposed a sur tax of one-tenth of each man's capital which was made payable in three annual instalments, and there was no evidence, before the war, that this imposition materially disturbed the business of that country. Our total War Debt to date does not amount to anything like one-tenth of Canada's capital, and I am convinced that in twenty years Canada's War Debt will be as light a burden to Canadians as the Civil War Debt was to Americans twenty years after their Civil War.

Therefore taking into consideration our duty to Canada, the great obligation we are under to the noble fellows who are fighting for us in France, and the fact that the security offered is the very best and safest in the world, it is the duty of every man and woman to subscribe as much as possible toward the Victory Loan. Any Bank will purchase for you a Bond of from $50 upwards on a payment of five per cent. down on it and a promise that the balance will be paid off in six months. I am,

Yours sincerely,

P. C. LARKIN.

SAN FRANCISCO MAN GAINED 24 POUNDS

Fred Sanders Suffered Thirty Long Years—Spent Hundreds of Dollars.

"When I began taking Tanlac I only weighed one hundred and thirty-eight pounds," said Fred W. Sanders, while in the Owl Drug Store at 710 Market street, San Francisco, recently, "and I now tip the beam at one hundred and sixty, which gives me an actual gain of twenty-four pounds in two months' time.

"Mr. Sanders is a boiler-maker by trade, which occupation he states he gave up on account of ill health. He is now employed by the Glidden Varnish Company and lives at 702 Vallejo street. He has been a resident of San Francisco for forty years. In describing his troubles, which caused him so much suffering and loss of weight, Mr. Sanders said:

"I have suffered with my stomach thirty years or more. In fact, almost as far back as I can remember I have suffered from indigestion and constipation and these troubles have had me down and out many a time, especially during the past fifteen years. My stomach was so upset that nothing agreed with me and at times I couldn't even retain water on my stomach. I was bloated nearly all the time by the gas which formed after my meals and I simply suffered torture from the pains caused by it. I have tried about every diet a person could be put on. I could eat no fruits or meats and the very sight of eggs would upset my stomach. At one time I had a nervous breakdown, caused by these same troubles. I was laid up for six months at this time and spent over seven hundred dollars for treatment and medicines before I could get to work again. Since then I reckon I have spent twice that much more without getting more than a little passing relief. I finally had to give up my trade as boiler maker because the constant pounding and jar affected me so I was afraid of another break-down. I got so I couldn't sleep at night and fell off until I weighed only one hundred and thirty-six pounds.

"Seeing Tanlac advertised in the papers, and as it was a new one on me I decided to try it. Now, just let me tell you, it has done me most good than all the other medicines I have taken in the past ten years put together. And eat; why, I have the best appetite I have had in years and my big gain in weight shows how well my food agrees with me. My food all seems to digest perfectly and I never feel an ache or a pain. I sleep like a log at night and get up the morning thoroughly rested and ready for a big day's work. Tanlac certainly is some medicine and you may just count on me as one of the biggest boosters on the coast. I only wish I could have had it thirty years ago, it would have saved me a world of misery and pain I have been through all these years.

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd. In Havelock by A. C. Denike. In Lakefield by Tanner Druz Co., Ltd. In Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter. In Gelert by A. J. Scott. In Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

Will Continue Cheese Making Another Month

Cheese makers in the Peterborough district will probably continue operating until the end of November, a month longer than usual, according to Mr. R. W. Ward, the local instructor. In past seasons the end of October has found the factories closing, and the milk supply was sent to the butter factories or was churned at home. The Cheese Commission has urged the dairy farmers to maintain the cheese industry as long as possible this fall, and the present reports indicate that next month's make should be fairly large. One result from this departure will be reflected in the decreased production of November butter.

Canadian cheese and the Victory Loan go together. Nor is this surprising. The sale to Great Britain of the 1917 exportable surplus of Canadian cheese was made possible through the Victory Loan of last year. It is proposed to dispose of the 1918 product in the very same way. No wonder, then, that the Canadian cheese and the Victory Loan go together.

Here is what Sir Thomas White said recently on this subject: Take cheese, for example. We have an exportable surplus of Canadian cheese valued at approximately $40,000,000. Last year the Victory Loan made it possible to sell that surplus to the British Government for cash; without the loan it would have wanted a market. Canadian cheese has a high reputation in Great Britain, and it is most important that Canadian farmers should have this market maintained. This year we hope to be in a position to effect the purchase of our entire exportable surplus in the same way. The demand will be just as keen since British soldiers and the home population are the consumers to be served." It may be added that as cheese will bring 2c. a pound more this year than last and as the Cheese Commission will handle the whole of the product instead of only a part of it, as last year, the resulting benefit will thus be appreciably greater.

Great Britain likes our cheese, and expressed a desire to secure the whole of 1917 exportable surplus product. But, in common with a number of other things, she was not in a position to pay cash for it, and so asked for credit. Upon the Dominion Government then devolved the responsibility of advancing nearly $40,000,000, in order to finance the sale of the approximately 170,000,000 lbs. of cheese available. The Victory Loan made this possible.

How It Was Handled.

The work of handling the exportable surplus was entrusted to a Cheese Commission, consisting of three members, one nominated by the British, and the other two by the Canadian Government, Dr. J. A. Ruddick, and James Alexander being the latter representatives. Of this method of handling, Dr. Ruddick, in an address on the subject, said: "I am sure that in the days to come the producers will realize that if it had not been for the appointment of the Cheese Commission to relieve the situation the cheese industry of the country would have suffered a real disaster." This can readily be understood; for the war had completely upset the old conditions under which the export trade had been carried on.

New Industry For Lakefield

Lakefield Branch of Electrical Iron Company Will Employ Forty Men.

LAKEFIELD, Oct. 28.—The Electrical Iron Company Ltd., is the name of a new industry that has taken birth in Lakefield. Mr. H. J. McLeod, of Orillia, is superintendent in charge of the plant and Mr. B. C. Lamble is manager for the concern and also in charge of the plant at Orillia. The company will manufacture pig iron from steel turnings, or what is otherwise known as scrap steel from the various munition plants throughout the country. About forty men will be employed and the plant will be operating in about three weeks' time. The Electrical Iron Company has plants in Orillia and Welland in addition to the Lakefield plant.

The company is occupying the Lakefield plant of the Canada Cement Company, and is utilizing the company's power in the operation of an electrical furnace for the conversion of the scrap metal into pig iron. Large quantities of supplies, including lumber, is being shipped in from Peterborough for use in the plant.

206 Cars of Kansas Wheat Over the G.T.R. Here on Saturday

Two hundred and six cars of Kansas wheat were hauled through Peterborough on Sunday over the G.T.R. from Midland to Belleville. This wheat is being rushed to an eastern Canadian port as rapidly as possible, and is apparently given precedence over the movement of Canadian grain. It is a precedent in handling the crop of the Central West States which have always been carried over American roads to American ports. Under the McAdoo administration, however, the wheat has been diverted to the Canadian route primarily for the purpose of avoiding the congestion that tied up the terminals last winter and clogged both commerce and industry.

The G.T.R. cars average forty tons, and on that basis yesterday's haulage exceeded 8,000 tons. Mr. A. MacNab, the G.T.R. station agent, stated that this movement has been steady and unbroken for weeks, and the end is not yet in sight.

Will Take Off All Excess Fat

Do you know that there is a simple harmless effective remedy for overfatness that may be used safely and secretly by any man or woman who is losing the slimness of youth?

There is; and it is none other than the tablet form of the now famous Marmola Prescription, known as Marmola Prescription Tablets. You can well expect a reduction of from two to four pounds a week without dieting or exercising. Marmola Prescription Tablets are sold by all druggists at 75c for a large case, or if you prefer you can order direct from the Marmola Co., 864 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich.

VICTORY FOR ALLIES IS NOW IN PROSPECT

Wilson's Right Hand Man, in Paris on Mission, Speaks of New, Complex Problems.

PARIS, Oct. 28.—Col. E. M. House, who has arrived in Paris on a confidential mission for President Wilson, made the following statement to the Associated Press:

"It is with the keenest pleasure that I find myself again in France. Upon my last visit, some eleven months ago, the allies' fortunes, it seemed, had struck their lowest level. Those memorable days, when we counselled together and formulated plans looking towards military and naval unity and the co-ordination of war economies and industries, can never be forgotten.

"From that hour the clouds began to lift, and we could see, dimly at first, the stars of hope and victory which to-day are shining with such a steady and effulgent glow.

"We are now confronted with different and more complex problems—problems which I feel confident will be met with high courage and with the wisdom which comes from lofty motives and unselfish hearts."

Col. House told the semi-official Havas Agency that his trip had no co-relation with an armistice and he had not received from President Wilson and the American Government special powers to negotiate on this question. As regards future negotiations which might arise Col. House declined to talk.

The colonel added that the American press has been a faithful interpreter of the general feelings of the United States during the exchange of notes with Germany.

SPANISH INFLUENZA

This epidemic is now prevalent throughout Ontario, and in some localities is getting worse. Every precaution should be taken to prevent the spread of this dreaded disease. Keep your room well ventilated, eat no more nor less than what is required, as it attacks a great many people who suffer from indigestion. Wash the hands before eating, and every member of the house should have their own towels. Keep the mouth, throat and nose free from germs by using PYROLL as a spray and mouthwash two or three times a day.

PYROLL is not a Patent Medicine, the formula is on the bottle. Doctors, Dentists and Druggists recommend it as a preventative of La Grippe and Spanish Influenza. 3d-98

NEW INDUSTRY IN FRANCE

BATTLE ZONE WILL FURNISH LARGE QUANTITIES OF VALUABLE STEEL FOR FACTORIES.

France should have a new industry after this war, especially if the expenditure of shells continues another year or two. Each side, it is said, has used, since March 21, more than three million tons of steel in various sorts of shells. The aggregate of steel buried in the battle zone almost might make that strip a Mesaba mine. And the metal to be reclaimed would not be raw ore, or even pig iron but finished steel.

The battle zone, if lost for decades to agriculture, ought to prove valuable as a mine and a storehouse. Literally the major portion of the steel produced by four industrial nations will have been sown in that zone for a term of years. The dead weight of the stuff is simply stupendous, enough, in fact, to mineralize very acre that has been fought over. Drenched in steel those square miles of battlefield have been, until the reclamation of the metal, should amount to millions of dollars in worth. The Germans, who have exploited the captured mines of Briey, are transferring the product in a refined shape to the Picardese countryside. Rheims, perhaps, can be rebuilt from the price of the metals shot into her.

Frank Montgomery Died This Morning

The Deceased Was Well Known in Local Athletic Circles.

Word was received late this afternoon that Mr. Frank Montgomery had succumbed to pneumonia in Oshawa this morning. Mr. Montgomery had been ill with pneumonia for 12 days which succeeded Spanish influenza. Mr. Montgomery played on the Peterboro Junior O.H., hockey team for Peterboro in the season of 1916-17. Last winter he played for the Sarnia team. He left for Oshawa in the latter part of July where he intended playing hockey this winter. The deceased also played for the Matthews-Blackwell team in the Twilight league.

The body will be brought to the city and the funeral will take place from the residence of his sister, Mrs. Thomas H. Skinner, 354 Stewart street to Little Lake Cemetery. Rev. Mr. MacKenzie of Knox Presbyterian Church will officiate.

Mrs. Skinner received word on Saturday night that her husband Pte. Thomas Skinner of the 21st Canadians, had been badly wounded.

THE MOST COMMON AILMENT

Kidney diseases are our most common ailments. When the kidneys fail to remove the inert poisons from the system, nature will attempt to get rid of them in some other way in the form of pimples, boils and other skin diseases which are due to the poisons remaining in the system. Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills will free the system of these poisonous acids, and you should have no hesitation in trying them.

SITUATION IS BETTER TO-DAY.

TORONTO, Oct. 28.—Toronto's Medical Officer of Health to-day admits that there is indisputable evidence that the crest has been passed locally in the influenza epidemic. From other parts of Ontario, also, news in this regard was very encouraging to-day. In Western Canada the situation continues very serious.

ALEPPO OCCUPIED BY THE BRITISH

LONDON, Oct. 28. — Aleppo was occupied by the British on Saturday morning, says a British official statement issued here.

The Turks at the beginning of last week were defending Aleppo with 12,000 men ,but these retired to the north. No news has yet been received that the railway junction, six miles beyond Aleppo, has been captured, but it is not believed that the Turks will attempt to defend it, and the fall of the railway junction will mean that a vital artery of the enemy communications has been cut.

The fall of Aleppo is expected to be a decisive factor in determining Turkey to sue for peace.

The fall of Aleppo to the British is the crowning event of the victorious campaign of General Allenby, in which he captured Jerusalem and Damascus on his way northward through Palestine and Syria.

Aleppo is 185 miles north of Dammascus and 70 miles east of the Mediterranean Sea.

THE WEATHER

October is going to be a close second to September for rain, the fair days being in the minority, and decidedly so. The total amount, however, will probably not equal that of September. To-day's Victory Loan Results

TORONTO, Oct. 28.—With guns booming and whistles blowing in all the big cities of Ontario, the first day of actual canvassing for the Victory Loan, 1918, began this morning all over the province. In most cities of Central and Western Ontario, the beginning of the work was accompanied by a generous downpour of rain, but the Victory Loan workers, far from allowing their spirits to be dampened by this, heralded the incidental weather conditions as forerunner showers of blessing, so far as their work is concerned.

Few figures of actual results are available at noon, but it was stated generally that the summary sales tonight in practically all localities would indicate that the campaign had opened with a bumper day. Sales in this city till noon were $845,000.

SEN. RICHARDSON DIES AT KINGSTON

FOUND TO HAVE PASSED AWAY OF HEART FAILURE DURING SLEEP

KINGSTON, Oct. 28.—Senator Henry W. Richardson, was found dead in bed at his home, "Alwington," by members of his family about 8 o'clock yesterday morning. Doctors were summonded and gave it as their opinion that death has ensued during sleep, probably two hours previous Heart failure was the cause. The Senator was in his usual good health Saturday, and went up to Two Brothers Islands, just west of here, in the afternoon to shoot ducks. In the evening he was at the Frontenac Club and retired about midnight.

Senator Richardson, after a most strenuous business career, died, as he had often expressed a wish to die—right in harness at the last. He was head of the big grain forwarding firm of James Richardson & Sons, Limited for the past twelve years, and identified with it all his life. The death of his nephew, Capt. George T. Richardson, in action three years ago, was a great blow to him, as he was his right-hand partner and adviser.

Thy Will Be Done.

We little thought when he said goodbye,
He had gone to a far-off land to die;
His heart was good, his spirit brave,
He is laid to rest in a soldier's grave;
O' God, above in your loving peace,
Find for him a resting place.

Rest on dear father, thy labour's o'er,
Thy willing hand will toil no more;
A faithful father true and kind,
No friends on earth like thee we find;

Dual Monarchy Accepts President Wilson's Terms

Text of Austrian Reply Emphasized Desire to Enter Into Negotiations for an Armistice and Peace—"No Obstacle Exists as to Beginning."

ADHERES TO VIEW ON CZECHO-SLOVAK RIGHTS

BASEL, Oct. 29.— The text of the Austrian reply to President Wilson reads:

"Austro-Hungary, accepting all the conditions the President has laid down for the entry into negotiations for an armistice and peace, no obstacle exists, according to the judgment of the Austro-Hungarian Government, to the beginning of these negotiations.

"The Austro-Hungarian Government declares itself ready, in consequent, without awaiting the result of other negotiations to enter into negotiations upon peace between Austro-Hungary and the States in the opposing group and for an immediate armistice upon all Austro-Hungarian fronts.

"It asks President Wilson to be so kind as to begin overtures on this subject."

The Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister instructed the Austro-Hungarian Minister at Stockholm yesterday to ask the Swedish Government to send the following note to the Washington Government:

"In reply to the note of President Wilson of the 19th of this month, addressed to the Austro-Hungarian Government and giving the decision of the President to speak directly with the Austro-Hungarian Government on the question of an armistice and of peace, the Austro-Hungarian Government has the honour to declare that equally with the preceding proclamations of the President, it adheres also to the same point of view contained in the last note upon the rights of the Austro-Hungarian peoples, especially those of the Czecho-Slovaks and the Jugoslaves.

New Citizen Soldier Rule is Used in Army

(By United Press.)

PARIS, Oct. 5.—(By Mail.)— Unnaturalized soldiers of the American expeditionary force may become citizens of the United States by signing a document—thereby cutting short the usual process by 5 years.

Under a general order from Gen. Pershing the applicant merely signs a paper which combines all the complicated processes of naturalization. Even if he has lived in the United States but a few hours before enlisting, the applicant has the same privileges. Subjects of enemy nations, if considered loyal, may renounce their allegiance and become American citizens by the same process. Before allowing a soldier to take the step, commanding officers are instructed to ascertain that the alien understands his action and is sincere in his desire for citizenship.

OFFICIAL PROSPECTUS

The Proceeds of this Loan will be used for War purposes only, and will be spent wholly in Canada

THE MINISTER OF FINANCE OF THE DOMINION OF CANADA offers for Public Subscription the Victory Loan 1918

$300,000,000. 5½% Gold Bonds

Bearing interest from November 1st, 1918, and offered in two maturities, the choice of which is optional with the subscriber as follows:
5 year Bonds due November 1st, 1923
15 year Bonds due November 1st, 1933

Principal payable without charge at the Office of the Minister of Finance and Receiver General at Ottawa, or at the Office of the Assistant Receiver General at Halifax, St. John, Charlottetown, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary and Victoria.
Bonds may be registered as to principal or as to principal and interest, at any of the above-mentioned offices.
Interest payable, without charge, half-yearly, May 1st and November 1st, at any branch in Canada of any Chartered Bank.

Principal and Interest payable in Gold
Denominations: $50, $100, $500 and $1,000

Issue Price: 100 and Accrued Interest

Income Return 5½% per Annum

Free from taxes—including any income tax—imposed in pursuance of legislation enacted by the Parliament of Canada.

The proceeds of the Loan will be used for war purposes only, including the purchase of grain, foodstuffs, munitions and other supplies, and will be spent wholly in Canada.

Payment to be made as follows:
10% on application; 20% January 6th, 1919;
20% December 6th, 1918; 20% February 6th, 1919;
31.16% March 6th, 1919.

The last payment of 31.16% covers 30% balance of principal and 1.16% representing accrued interest at 5½% from November 1st to due dates of the respective instalments.

A full half year's interest will be paid on May 1st, 1919, making the cost of the bonds 100 and interest.

Subscriptions may be paid in full at the time of application at 100 without interest; or on any instalment due date thereafter together with accrued interest at the rate of 5½% per annum.

This Loan is authorised under Act of the Parliament of Canada, and both principal and interest are a charge upon the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

The Amount of this issue is $300,000,000, exclusive of the amount (if any) paid for by the surrender of bonds of previous issues. The Minister of Finance, however, reserves the right to allot the whole or any part of the amount subscribed in excess of $300,000,000.

Conversion Privileges

Bonds of this issue will, in the event of future issues of like maturity, or longer, made by the Government, during the remaining period of the War, other than issues made abroad, be accepted at 100 and accrued interest, as the equivalent of cash for the purpose of subscription to such issues.

Payments

All cheques, drafts, etc., covering instalments, are to be made payable to the Credit of the Minister of Finance. Failure to pay any instalment when due will render previous payments liable to forfeiture, and the allotment to cancellation. Subscriptions must be accompanied by a deposit of 10% of the amount subscribed. Official Canvassers will forward subscriptions or any branch in Canada of any Chartered Bank will accept subscriptions and issue receipts.

Subscriptions may be paid in full at time of application at 100 without interest; or on any instalment due date thereafter together with accrued interest to time of making payment in full. Under this provision, payment of subscriptions may be made as follows:—
If paid in full on or before Nov. 16th, 1918, par without interest, or 100%.
If remaining instalments paid on Dec. 6th, 1918, balance of 90% and interest, ($90.48 per $100.)
If remaining instalments paid on Jan. 6th, 1919, balance of 70% and interest, ($70.80 per $100.)
If remaining instalments paid on Feb. 6th, 1919, balance of 50% and interest, ($51.04 per $100.)
If remaining instalment paid on Mar. 6th, 1919, balance of 30% and interest, ($31.16 per $100.)

Denomination and Registration

Bearer bonds, with coupons, will be issued in denominations of $50., $100., $500., and $1,000., and may be registered as to principal. The first coupon attached to these bonds will be due on May 1st, 1919.

Fully registered bonds, the interest on which is paid direct to the owner by Government cheque, will be issued in denominations of $50., $100., $500., $1,000., $5,000., $10,000., $25,000., $50,000., $100,000., or any multiple of $100,000.

Payment of Interest

A full half year's interest at the rate of 5½% per annum will be paid May 1st, 1919.

Form of Bond and Delivery

Subscribers must indicate on their application the form of bond and the denominations required, and the securities allocated will be delivered by the bank upon payment of the subscription in full.

Bearer bonds of this issue will be available for delivery at the time of application to subscribers desirous of making payment in full. Bonds registered as to principal only, or fully registered as to principal and interest, will be delivered to subscribers making payment in full, as soon as the required registration can be made.

Payment of all instalments must be made at the bank originally named by the subscriber.

Non-negotiable receipts will be furnished to all subscribers who desire to pay by instalments. These receipts will be exchangeable at subscriber's bank for bonds on any instalment date when subscription is paid in full.

Form of Bonds Interchangeable

Subject to the payment of 25 cents for each new bond issued, holders of fully registered bonds without coupons, will have the right to convert into bonds with coupons and holders of bonds with coupons will have the right to convert into fully registered bonds without coupons, at any time, on application to the Minister of Finance or any Assistant Receiver General.

Forms of application may be obtained from any Official Canvasser, from any Victory Loan Committee, or member thereof, or from any branch in Canada of any Chartered Bank.

Subscription Lists will close on or before November 16th, 1918

GRAIN MARKET

Prospect of an early peace was again the dominant bear factor in lowering the corn market yesterday. The November option closed 1 1-2 cents lower than Saturday's close. Oats but slightly affected, as the cash oats situation continues quite strong. Winnipeg November option closed 1-4 cents off.

Manitoba wheat—In store, Fort William, nominal (not including 2 1-2c. tax); No. 1 northern, $2.24 1-2; No. 2 northern, $2.21½; No. 3 northern, $2.17 1-2; No. 4 wheat, $2.11 1-2.

Manitoba oats—No. 2 C.W., 86c. in store, Fort William; No. 3, 83c.; extra No. 1 feed, 83c.; No. 2 feed, 81c.

American corn—Not quoted.

Ontario wheat—No. 1 winter, $2.19 to $2.23; No. 2 winter, $2.11 to $2.19; No. 3 winter, $2.07 to $2.15; No. 2 spring, $2.06 to $2.14; No. 3 spring, $2.02 to $2.10, f.o.b. shipping points, according to freights.

Ontario oats—No. 2 white, new crop, 75c. to 78c.; No. 3, 74c. to 77c., according to freight outside.

Barley—Malting, new crop, $1.02 to $1.07.

Peas—No. 2 nominal.

Buckwheat—Nominal.

Rye—No. 2 nominal.

Ontario flour — War quality, $10.75, Toronto-Montreal, $10.75, new bags.

Manitoba flour—War quality, $11.65, old crop, Toronto.

Millfeed—Car lots, delivered Montreal; shorts, $42.25; bran, $37.25; feed flour, not quoted; middlings not quoted.

Hay—Baled, track, Toronto, car lots—No. 2, $22 to $23; No. 2 mixed, $20 to $21.50 per ton; straw, car lots, $9.50 to $10.50.

CATTLE MARKET

Union Stock Yards—Receipts yesterday, 231 cars, with 3,593 cattle, 220 calves, 2,243 hogs, and 3,914 sheep and lambs.

With a shade better tone to the market for anything of weight and quality, prices averaged good and steady with last week's close, the only further decline being in canners, which were off about 25 cents. Good weighty steers are again in demand, but not many available, one load selling at $13.50 and another load at $12.75. Good butcher steers and heifers were in fair demand at steady prices.

Stocker trade still quiet, but good prices paid for extra choice quality.

Choice veal calves scarce and firm.

Sheep and lambs steady.

Hogs steady at $18.25 fed for all hogs marketed yesterday. Packers are quoting 50 cents lower for to-day's market.

WITH THE ALLIED ARMIES ON THE SERBIAN FRONT, VIA SALONIKI, Oct. 28.—With the capture of Nish sufficient rolling stock was taken to establish shortly communications from the Serbian front to the sea.

The enemy, in addition to showing his intention of evacuating Serbia as quickly as possible apparently desires to give evidence of a more conciliatory spirit. At the important gold mine near Zaytcher which was abandoned last week the machinery has been found dntact. It was in charge of an Austrian superintendent who was left behind with instructions to turn over the mine to the Serbians.

Blenders and Roasters of "Seal Brand" Coffee

THE WIFE

BY JANE PHELPS

AT THE END OF A MONTH RUTH'S SALARY IS DOUBLED.

It was a very uncomfortable evening for both of them, that first evening after Ruth had taken her position. She tried to talk, but Brian was sulky, almost morose. Only once more had he referred to her action in any way. Then he had hinted that Mr. Mandel—who ,he told her, was a bachelor—was in love with her.

Ruth had made no reply. Mrs. Murphy had not been able to come up to clear away, and for once she was glad that work in the kitchen kept her busy. Brian buried himself in his paper, although she thought he might have offered to assist her.

After she had finished, as he still seemed disinclined for conversation, she spent half an hour writing out an advertisement for a working woman to care for the flat. She would start early, take it to the newspaper office before she went to work; perhaps she could find some one at once. It was the thirteenth of the month—usually a lucky day for her.

She said nothing to Brian. After she had everything going smoothly, there would be time enough to talk things over. Other plans seethed in her brain, plans for his comfort and hers.

After two days' advertising, Ruth had many replies. She finally wrote one of those who had replied, to call. One who lived nearest her.

"Mrs. Crawford" had been the name signed to the reply which had been written unusually well.

Ruth had engaged her at once. She was so clean, so neat in her person; and seemed at once to understand what Ruth required.

"I cannot pay large wages," Ruth explained, 'But the place is so small that I am sure it will not require all your time to keep it in order."

Mrs. Crawford agreed to come in the morning early, get breakfast, and remain until the flat was in order. Then to return in time to cook the dinner. She had an invalid mother, and such an arrangement was ideal for her. Of course she would sleep home.

"She would have to, anyway, unless she slept on the kitchen table."

Ruth told Brian, when she explained what arrangement she had made.

"I hope it will work. I haven't much faith in it," he grouched.

But it did! Mrs. Crawford was an excellent cook and manager. It did not cost as much to live as it had when Ruth attended to things, and they lived far better.

"You see, Brian, she knows how to buy; and then, after she gets the things, she knows how to cook them."

"She is SOME cook all right," he returned, mollified by the good dinner she had served them on her first night.

"Oh, doesn't it all taste good?" Ruth exclaimed, as she helped herself to more creamed potatoes. "I don't wonder, after the messes I put on the table!"

"You would have done all right after a while." He would not be too easily appeased.

"Yes, after we were both dead from mal-nutrition."

It was working better than even she had dared hope, Ruth thought often. And she was so much happier. She had fitted into her place at the shop in the same capable manner that Mrs. Crawford had, at the house. Brian, too, if not reconciled, soon ceased to be cross, and was his own bright, optimistic self again. Now it was:

"I'll take you out of that pretty soon, now Ruth! Things are picking up at the office."

Ruth never contradicted him; she only smiled and told him she was pleased that he thought he would soon do better. They had come to a very amicable arrangement as regarded expenses, and the fact that he had more money in his pocket—felt more free to spend a little—might have had something to do with Brian's good nature.

Brian was to pay the rent, ice, electricity, gas ,etc. Ruth was to pay the maid, then they would divide the grocery and meat bills between them. It was a very equable arrangement, and left them both with quite a little balance for spending money.

Brian insisted on paying for all amusements, and they went out oftener, now that they had a little money in their pockets.

"It is only fair when you are to buy all your own clothes," he had said when Ruth objected.

One plan Ruth had, of which she had not breathed a word to Brian. Just as soon as she had her promised raise, she was going to rent a better apartment, nearer the office, and furnish it daintily. Sometimes she spent part of her noon hour looking, yet not daring to think she would be able to make any change for a long time. She had found one or two delightful places, the rooms not much larger than where they were, but new and so clean. But—more to her than all the rest—they were not decorated. The entrances were plain, but there was an elevator, telephone service, and many other improvements not found in her present quarters.

She had been in her position just a month when Mr. Mandel said to her:

"You are very much more competent than I supposed you were when I hired you. From now on, your salary will be forty dollars a week."

Ruth could scarcely believe in her good fortune, nor could she imagine the effect it was to have on Brian.

Corns Lift Off

Doesn't hurt a bit to lift any corn or callus off with fingers.

No humbug! You truly can lift off every hard corn, soft corn or corn between the toes, as well as hardened calluses on bottom of feet without one bit of pain.

A genius in Cincinnati discovered freezone. It is an ether compound and tiny bottles of this magic fluid can now be had at any drug store for a few cents.

Apply several drops of this freezone upon a tender, aching corn or a callus. Instantly all soreness disappears and shortly you will find the corn or callus so shriveled and loose that you lift it off with the fingers. You feel no pain while applying freezone or afterwards.

Just think! No more corns or calluses to torture you and they go without causing one twinge of pain or soreness.

Ladies! Keep a tiny bottle of freezone on the dresser and never let a corn or callus ache twice.

YANKS NOW WEAR THEIR BIG HATS ON THEIR FEET

(By United Press.)

Paris, Sept. 30 (By Mail.)—At last a use has been discovered for the old abandoned American campaign hat. It is found unsuitable at the front, and the little peaked "overseas" hat substituted. That left thousands of the hats on the hands of the supply department. After racking its brain, the salvage department has hit upon a scheme.

With the felt from the hats and cloth from badly torn pants, the salvagers are now making soft slippers for wear in hospitals.

Young Poet Killed in France

SERGT. JOYCE KILMER, of the 165th Infantry of the Rainbow Division, New York, has been killed in France. He was 31 years old.

Sergt. Kilmer was for many years a well-known American newspaper man and writer of verse, his poem on the sinking of the Lusitania, which was published immediately following the torpedoing, having been copied in all parts of the United States, Great Britain, and the British colonies. That poem, a close friend of the dead soldier said, expressed the deep-seated conviction of Sergt. Kilmer regarding the great war, a conviction on which he acted when, seventeen days after Congress declared war, he enlisted as a private in the 7th Infantry, from which in the August following he was transferred to the Headquarters Company of the 165th Infantry.

Mr. Kilmer was born in New Brunswick, N.J., where his parents still live, Dec. 6, 1886. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Barnett Kilmer, and was a graduate of Rutgers College, 1904, and of Columbia University, 1908. His wife, who, with four little children, survive him, was Miss Aline Murray, of Norfolk, Va., a stepdaughter of Henry Mills Arden, the editor of Harper's Weekly.

Sergt. Kilmer joined the staff of the Sunday Magazine of the New York Times in May, 1913. Prior to that time he had been Latin Master of the Morristown High School and a member of the editorial staff of the Standard Dictionary.

"The White Ships and the Red," the poem which Sergt. Kilmer wrote following the destruction of the Lusitania, appeared in the Times of May 16, 1915. The last three verses read:

I went not forth to battle,
I carried friendly men,
The children played about my decks,
The women sang—and then—
And then—the sun blushed scarlet,
And heaven hid its face
The world that God created,
Became a shameful place.

My wrong cries out for vengeance
The blow that sent me here
Was aimed in Hell. My dying scream
Has reached Jehovah's ear.

Not all the seven oceans
Shall wash away the stain;
Upon a brow that wears a crown
I am the brand of Cain.

When God's great voice assembles
The fleet on Judgment Day,
The ghosts of ruined ships will rise
In sea and strait and bay.
Though they have lain for ages
Beneath the changeless flood,
They shall be white as silver
But one—shall be like blood.

In his last year with the Times Sergt. Kilmer was lecturer on the technique of verse in the department of journalism at New York University. His published works included "Trees and Other Poems," "Literature in the Making," "Main Street and Other Poems," "Summer of Love," and "The Circus and Other Essays."

Sergt. Kilmer was transferred from the 107th Infantry at Camp Wadsworth, S.C., to the 165th Infantry a short time before the Rainbow Division sailed for France. He was in the thick of the Marne fighting from the day the great Allied offensive began until he was mortally wounded on August 1. In the Evening Sun of August 8 a correspondent mentioned Kilmer.

"During the fighting on the edge of Coles Wood," the story read, "Someone wearing an American uniform appeared shouting 'withdraw.' A party composed of Major Donovan, Joyce Kilmer, John Kales, the Major's 'Admirable Crichton,' and an orderly reconnoitered and found that he was a boche dressed in captured clothing."

Sergt. Kilmer was a member of the Delta Upsilon Fraternity, the Poetry Society of America, the Dickens Fellowship, the Columbia University Club, the Authors' Club, and the Vagabonds. His home when he entered the service was at Larchmont.

The One Speech M. P.

No member ever impressed the house of commons with his gift of silence more than General Forester. This sensible man represented Much Wenlock for forty-six years and never made a speech. One member, Sir Charles Burrell, sat for sixty years, restraining himself nobly. He made one speech only in order to introduce a bill providing that bonst-maids should be forbidden to clean windows from the outside.—London Chronicle.

NOSE CLOGGED FROM A COLD OR CATARRH

CREW WOULDN'T SAIL WITH ANY PACIFISTS

Henderson, His Secretary, and Belgian Socialist Thus Classified.

LONDON, Oct. 28.—Arthur Henderson, his secretary, and the Belgian Socialist, Camille Huysman, were unable to go to France Saturday with Albert Thomas and M. Vandervelde, because the crew of their ship refused to sail if they were aboard. The men said that they would not sail with the pacifists and pro-Germans. Mr. Henderson and his companions left the ship and hailed a taxi-cab, but the driver refused to take them, and they had to carry their luggage to the station. Mr. Henderson subsequently stated in London that he was going to Paris to meet Samuel Gompers in connection with the organization of the world's labour conference after the war.

Some British Sinecures.

Gladstone was born at a time when sinecures such as those held by Horace Walpole still abounded, and to the end of his life he took a lenient view of the persons who profited by them. A. G. C. Liddell records in his diary on March 12, 1892: "Dined with the Cobhams. Mr. Gladstone there. * * * Some one alluded to the diminution of sinecures. Mr. Gladstone said that there was nothing dishonorable in accepting a sinecure if it was recognized by the society in which it existed and not considered unusual or unworthy. One of the last sinecures, where there was absolutely nothing to do, which was not the case with all sinecures, was the office of chief justice in eyre, north of the Trent. It was held by Cornwallis-Neville and was worth £12,000 or £13,000."—London Spectator

Negroes Hate Teutons.

The negro races have their own particular score to settle with the Imperial German Government. Perhaps that is why the colored soldiers of the British, American and French armies are making themselves so heartily feared by the Teutons.

Extermination of whole tribes was the policy pursued by the Germans in their African colonies. Gen. von Trotha issued a proclamation to the Hereros, in Southwest Africa, as follows: "The Hereros must now quit the soil. If they refuse, I shall force them with the gun. Every Herero, with or without a weapon, with or without cattle, found in German territory, I will have shot. I shall not look after the women and children, but will drive them back to their own people or shoot them."

The German pastor, Schowalter, wrote in 1907, that, as a result of this policy about 15,000 Hereros died of hunger on the desert.

Dr. Rohrbach, Imperial Commissioner for Southwest Africa, reported that "The question is solved. The Hereros have lost their land; but that cannot be regarded as tragic, owing to the splendid fertility of the land, which is now fixed."

A CHILD HATES OIL, CALOMEL, PILLS FOR LIVER AND BOWELS

GIVE "CALIFORNIA SYRUP OF FIGS" IF CROSS, SICK, FEVERISH, CONSTIPATED.

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the "dose" mother insisted on—castor oil, calomel, cathartics. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. Mothers who cling to the old form of physic simply don't realize what they do. The children's revolt is well founded. Their tender little "insides" are injured by them.

If your child's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing, give only delicious "California Syrup of Figs." Its action is positive, but gentle. Millions of mothers keep this harmless "fruit laxative" handy; they know children love to take it; that it never fails to clean the liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach, and that a teaspoonful given today saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on each bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. See that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

Just Run Into It.

Elements mix in a railroad station, but that of humor predominates. The other day a man entered the Grand Central hurriedly. He afterward explained he had to meet a country cousin coming in. He rushed over to a friend who knew of his errand.

"Am I late?" he asked.

"No; the train just ran into the station," he was told.

"Ran into it!" he blurted. "Was anybody hurt?"—New York Tribune.

Conflicting.

"What's the matter?" a colleague asked of the advertising manager.

OUR MINDS AND HEALTH.

Power of Suggestion of Great Help In Curing Sick.

The power of suggestion in helping sick men to recover their health has played its part in folk-medicine at least since the beginning of history, according to Dr. Abram Lipsky. Even the Assyrians practiced it.

"Scientific psychotherapy has undoubtedly taken this hint of reinforcing verbal suggestion with a trivial action from popular practice. The device is perhaps best known in popular medicine as applied to the cure of warts. You strike the wart downwards three times with the knot of a reed as you make your auto-suggestion, or you rub it seven times with the third finger of the left hand in the direction in which the sun moves; or you wet your fore-finger with saliva and stroke the wart in the direction af a passing funeral; or you touch each wart with a pebble, place the plebbles in a bag and lose them—the finder getting the warts; or you tie as many knots in a hair as you have warts and throw the hair way; or you steal a piece of bacon, rub the wart and slip the bacon under the bark of an ash tree, thus causing the warts to disappear from your hand and appear on the bark; or you get another, by hook or crook, to count your warts, when they will pass over to him.

"Let it not be supposed that the foregoing remedies are merely prescriptions, but not cures. Innumerable experiments have been made with them by persons who sincerely believed in their efficacy, and the evidence of their success is as abundant as that of the success of more academic methods—and those enumerated do not begin to exhaust the list—shows that the particular differences between them are of no consequence, but that any device based on the faith of the patient may be employed to utilize the control which the mind, under certain circumstances, may exercise over the so-called vegetative processes of the human system.

"That the most powerful suggestion may fail of its object is, of course, perfectly well known. A case is reported of a German peasant, unpleasantly endowed with too many warts, who stood on his head in a newly-made grave. To a superstitious yokel this was an extremely powerful suggestion, but the warts remained.

"The strange, the mysterious and the weird have great suggestive potency, and hence drugs culled at unearthly hours, during unusual conjunctions of the moon and planets, on St. John's Eve or St. Agnes' Eve, have unusual curative properties."

Dr. Lipsky says that the practice of medicine even to-day is an art based largely upon the empirical tales learned from the experience of the common people. Scientific medicine, he says, has in the past adopted into its pharmacopoeia a great many of the "simples" cherished by the common people, but has discarded their innumerable hints as to the value of psychotherapy, and is now beginning to turn to this neglected wisdom, to make use of spiritual "simples," and to learn what curative powers reside in the soul.

Mole Superstitions.

According to tradition, if you have a mole on your chin you may expect to be wealthy, while if you have it under your arm it promises you wealth and honor as well. A mole on the ankle indicates courage. On the left temple a mole indicates that you will find friends among the great ones of the earth, but if it be placed on the right temple it warns you of coming distress. A mole on a man's knee means that he may expect to marry a rich woman. A mole on the neck promises wealth. If you have a mole on your nose you are going to be a great traveler. A mole on the throat indicates health and wealth.

Babylon.

We are pretty much in the dark in regard to the ancient city of Babylon. Even no estimate is given of the number of inhabitants in Babylon at any one time. Sennacherib sacked and demolished the city 690 B. C. and made the very site unrecognizable. The city was rebuilt by Esarhaddon. Just when it again disappeared is not made clear in history, but it never attained its former eminence. Nothing definite is known of its actual size.

Still In Doubt.

Two farmers met in a western town a day or two after a cyclone had visited that particular neighborhood.

"She shook things up pretty bad on' at my place," said one, stroking his whiskers meditatively. "By the way, Hi," he added, "that new barn o' yourn hurt any?"

"Wall," drawled the other, "I dunno; I haven't found it yet."

Breaking It Gently.

"I understand, sir, that you are the possessor of a swollen fortune."

"Well," gruffly answered the beautiful girl's father, "what is that to you?"

"I merely thought that I would give you due notice of my intention to help take the swelling out of it. Myrtle and I are going to be married."

Birds and Birds.

"What was that you called me?" she asked.

"I said you was an old pelican," he replied.

"There was a time when you thought I was a paragon."

"Yes, but that was before I knew much about them kind of birds."

CURIOUS CLIFF HOUSES.

Queer Prehistoric Dwellings In Mesa Verde National Park.

The Mesa Verde National park is situated in southwestern Colorado and may best be reached from Mancos. Within the park are many notable prehistoric ruins, the cliff dwellings comprising a group of great importance to the study of American archaeology. The principal and most accessible ruins are the Spruce Tree House, Cliff palace, Balcony House and Tunnel House.

Spruce Tree House is located in the head of Spruce Tree canyon, a branch of Navajo canyon. It originally contained about 130 rooms, built of dressed stone laid in adobe mortar, with the outside tiers chinked with chips of rock and broken pottery.

Cliff palace is located about two miles east of Spruce Tree House, in a left branch of Cliff canyon, and consists of a group of houses with ruins of 146 rooms, including twenty round kivas or ceremonial rooms and a tapering loopholed tower forming a crescent of about 100 yards from horn to horn, which is reputed to be one of the most famous works of prehistoric man in existence.

Balcony House, a mile east of Cliff palace, in Ruin canyon, contains about twenty-five rooms, some of which are in almost perfect condition.

Tunnel House, about two miles south of Spruce Tree House, contains about twenty rooms and two kivas, connected by an elaborate system of underground passages, and a burial ground of 5,000 square feet. In each of these villages is an elaborate system of fortification, with in some cases walls 2.5 feet thick and twenty feet high, watchtowers thirty feet high and blockhouses pierced with small loopholes for arrows.

Nobody Knows.

"What darn fool fashion will the women take up next?" asked the man who doesn't like the things they are wearing now.

"If I were a good enough guesser to predict that," replied his friend, "I'd be a multimillionaire inside of six months."

The Chief Bother.

"How far ahead can you go with your family, Jones?" his inquisitive friend asked.

"Oh, I never worry about my family. What bothers me is how far back I can manage to go with my tailor."

Ancient Scottish Custom.

In the Scottish highlands in olden times a burning wooden cross was carried blazing to and fro among the clansmen to rouse them to battle.

LEMON JUICE WHITENS SKIN

Girls! Make beauty lotion at home for few cents

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White, shake well, and you have a quarter pint of the best bleaching and skin whitening lotion, and complexion beautifier, at very, very small cost.

Your grocer has the lemons and any drug store or toilet counter will supply three ounces of Orchard White for a few cents. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands each day and see how tan, redness, sallowness, sunburn and windburn disappear and how clear, soft and rosy-white the skin becomes. Yes! It is harmless.

Japan and China.

Now that the terms of the China-Japanese military agreement are definitely known, Chinese confidence in the good will of Japan is largely restored throughout North China; but the Tokio Asahi reports dissatisfaction in the southern provinces, which are still in a state of revolution. The editor says the motive of opposition is the same as that which developed when China joined the Allies against the Central Powers of Europe. South China sees in the agreement a measure to increase the military strength of the north. The monopolization of China's military and foreign policy by the Pekin Government, the editor thinks, is what the south objects to, and this protest is quite natural since the south does not recognize the Tuan Ministry as a lawful government. The new agreement goes into effect only when the supposed German menace results in actual military operations by the two countries.

Nature of Fatigue.

Fatigue is the presence in the blood of poisonous bye-products of life combustion. While we are awake the poisons accumulate faster than the system can remove them. When we are asleep, when the life combustion is slowed down, the system removes them faster than they accumulate. It is as though ashes accumulate in a stove at such a rate that the fire had to be put out every so often to allow a chance to remove them.

Start Tomorrow and Keep It Up Every Morning

Get in the habit of drinking a glass of hot water before breakfast.

We're not here long, so let's make our stay agreeable. Let us live well, eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, and look well, what a glorious condition to attain, and yet, how very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of inside-bathing before breakfast.

THE DRY BATTERY.

Its Many Uses and the Numerous Processes In Its Making.

That common little object, the dry cell, has played an important part in the advancement of scientific research. There are few articles manufactured that are used in so many ways as the dry battery, yet it is by no means a recent discovery.

The automobile, motorboat, wireless telegraphic apparatus, Christmas tree festoons, electric toys and trains, electric engines, local bell, telephone and annunciator systems, miniature lighting equipments, medical batteries and vibrators, electric alarm clocks, burglar alarms, automatic door openers, safe cracking devices and infernal machines in their many forms, devices for setting off dynamite explosions in excavations, the various testing outfits and electric clock service, to say nothing of the divers ways that it is used in scientific experiments, are a few of the most obvious of its applications.

In its manufacture there are about as many processes as are necessary in the making of a tungsten lamp, and the machinery process that makes it and compounds the ingredients that go into it is wonderfully interesting. So exact is the formula placed into each shell that when completed a battery will register up to a uniform amperage. The highest known amperage in the manufacture of a dry cell is twenty-six.

The exact origin of the dry battery is uncertain, many inventors having claimed the honor.—New York World.

Cheap Power.

Natural steam coming up through the ground is a cheap power for running an engine in the northern Tuscany mountains. Lakes of hot water in the vicinity of the steam holes contain much boracic acid, and a manufacturing company uses the natural steam to run machinery for extracting the valuable boracic acid from the lake water. The only difficulty in this pleasant state of affairs is that the steam itself is so highly charged with boracic acid that it would injure the blades of a turbine engine, so the steam is used to heat up an ordinary boiler, and the steam from the boiler is then used in the turbine. The steam is caused by volcanic action and comes up through blowholes at a considerable pressure.—Saturday Evening Post.

GERMANS WOO POLAND.

So Far Their Blandishments Have All Failed.

An unanticipated result of the recent conference on the Polish question at the German Main Headquarters has been a distinct weakening of the relations between Germany and Austria. The Polish Government and its accredited representatives abroad observed the greatest reserve on the negotiations in question, during which the German representatives made a great effort to win over the Poles from the so-called Austro-Polish solution of the question. Irritated by the German attitude at the conference and by the German Government's opposition to its proposals, the Austrian authorities, in the discreet fashion employed by diplomacy in such cases, has allowed the veil to be lifted, and the following details, based upon these Austrian "indiscretions," may be accepted as well founded.

It seems that the Austrian representatives were especially irritated by the personal effort made by the Kaiser at a dinner he gave at the Main Headquarters at Spa to secure the Polish delegates, Prince Radziwill and Count Romkier, as his allies in opposing the proposals of Vienna. At this dinner the Emperor's efforts were vigorously seconded by Admiral von Hintze, the German Foreign Minister, and Dr. Helfferich, lately German Ambassador to Russia.

It seems that in spite of these blandishments the two Polish delegates persisted in their attitude of political reserve and manifested no disposition to abandon the Austro-Polish solution nor to play Berlin's game against Vienna. The main points of the German solution, which were outlined with great eloquence by the Emperor and his advisers, were: Poland should renounce the Austro-Polish solution, that is to say, the union of the Kingdom of Poland with Galicia, and Poland should at once concede an alliance with Germany and immediately sign numerous military, economic and political conventions. Germany, on her part, would guarantee Poland compensation in the shape of certain territories situated towards the east of that kingdom. The possibility of Dantzig being declared a free port was also vaguely mentioned.

It seems that the question of the throne of Poland played a secondary part in these negotiations, and the pretended nomination of Archduke Charles Etienne for that throne was only a trial balloon sent up by Germany to see its effect in Austria and Poland. The haste which Germany is manifesting to persuade the Polish Government to conclude an alliance is explained by the unfavorable military situation, and the necessity of procuring armed Polish help.

It is evident that the German program as presented at the conference failed and it is interesting to note that since the conference and under the influence of the continued German reverses the tone of the Polish newspapers has become anti-German.

Hissed Crown Prince.

The defeat inflicted upon his troops by the Franco-American forces on the Marne not only has cost the German Crown Prince his prestige with his men, but is now costing him his popularity with his father's subjects.

Just after the battle of the Marne the Crown Prince passed through Cherbausen, on the Rhine, where he was met by crowds of Germans, mostly women and old men. As the German heir's car passed they jeered and insulted him. Police and troops were called to restore order and several rioters were arrested.

Information which has leaked through to Germany by way of Switzerland of the continual arrival of American forces on the battle-front has greatly helped to demoralize the German middle classes, who now see that German headquarters reports have deceived the people.

Paper Controller About to Order Cutting Off of Unpaid Subscriptions.

At a public hearing in Ottawa last week in connection with paper conservation, the Paper Controller for Canada intimated that regulations about to be issued would include one to the effect that:

Publishers of daily newspapers must cease sending their newspapers to subscribers three months in arrears unless subscriptions be definitely renewed and all arrears fully paid.

The reason for this regulation of the Paper Controller is that it is the practice of some publishers to send their newspaper until ordered stopped, and in cases of removal from that city very often the paper is continued at a loss, in which case there is virtual loss of paper. It is to prevent paper waste that the new regulation has been decided upon.

The manufacture of paper consumes labor, wood, coal, chemicals and transportation facilities, and every ton of paper saved means just so much more labor, raw materials, chemicals, fuel and transportation available for urgent war needs. For these reasons the Government insists that paper shall be saved, and proposes that only those who pay for their publications shall receive them.

Under these regulations The Examiner will have no choice in the matter of dealing with subscriptions in arrears for over three months.

You need The Examiner, and we want to continue sending it to you. So, if your subscription is in arrears please pay up at once to prevent a discontinance of your subscription, in compliance with the ruling of the News Print Commissioner.

Origin of Smoking.

The origin of the custom of smoking is veiled in mystery. The Chinese are thought to have had the habit at a very early date, and this is not surprising, judging today from the Chinaman's fondness for the pipe. When Columbus discovered America he found smoking indulged in by all the tribes of Indians, but the practice had a religious association to them. From Santo Domingo tobacco was introduced into Spain and Portugal in 1559, but it was then used in the shape of snuff. Sir Walter Raleigh, however, is the first man of note to make smoking a fashionable habit.

The Trouble Hunters

By -- ROLAND HILL
Canadian War Correspondent

As "The Trouble Hunters" of the Western front Canada's Railway Construction troops have had their full share in the great victories since the Canadians first "went over" on August 8. From the coast to Cambrai they have fought up behind the Allies, with British, French, American and Belgians, have rebuilt the shell torn roadbeds and straightened out the twisted rails into workable lines to take up guns and supplies. They have built bridges across the deep Nord Canal, dug out tanks from the mire of the Scarpe Valley, drawn the dangerous teeth of the booby traps and mines the retreating Boche left as legacy, and otherwise proved themselves the most versatile of engineering units along the battle front.

Perhaps their finest feat in these shows was when a party went into Rosieres with the Canadian infantry. They excused their presence with the bayonets—although they had bayonets themselves—by saying they wanted to see how the Germans had left that big main line that links up Amiens with Cambrai. Then they got into the fight. In the yard at Rosieres, still under shell fire, was an undamaged giant German railway howitzer and truckloads of ammunition. The tracks were blown up on each side of it but the temptation was too strong for the railway men. They patched up the lines with what German material they could find, they mended an old Stuttgart engine and fired her up and then they hauled the big gun back two miles into a deep cutting and handed it over to a Canadian gunnery crew. That night it was dropping its big shells into the Germans at Perenne and Chaulnes. "It was a picnic," said the young officer who had charge of the stunt.

The big double track line from Amiens to Chaulnes and the branches to Perenne and Ham were repaired in record time, although the Germans had blown up every switch and joint and had wrecked all the bridges. The first gangs tore up one line and used the material from that to make one complete through track. It kept so close up behind the infantry that it was often broken by shell fire but all night long huge trains of reinforcements and supplies went out from Villers Bretennaux.

At one point the Huns had mined a big embankment, covering all traces of their work so cleverly that the eagle-eyed engineer from Toronto missed it. There was a long copper wire eating itself away in an acid bath that ran right through the filling and old cinders concealed the place where the embankment had been dug into. Twenty yards of track went up into the air and the railway troops investigated. They scraped each side of the embankment for three miles and found fifteen more mines which they gently removed and saved themselves fifty hours hard work. Generally the Boche doesn't fool them, for one of the versatile "trouble hunters'" jobs has been the clearing of villages and dugouts of traps.

When the Belgians broke across the Yser River and threw back the Huns towards Ostend the Canadian Railway troops were in evidence too. For many months some of Col. "Chil." Hervey's men, old Canadian Pacific track and bridge gangs, had been laboring for this end. Their diving outfits had been working silently, almost in No Man's Land, putting in concrete foundations on the river bed. At Dunkirk they had collected huge British Columbia timbers and constructed them to fit like a jig-saw puzzle, numbered off and bolts and plates in place. Already loaded on big trucks, as soon as the Germans fell back, these were rushed up and in less than a day there was a fine Canadian type of bridge spanning the turbulent stream, ready to take over the heaviest guns into that part of reconquered Belgium. By now it must have a double track railway line stretching its way longingly towards Ostend.

In the same area there is a little band of the Canadian Overseas Railway Construction Corps. For months, since the original battalion went south to the Marne, they have been building railway spurs for the big British naval guns that hammer away at the Germans. They build the concrete foundations for the monster fifteen inch and when one position becomes to warm they load the big guns, weighing scores of tons, on trucks and find another position. They started as an experiment. Now the Canadian command allows them to stay on at the request of the British navy. Some of them have naval decorations for their work and the young Winnipeg officer has been made a regular officer of the sea force.

Up with the Belgians behind Houlthurst Forest and Langemarck there are more of the "Trouble Hunters." Under Colonel "Jim" Cornwall, of Peace River fame, they have been waiting patiently for the line to break there and have been gathering material ready for the happy day. Now they are rushing the tracks that will follow up the fighting troops into Roulers, one of the Germans main junctions.

Building these lines behind the front is not like constructing a transcontinental. The right of way is won by the fighting men and the price they pay is not in money. The penalty clause, if the line is not constructed and working on time, is defeat. The Canadian Railway troops have never had to pay the forfeit. From the little battalion of experts that went out in the early days of the war under Colonel Ramsey, the Canadian Pacific engineer, Canada's Railway troops have grown to the equivalent of five brigades. Each unit has its experts and there has never been a job refused. They have raided No Man's land and stolen tons of rails the Germans thought were quite safe. Some of them during the March retreat fought the Huns back with machine guns while their comrades rushed guns and rolling stock away. They destroyed the miles of track they had built so well and hampered the enemy. It is all in the day's work for the "trouble hunters."

How they started out prepared to do anything is best told in a story Colonel Ramsey relates. The original battalion was building a strategic line for the Canadians around Kemmel at the time. One day there rushed up in a big Rolls Royce car an Imperial staff officer who wished to see the colonel immediately. He found a business-like man in shirt sleeves and a corn-cob pipe in the colonel's office who asked him what he wanted.

"I must see the colonel personally," he explained. "It is most important."

"Well, I'm the colonel," answered the figure in shirt sleeves.

The staff officer suggested that the Canadian Construction unit hadn't any divers in their battalion. He wanted divers to rush to Dunkirk and help salve a boat loaded with important stores which had struck a mine but managed to reach port.

"Sure, we've got divers," answered the colonel. "How many do you want?" The Imperial officer asked for two.

"You can have four if you like," suggested the Canadian.

Two were enough, however, and they went to Dunkirk with a gang and salved the cargo.

"I only had two divers," explained Colonel Ramsey, relating the story afterwards. "But there were half a dozen men I knew who worked with me on construction in Canada who would have gone diving if I had said the word."

That is the spirit that the Railway Construction troops have kept up. Ready to go anywhere; to do anything.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Vernon Pope

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Whenever Hester Fey had ten cents left in her purse after she had bought her luncheon, paid her carfares and bought her evening paper out of the 45 cents she allowed herself for "spending money" every day, she went to a little basement flower shop and exchanged that silver piece for a rose or a couple of carnations, a few daffodils or pansies, or any other bloom that that small sum would secure.

"Don't you ever buy candy?" the girls in the office would say to her when she steadfastly refused to share with them a little bag of licorice drops or chocolates that they brought back with them after luncheon. "Every girl has a sweet tooth; it's funny you haven't."

"Well, maybe I do like sweets," Hester would say. "But to me flowers are so much sweeter than candy. And a rose on your desk will stay sweet for days, and the candy is all gone in an afternoon."

On her way from business she used to walk up the avenue past the big florists' windows, and there look eagerly in to see the flowers, whose names she did not know, that were arranged to tempt the folk who could afford to pay as much for a box of flowers as Hester received for working a whole week.

Then Hester read in the paper that a great flower show was to be held early in the spring. The tickets were 50 cents, and that meant that five dimes would have to be saved, and that five times when she might have bought a little nosegay she would have to go without. To spend 50 cents for a single evening's entertainment seemed like extravagance to Hester, so she determined to go to the flower show, on the day that it opened, as soon as she was through work at her office and remain there with the flowers till the doors closed. She would have from half-past five till eleven o'clock, if she chose just to wander about and smell the sweetness and revel in the color of the flowers that the paper said were to be even more gorgeous than in previous years. To be sure, this would mean going without dinner; but she bought a sandwich, which she ate rapidly at a lunch counter on her way to the show, and this satisfied her craving for food.

At first Hester wandered about the great hall in a daze, now standing transfixed before a table on which nothing but roses were placed, and then hurrying from one rock garden to another, searching out in each new and hidden beauties, till she knew the characteristics, but not the names, of all the plants that ever found place in rock gardens. If any one stopped to notice the enthusiastic young girl as she stood with hands clasped and eyes gleaming before one of the exhibits, Hester did not know it, for she was too intent on enjoying the flowers every minute of the hours she had to spend to notice the other spectators at all.

After she had wandered about for over an hour, she finally stood lost in admiration and almost perfect content before the tulip exhibition that had been awarded the first prize. It was the exhibition of the millionaire, L. E. Pope, whose world-famous tulip hothouses and gardens made certain his taking the first prize for this class of flowers every year. Hester had not read her evening paper every day without knowing the reputation that Mr. Pope and his family had gained in fields other than tulip raising. Mr. Pope himself, as every one knew, was at the time seeking a divorce from his third wife, and his only son, young Vernon Pope, had given interesting reading recently in the evening papers because of his elopement with a musical comedy star of considerable reputation.

Hester didn't in the least approve of the Popes, but she did love their tulips, and when she heard one woman who stood for a while beside her say to her companion, "I can't even admire the exhibition when I think what kind of people the Popes are," Hester wondered for a brief minute whether she were weakening in her very rigid standard, because she could admire the Pope's tulips as much as she did. It seemed to her, as she stood there feasting her eyes on the sea of golden tulips, as pure as morning sunlight, that just to grow flowers like that would make people want to be good and decent.

The exhibit, as every one said, was the most attractive of any shown, for tulips, in beds of red and yellow, pink, white, and of that rich dark red characteristic of the "black" tulip, were arranged about a little Dutch cottage that had a real little door and two windows with white muslin curtains. If Hester had any well-defined idea of heavenly mansions it was of some such little white-curtained Dutch cottage as this, surrounded by beds of glorious poppies and paths of pure white pebbles like those she now gazed upon.

A young man came out of the cottage, and Hester watched him eagerly. Of course, it was young Vernon Pope, and as he opened the door she looked to see if there was a girl in the cottage; if there was a girl, of course it was the dancing girl he had eloped with. For a moment Hester envied the dancing girl, just because she might claim admittance to the white-curtained cottage. But no girl followed Vernon, and there appeared to be no one left in the cottage. Vernon crunched his way down the white-pebbled path to the white-painted fence that hemmed in the exhibit. A young man that stood on the outside of the fence appeared to be a friend of Vernon.

"Congratulations!" said the man on the outside of the fence. "I knew you would get the first prize for tulips, but you've taken the prize for the best show of any sort in the exhibition. I got it straight from the judges just now."

The smooth-shaven young Vernon showed supreme satisfaction. "You don't say!" he commented. "That certainly will make Pop happy. He was so keen about this cottage effect, and he spent so much importing those Dutch bulbs this year."

"It's sure a slick show," commented the bringer of good news. "Couldn't be better."

"Yes, it could," corrected Vernon, and Hester permitted herself still to overhear the conversation. "We were going to get some nice little blonde-haired girl to dress in Dutch costume and add local color to the cottage. Pop got the costume straight from Holland, and we were going to get one of the maids to dress up; but the only blonde one got huffed at the last minute, and the brunette ones wouldn't do. I'm going to start out tomorrow and get one. The trouble is we don't want the kind of show girl you'd get from a theatrical agency. We want a nice, fresh-looking girl, that looks as if she had grown up in a tulip bed."

Just then the young man's eyes shifted, and for the first time he saw Hester. There was a slight start in his manner, and Hester somehow became aware that she had flaxen hair and that she certainly did not look like a show girl. The young heir to the Pope millions lowered his voice and drew the young man he was talking to aside. Hester would have followed them to hear their conversation, but it was obviously impossible. However, she still stood there by the white fence drinking in the beauty of the color, and waiting to hear what she might when the young man returned to the fence.

It was only a few minutes later when young Vernon returned, and, coming very respectfully to her, asked her with considerable embarrassment if she would be willing to be the Dutch girl. She was just the type, he said, and if she didn't need the money she could contribute it to the Red Cross. He said that he was very anxious to have some one by the next afternoon—Saturday, because his father was coming in to see the show for the first time, and he had so wanted a Dutch girl in the cottage. Hester thought a minute. Saturday afternoon was a half holiday; she could "give notice" the first thing in the morning. She was only a cog in the wheel at her office; another girl would do as well as she on Monday morning. For a whole week she could spend her days there in that wonderful tulip garden. She accepted, and before long she found herself alone in a little dressing room donning the Dutch peasant costume that was apparently made just to fit her small, plump figure.

Of course, the young man fell in love with her, and, of course, when at the end of the week he told her so, Hester, who was a very strict principled little girl, was as troubled as she had ever been in her life before. She really did like him; she felt that she could not let him go. Still—

"But, what about that beautiful dancing lady you eloped with?" she asked him naively. And the young man laughed and laid his hands on her shoulders tenderly. They were inside the little Dutch cottage a few minutes before the afternoon session of the exhibition began.

"You didn't think I was Vernon Pope, did you, little girl? Bless your heart, you thought that, did you? Why I'm only the head gardener's son. But father and I get more out of the Pope millions than the Popes do, for we are lords of the estate that young Vernon is too sophisticated to enjoy. They don't know one tulip from another. They just 'go in' for them because every millionaire has to go in for something. So you'll marry me, won't you? Even if I am Tom Dawkins, gardener, instead of Vernon Pope, millionaire!"

And Hester honestly could not see why any girl would not a hundred times rather have married Tom Dawkins than Vernon Pope, with all his millions.

Unusual Responsibility

CONDITIONS brought about by the war have placed many women in positions of unusual responsibility, involving mental strain and anxiety.

Think, for example, of the girls who have been placed in tellers' wickets in the banks, and whose duty it is to handle each day tens of thousands of dollars.

It is not as though such positions had been reached after years of training and development, for in many instances the new teller has had little experience, and the strain thrown on the nervous system is enormous.

But similar conditions apply in many lines of work, and whether the overstrain is mental or physical the result is the same, for vitality is exhausted and sooner or later health gives way.

The rapid spread of influenza and pneumonia is largely due to the low vitality of many thousands of people who have been living under a constant, unusual strain of mind or body.

In a state of continual fatigue you have practically no reserve force left to fight disease, and are, therefore, easy prey.

There is only one way to restore feeble, wasted nerve cells, and that is by supplying to them the vital substances which nourish them back to health and vigor.

This is exactly what Dr. Chase's Nerve Food does, and that is why it is in such enormous demand at this time when so many people are living under such unusual nervous strain.

A dead nerve cell can never be replaced, but an exhausted nerve cell can be restored, and just here is where Dr. Chase's Nerve Food comes in to cure by means of the building-up process.

One of the first indications of trouble is headache, and then sleeplessness—you fail to regain at night the nerve force expended in the day's work and worry.

You get up tired in the mornings, and your work seems a burden to you. You get discouraged and lose confidence in yourself, and as the nervous system weakens the worry increases.

There is no light ahead for the person suffering from nervous exhaustion, but, fortunately, there is help in the use of this well-known restorative — Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Take all the rest you can—get out into the fresh air and use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food regularly, and you will soon find yourself on the way to health.

This is the message we have brought to many thousands who are now enthusiastic in telling their friends about this great food cure. We can only tell you of the experience of others. It remains for you to act if you are to obtain similar benefit. You can get six boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for $2.75 from any dealer, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

As the sun of life sinks toward the west

Life has been said to consist of a constant succession of breakdowns and repairs. In old age, the former predominate. The body machine is more or less worn out. Digestion is less perfect, elimination of waste is increased in quantity, but reduced in efficiency.

Hence, constipation is particularly pernicious. Constipation means more than mere failure of the bowels to move regularly and thoroughly. It means stagnation of the contents of the intestine, increased fermentation, putrefaction and germ action, the production of irritating and poisonous substances, that are absorbed into the blood and carried all over the body.

This is always serious—in old age it is especially dangerous.

Constipation cannot be cured by drugs at any age. It is especially harmful to an aged person to use pills, salts, and similar strong purges in order to force the bowels to act.

But the Nujol Treatment for Constipation is not only safe, it is in every way efficient.

Nujol is not a drug, does not act like any drug.

Nujol helps nature to re-establish easy, soft, thorough bowel evacuation—as "regular as clockwork."

Nujol softens and keeps perfectly moist the intestinal waste.

Nujol makes it easy for the intestinal muscles to act, and prevents them from overwork.

Nujol absorbs poisons and carries them out of the body.

Get Nujol from your druggist and take it according to directions.

Warning: NUJOL is sold only in sealed bottles bearing the Nujol Trade Mark. Insist on Nujol. You may suffer from substitutes

Pigeons as Life-savers.

British soldiers and sailors are making frequent use of carrier pigeons far out at sea. Many a man, says Current History, has been saved from death by the speed of the homing pigeon.

Capt. Thomas Crisp, who had won the Victoria Cross and who died at the wheel under fire from a German submarine, lived long enough to despatch a message by pigeon. The bird sped away with his last request for help for his son and crew, and they were saved—but only through the timely arrival of their pigeon messenger.

On another occasion a flying boat (a boat with airplane wings) and a hydro-airplane (an airplane with floats in place of landing wheels) both got into difficulties in stormy weather, and it seemed that all lives must be lost. A message for help was sent out by pigeon. In the teeth of a fierce wind the gallant bird fought it way home, only to die from exhaustion on arrival. But its message had been delivered, assistance was sent with all speed, and the lives of both crews were saved.

Thirteenth Century Fire Prevention.

One wonders what fate would have overtaken the captured starter of fires in thirteenth century London, for after the blaze of 1212, which lasted ten days, swallowed up part of London bridge and was the cause of over 1,000 deaths, every precaution was taken against fires. For instance, all builders of houses were ordered to roof them with tiles, shingle boards of lead, and to stop an outbreak any house could be pulled down. Thus, Mr. H. B. Wheatley on the safeguards: "For the speedy removal of burning houses each ward was to provide a strong iron hook with a wooden handle, two chains and two strong cords, which were to be left with the beadle of the ward, who was also provided with a good horn loudly sounding." And, moreover, every householder was ordered to keep a barrel of water before his door.—London Standard.

GREATEST RULE OF HEALTH

With all their differences in regard to disease, its cause and treatment, doctors are of one mind in regard to the one greatest rule of health, viz: "Daily movement of the bowels." Unnumbered thousands of people suffer almost continuously as the result of constipation who could be readily cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-

Canada CAN and WILL

ON July 31, 1918, Canadians had on deposit in banks more than a billion five hundred million dollars — that was $160,000,000 more than was on deposit on the same date in 1917.

And, in the meantime, Canadians had invested $425,000,000 in the Victory Loan 1917. Besides that they had bought $60,000,000 worth of provincial and municipal bonds.

So the people of Canada during the past year have accumulated $485,000,000 in bonds and over $160,000,000 in cash more than they had on July 31, 1917. That represents concrete accumulated wealth.

Canada is to-day the richest country in the world, per capita.

Her war debt per capita is lower than that of any other fighting nation.

So Canada undoubtedly has the ability to oversubscribe the Victory Loan 1918.

And Canada must manfully and loyally support the Victory Loan 1918, because the national safety, the national honor and the prosperity of the country are at stake.

Canada's business prosperity is necessary to the maintenance of Canada's war efficiency.

LOST IN CATACOMBS.

Exciting Adventure of a Paris Geological Explorer.

Paul Philippard, a male nurse in a Paris hospital, who during his spare moments is a zealous student of geology, had recently a most unusual and trying experience.

He had a longing to explore the Paris catacombs, and seeing some workmen employed in an excavation which communicated with them, he let himself down with a rope to a depth of about 60 feet. Trusting to a lighted taper which he carried with him, he started through the underground galleries, marking the passages here and there with white chalk, so as to find his way back. He examined the vaults and the stones, and became so absorbed in his observations that he lost his way. When he wished to return he mistook the passages. He rushed hither and thither trying to discover the marks, but he found that previous visitors had also marked the stones and this confused him.

Finally, his light went out and he became desperate. He burnt his fingers with the end of the taper in trying to keep it alight, and when it went out he set fire to a newspaper which he carried with him. He next burnt the strings of his apron and used up all his matches. Still he failed to discover the exit. Hours then passed in vain attempts to reach the light. They were hours of anguish, when he recalled the terrors of miners lost in the depths of a pit; and began to think that his last hour had come. He would die of hunger and thirst, and become, perhaps, a raving maniac.

At this point the geological explorer reached a shaft that apparently led upwards, and climbed to the top with desperation, only to find himself under the cast-iron lid of a drain. He knew he was close to the surface of the street and shouted himself hoarse without being heard. Finally he descended again to the bottom of the shaft and groped about in pitch darkness for several minutes more. At last he came to another shaft through which he saw the light, but it was too narrow to climb. He shouted as loud as he could for a quarter of an hour, and was finally heard by some workmen, who let a rope down to him and pulled him up. He had been in the catacombs from 9 a.m. to 3.30 p.m. He came out in the courtyard of the Val de Grace Hospital, nearly a mile away from where he had entered the catacombs.

Not Worded the Same.

Just as the family was about to sit down to the evening meal the minister unexpectedly dropped in and was asked to join them.

When the maid set the table she had turned the plates bottom side up. Written on the bottom was the name of the manufacturer.

The minister was asked to say grace, and as he did so he reverently bowed his head above his plate.

When he had finished the little five-year-old daughter of the house picked up her plate, looked at the manufacturer's name closely and said:

"Papa, it doesn't say that on my plate."

His Mouth Full.

A certain town council after a protracted sitting was desirous of adjourning for luncheon. The proposition was opposed by the mayor, who thought that if his fellow councillors felt the stimulus of hunger the dispatch of business would be considerably facilitated.

At last an illiterate member got up and exclaimed:

"I ham astonished, I ham surprised, I ham amazed, Mr. Mayor, that you will not let us go to lunch!"

"I'm surprised," exclaimed one of his colleagues, "that a gentleman who has got so much 'ham' in his mouth wants any lunch at all!"—London Globe.

The Holy City.

Medina, the holy city, triumphed long ago over all the rivals in various parts of the world which bore the same name, which means simply "city." Notable among them were the old capital of Malta and Medina Sidonia in Spain. The Arabian city was originally known as Yathrib, but owes its later name, El-Medina (the city) or Medinat Rasul Allah (the city of the apostle of God), to the Koran. To a good Mohammedan there is only one city "with a big C."

Needn't Stand For That.

Billy, while being reprimanded by his teacher for some misdemeanor, sat down, leaving her standing.

She reminded him that no gentleman should seat himself while the lady with whom he was conversing remains standing.

"But this is a lecture," replied Billy, "and I am the audience."

Father's Feelings.

"What did father say, Algy, when you asked him for my hand?"

"Oh, he said 'yes'."

"Anything more?"

"Er—yes; 'Good Lord!' I believe."

Great Ability.

"Has that prima donna any intellectual accomplishments in addition to vocal skill?"

"Yes," replied the manager. "When it comes to salary she's a lightning calculator."

"FLU" AND PNEUMONIA CLAIM 12,000 VICTIMS

New York's Figures Show Continued Increase—Grand Total 100,000 Cases.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—More than 100,000 persons in this city have been ill from Spanish influenza or pneumonia within the past six weeks, and over 12,000 have died, it was disclosed by the reports of the health Department. The cases of influenza outnumbered those of pneumonia by a ratio of nearly eight to one. The fatalities, however, were almost evenly divided between the two diseases. The grand total as given out by the department were: Influenza and pneumonia cases, 93,298 and 12,137; deaths, 6,370 and 6,020.

The increase in new cases of influenza and pneumonia continued today, coupled with a larger number of deaths from pneumonia than were reported yesterday. The fatalities from influenza, however, showed a decrease of 67.

The Health Department's figures for the past 24 hours gave 394 deaths from influenza, as compared with 459 reported yesterday. Pneumonia fatalities were listed as 336, an increase of 20. The new cases were 4,742 of influenza and 850 of pneumonia, increases of 718 and 187.

RECLAIMED 70,000 MILES

Allies Have Reconquered All France's Coal Fields Except a Five-Mile Tract.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—Summarizing the situation of the western battle front yesterday, Gen. Marel said the Germans have evacuated or been driven out of 70,000 square miles of Belgian and French territory since July 18th; that 400 square miles have been freed during the past week, and that all the coal fields in Northern France have been reconquered except for a five-mile tract where the allied advance now is being pressed near the Belgian border.

Gen. March pointed out the Franco American lines from the Meuse to the Oise stood virtually parralel to the great railway line near the Belgian frontier, and constituted a threat against that line throughout its entire length.

WAR DEPLETES BLOND RANKS

(By United Press.)

PARIS, Oct. 3.—(By Mail.) — Another horror of war. Many of the pretty blond girls one used to see in Paris are becoming brunettes. At least, The Daily Mail of Paris says so. It prints the following:

"The necessities of war chemistry have led to a great scarcity of peroxide of hydrogen, generally used for producing the golden tint known as peroxide blond. Many women who were blond in opposition to the intentions of nature have had to come out in their true colours."

A woman believes everything a fortune-teller says, provided she isn't told that her boy will not amount to anything.

Austria's Reply Regarded as An Unconditional Surrender

Event Denotes the Breaking Up of the Hapsburg Power—Crushing Political Defeat Must Follow.

A HIDDEN SNARE

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Oct. 29.—Austria's reply to President Wilson is viewed here as an unconditional surrender. Although viewed as an event of intrinsically greatest moment, denoting the breaking up of the Hapsburg power, the main interest in the situation lies in the effect it will inevitably have on the position of Germany.

"It removes," says the Telegraph, "any lingering doubt as to the total and irremediable defeat of Germany, for which, besides being the most grave military misfortune, it involves the ultimate crushing political defeat as it destroys the monstrous fabric known as pan-Germanism.

The Daily News likens the chaos in Austria-Hungary to that in Russia, adding, "the chaos may soon follow in Germany."

Urge Caution.

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, Oct. 29.—The capitulation of Austria is the unvarying caption with which the morning newspapers precede Count Julius Andrassis' note to President Wilson. The editorials of newspapers, while accepting this conclusion, urge caution lest there be a hidden snare behind the Austrian offer.

"Beware of the last convulsions of a colossal enemy who is not yet completely crushed," writes Maurice Barres in the "Echo De Paris." The situation will not clear until military defeat is acknowledged or inflicted. It will draw in its train the Central Empires, including Germany."

Tantamount to Surrender.

(United Press.)

(By Ed. L. Keen.)

LONDON, Oct. 29. —The Austrian note to President Wilson is tantamount to surrender, is the opinion of well-informed authorities and the press of London. The Express says it is informed from authoritative sources that the Allied conference at Paris soon will present to Germany terms of an armistice, which it is believed will include the occupation of Metz, the Krupp arsenal and other fortresses of the enemy. It is believed in diplomatic circles that the publication of the Allied armistice terms will lead to the hoisting of the white flag of surrender by the enemy forces.

EAGLE LAKE HUNT CLUB LEFT TO-DAY

Party is Headed for Gold Lake.

The Eagle Lake Hunt Club left this morning on their annual hunt to Gold Lake. Thirteen hounds accompanied the party. Included in the party were St. Commissioner Harry Evans, Wallace Evans, A. T. Johnston, Charles Westlake, Charles Gunsolus, Jack Gibbs, Mr. Moore, Mr. Gus Sawyers, Mr. William James, Mr. Clinton Coone, Mr. William White, Mr. Arthur Head and Mr. William Henry, Mr. J. J. Howden and Mr. Richard Sheehy intend joining the party later. The season opens on November 1 and the Club of 15 is entitled to 15 deer. The season closes on November 15.

Mr. R. J. Soden and Mr. R. Neill left today to join a Lindsay hunting party. Mr. C. S. McClelland, who was to have joined a party headed for the Sudbury district has been notified that the hunt is called off owing to several cases of influenza with which members of the party and their families are afflicted.

Peterboro Man May Be Victim of Sea Wreck

Fears are entertained for the safety of Mr. Hector Neill of this city who, when last heard of, was in the Yukon, and was contemplating returning home on the last boat, which this year happened to be the ill-fated C. P.R. steamer, Princess Sophia. Mr. Neill left for Alaska in the early part of the summer. His home is at 607 George street.

Seattle, Wn., Oct. 29. — With no survivors found thus far to describe the sinking of the Princess Sophia, several theories regarding the cause of the disaster have been advanced. The one most generally accepted is that shortly after the Sophia's stern was swung around by the blizzard, pushing her off Vanderbilt Reef, where she struck during a blinding snowstorm Thursday, the sea rushed into the engine room, exploding her boilers.

SEES THE END OF THE WAR

BERNE, Oct. 29.—The world war will not last longer than a few days. We must arrest the vain flow of our blood, declares the Socialist newspaper Vorwaerts, which is now regarded as virtually a German government organ.

PETERBORO' WAS REPRESENTED AT FARMERS' MEETING

Warden W. A. Anderson and Mr. H. B. Cowan, of "Farm and Dairy," attended the meeting of the United Farmers of Ontario in Toronto yesterday at which the following subjects were proposed to be added to the policy of the farmers' movement:

Absolute freedom of discussion; no change in Canada's relations to the United Kingdom until after full discussion by the Canadian people; repeal of the War Times Election Act; permanent Dominion-wide prohibition of the manufacture, importation and sale of liquor; naturalization of railway, telegraph, telephone and similar public utilities; natural resources to be leased for short terms by public auction.

Planks previously adopted by the Canadian Council of Agriculture were reaffirmed, including sweeping reductions in customs, taxation and the substitution of a direct tax on unimproved land values, a sharply graduated income tax, a heavy graduated inheritance tax on large estates, and a graduated income tax on the profits of corporations, with a special squeeze on watered stock.

Against Farmers' Party.

The meeting was against forming a farmers' party at the present time. It was recommended, however, that farmer candidates be put in the field where vacancies occur in rural ridings, and that the question of a third party be brought before the Canadian Council of Agriculture at the meeting of that body to be held in Winnipeg on November 26.

HE WAS STILL FRENCH.

(By United Press.)

LONDON, Oct. 3. — (By Mail.) — A French journalist, while making a visit to the British Grand Fleet, was taken for a trip on a destroyer. There was a heavy sea running. Throughout the night the Frenchman lay in his bunk and did penance for his sins. When morning came, feeling a little better, he went on deck.

"Morning," said the captain. "Have you breakfasted"

"No, m'sieur," said the Frenchman gravely, "I have not breakfasted. On the contrary."

Peterboro Casualties

Another Son of Mr. A. P. Brown Reported Wounded.

Word has been received that Wilfrid Fitzgerald, formerly of this city, was wounded on October 13. He went over in September, 1914, with the 19th Battalian, with which he enlisted at the Sault and has been in France ever since. While in Peterborough he was in the C.G.E. stores department.

PTE. D. HEATH.

Mrs. Ward Graham of this city received the sad news this morning of the death of her brother, Private Daniel Heath, 8th Canadian Field Ambulance. Pte. Heath is a son of Mrs. Henry Heath, Campbellford and went overseas with the 139th Bowmanville Battalion.

Gas Burns.

Mrs. Airriess, 88 McDonnel Street, received word yesterday that her son, Gunner Jesse Airriess, had been admitted to the Kent and Canterbury Hospital on October 23rd, suffering from gas burns on his thigh. Gunner Airriess was gassed a year ago on September 21.

PTE. K. J. BROWN, WOUNDED

A telegram was received yesterday by Mr. A. P. Brown, 517 Weller street from Records Office Ottawa, stating that his son, Private Kenneth James Brown, was officially reported admitted to No. 16 General Hospital, Letreport on October 14th with gunshot wound. Private Brown enlisted here in 93rd battalion in October 1915 and was sent over to France in a draft to 20th battalion, in September 1916, and has been at the front continuously since that date. On October 8th his father received a telegram stating that Corporal Cecil C. P. Brown was wounded, a younger son, and Sergeant Elmer G. Brown th e eldest son, was wounded in January 1917.

TRINITY CHURCH SOUP KITCHEN IN GREAT DEMAND

Over Forty Families Are Being Looked After.

Each day sees an increased demand for soups, jellies, hot drinks, etc., at the Trinity church soup kitchen. To-day 12 families augmented the 30 who were already on the list.

Calls have come in from every quarter of the city, from outside the city limits, and from as far south as Brownton and no call has been unanswered by the young ladies who have undertaken to carry the nourishment to the houses where it is needed while they never entr th houses the ladies are all convinced that the work they are doing is an absolute necessity. In one Italian home 10 are ill, in another 7 while the general calls come from house with from four to six ill with only one person to look after them and in most cases the one person is really ill enough to be in bed.

The appeal for soups, gruels, etc., has been splendid and to-day there was enough on hand to meet the demand. Two ladies are constantly in charge to relieve donations.

Ask your dealer to duplicate the price of the strolling merchant or agent and see with what alacrity he will do it then, don't you see, if the goods are not right on the mark as represented he is right here to make it right; the other fellow, where is he?

Captured First Line

Allies Continue to Make Progress on the Western Front,

Canadian Press:

PARIS, Oct. 29.—(Official.)—General Debeney's first army continues to close in on Guise and has captured the German first line trenches and the barracks and hospital south of Chateau in the town of Guise. South of Guise the French have passed beyond Louvry Farm. They also continue to make progress on the right bank of the Peron river.

Artillery duels and patrol encounters were the only activity on the British front during the night, Field Marshal Haig reports to-day.

MONSTER GUNS ARE BEING USED BY THE AMERICANS

Big Calibre Guns Are Shooting Twenty-five Miles—Transported on Railway.

United Press.)

(By Fred S. Ferguson.)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES IN FRANCE, Oct. 29. — While the Moziers-Longuyon railway is under fire of the American long range guns, the Germans are putting up their bitterest struggle east of the Meuse. The Belleau Wood positions in that region are now the Keystone of the entire west front. If the Americans capture these heights they will have a clean sweep across the valley to the Meziers-Sedan-Longuyon railway and the enemy will be forced to retire behind that line. The smashing of these heights positions and an advance across the valley is a comparatively short distance to Montmedy (twenty-five miles). The guns, which are firing on the Montmedy-Longuyon railway are shooting twenty-five miles. (This shows the guns are emplaced from five to ten miles behind the American lines, as the battle front is about fifty to twenty miles from this line.) They are of much bigger calibre than the Boche guns which fired on Paris. (The German guns were nine-inch. The American guns, it has been announced, are sixteen-inch.) The big guns made a great hit with the French, who first served them in the St. Quentin and Laon regions. The latter point was completely smashed by them, as were all the enemy railways leading to and from that town. Guns of almost similar calibre appeared next at the St. Mihiel salient, where they fired on the Metz region. Description of these guns is prohibited for military reasons, aside from the fact that they are transported by railway. The guns are of such size that the French despaired of the Americans ever getting them to the front. All the equipment is entirely American. The monsters were brought over lashed to the decks of ships.

A REVOLUTION HAS BROKEN OUT

Special to the Examiner:

LONDON, Oct. 29.— A Zurich despatch says a revolution has broken out in Montenegro and that the revolutionists have seized Cettinje, the capital, and other important points. Austro-German forces are evacuating the country as quickly as possible.

PETERBORO TOOK $63,250

First Day of Victory Loan Was Highly Satisfactory—Canvassers Hindered by Influenza in the Homes.

C.G.E. TAKES A WAD

Incomplete returns of yesterday's subscriptions of the Victory Loan in Peterborough show that the city absorbed $58,350, and the townships took an additional $4,900, as follows:

North Ward	$14,900
South Ward	$ 2,550
East Ward	$ 2,500
Cent. Ward	$19,400
C.G.E. Men	$18,300
Banks	$ 700
Total	$58,350
North Monaghan	$ 1,000
Otonabee, 7-13	$ 3,700
Smith, 1-7	$ 200
Total	$63,250

There was no report from the West Ward canvassers, and most of the townships were silent. However, yesterday was largely a day of preparation and preliminaries, and while some communities were able to report that they had oversold their share of bonds in the first moments of the opening day, Peterborough may be depended upon to pile up its subscriptions until the local limit has been left far behind.

Great Work at the C.G.E.

The outstanding feature of yesterday's sales was the amount disposed of in the C.G.E. shops, where 152 applications were received by the shop canvassers for a total of $18,300. This is the first factory heard from, and the showing is regarded as an earnest of the realization by the employees that these bonds are just as good to them as they would be to the banks, who would accept their savings deposits at three per cent., and use their money on the Loan that earns 5½ per cent. The working man has decided to eliminate the middleman and take advantage of the extra dividend that is offered to him through the Victory Loan.

Other factories will soon be heard from, and it is fully expected that the similar interest will be found in each and all of them.

Otonabee Township is divided into three sections and Smith into two. Thus the section of Otonabee heard from this morning is from the 7th to the 12th Concessions.

Sickness Impedes the Work.

The canvassers had been at work only a short time when they discovered that the epidemic of influenza was likely to prove a greater obstacle to the smooth working of their plans than they had anticipated. One of the workers stated that ten out of twelve homes he visited had influenza in different stages of its progress, and were practically quarantined. Another reported that seventy-five per cent. of the houses that he called at during the first day were all but closed up with influenza. Several of the canvassers are themselves confined to their homes with the disease, it was reported, and, in brief, the epidemic appeared at the end of the first day as a rather serious impediment to the early subscription of Peterborough's allotment of the Loan.

Port Elgin's Huge Success.

Port Elgin, Oct. 28.—Port Elgin raised its objective in the Victory Loan campaign the first day. The amount set aside for the village was $35,000.

More Than Half Already.

Wiarton, Oct. 28.—The Victory Loan campaign is off with a good start here. The amount asked from the town is $50,000, and the amount subscribed the first day is nearly $28,000. It is expected that between $75,000 and $100,000 will be raised here.

Prescott Passes Objective.

Prescott, Oct. 28.—Prescott, the old fort town, goes over the top the first day, obtaining several hundred dollars above objective of $200,000. It expects now to add several crowns to its honour flag before the campaign is over. Isaac P. Wiser, Mayor, is chairman of the Victory Loan Committee.

Trying to Treble Allotment.

Amherstburg, Oct. 28.—Amherstburg, true to its best traditions, went over the top at 3.18 this afternoon with more than its allotment. Enthusiastic citizens will try to treble it. In addition to special big subscriptions, everyone here wants a bond.

The Allies Have Broken Through Austrian Lines

INTERPRETATION OF WILSON'S REPLY

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Oct. 29.—Newspapers here to-day agree that the Austrian reply to President Wilson means unconditional surrender, and it's now up to the Austrian military commanders to deal with General Diaz.

Civilians Stampeding

It is Rumoured That the German Armies Will Retire Behind the Rhine.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Oct. 29.— Colourful reports, pouring into London from the Hague, quoting Berlin newspapers, expose a military coup d'etat planned by Gen. Ludendorff and Field Marshal Von Hindenburg to block concessions to President Wilson. The Vorwaerts declares the constitutional changes were rushed to frustrate the coup d'etat. Exposure of the alleged plot is believed to have forced the resignation of Ludendorff and to have started a movement also to oust Von Hindenburg. Members of the Reichstag and the Socialist press daily demand the abdication of the Kaiser. "The Vocaler" of Dusseldorf declares it is persistently rumoured that the German armies will retire behind the Rhine. German headquarters will be transferred to Dusseldorff, the newspaper says, where it is officially admitted the quartermaster's department is registering billets. Civilians are stampeding from the lower Rhine region and Westphalia. A Zurich despatch from Budapest says the stormiest demonstrations are being enacted there, similar to those of 1848 (the date of the Hungarian revolution.)

EPIDEMIC NOT DUE TO MALNUTRITION

The High Mortality Rate Due to Secondary Infection.

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, Oct. 29.—Bacterial investigation shows that the present outbreak of influenza all over Europe does not differ from other epidemics of the same malady. The higher mortality rate being due to secondary infection according to a statement made by William Hayes Fisher in the House of Commons. He added that he saw no reason to believe that the spread of the disease was due to malnutrition of the people generally. It is hoped to trace the microbe and find a means of destroying it.

Despatches from Germany say forty-five thousand railway workers in Prussia and Hesse are incapacitated through Spanish influenza, and railway traffic is very seriously affected all over the German Empire.

WAR SUMMARY

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.— The Associated Press to-day issued the following summary: Allied troops maintain their progress east of the Piave and have taken more than fifteen thousand prisoners. Italians, British and French seriously threaten the important railroad points of Conegliano and Oderzo, and two of the three railway lines supporting the Austro-Hungarians on the Piave front. On the western front in France heavy fighting is virtually at a standstill on the front northward from Le Cateau to the Dutch frontier, but from the Oise to the east of the Meuse Allied pressure continues with gains for the French between the Oise and the Serre. Apparently Allied thrusts in the mountain zone between the Piave and Brenta were feints for the purpose of attracting the attention of the enemy from the more formidable movement across the Piave. Troops and supplies are being rushed to the Piave front, and it is evidently purposed to force the offensive to the utmost.

FRANK JENNE SAYS.

If the maxim that "The Best is the Cheapest" holds goods in ordinary times, it is doubly true to-day. Poor clothing is relatively so much higher in price than good clothing that it pays an economical man to buy the best and less of it. New Semi-Ready Suits are at my shop; for your suit "Come to Me."

GOOD HEALTH.

Impossible without good eyesight. Eye strains are the direct cause of all sorts of nervous disorders. Distressing head-aches are one of the most common symptoms. If you would be sure of the condition of your eyes, consult Dr. Lacey, 410 George Street.

Italian and British Troops Have Driven a Great Wedge into the Piave Front.

OFFICIAL REPORT.

Special to The Examiner:

ROME, Oct. 29.—Italian and British troops, continuing their offensive in the Piave-region, have broken through the Austrian lines on a wide front, the Italian War Office announced to-day. The Allies have driven a great wedge into the enemy lines north east of Treviso, advancing more than five miles east of the Piave, on a fifteen mile front. The villages of Bruge, Malanotte, Tezze, Rai, San Michael Di Piave, Cimadolmo, Ormelte, Rezadelle, Tempio and Bianche have been captured. San Luici Di Piave and Vazzola have been entered. Italian troops are within a mile of the Monticano river. In the mountain region the Italians have extended their gain north of the Ornic river. Numerous prisoners have been taken, in addition to the 9,000 announced in yesterday's communique. The Italians have entered the important town of Alessio in Albania (twenty miles south of Scutari) and are advancing on San Guiovanni Di Medua.

The battle is proceeding on a front of about fifty miles from the Asiago region to a point on the Piave between Treviso and Oderzo. The Italians and British are across the Piave on the whole thirty mile front between Valdobbiadene and Roncadelle.

Fifteen thouseand Austrian prisoners have now been captured by the British and Italian forces in the new advance across the Piave river.

Crossing the Piave.

(By Henry Wood.)

Special to The Examiner:

WITH THE ITALIAN ARMY IN THE FIELD, Oct. 29.— The Italians are now advancing on a continuous front of sixty kilometers, extending east of Mont Spinocia to Rocandelle. The Austrian lines have been completely pierced east of the Piave. Italian patrols already have crossed the Monticano river fifteen kilometers, nearly ten miles beyond the Piave.

A number of additional bridges have been thrown across the Piave and these are being constantly added to as the engineers work like madmen. Across these bridges light infantry and other units poured all night long in increasing numbers to take up the pressure against the enemy where his lines have been shattered.

Six Austrian divisions have lost more than fifty per cent of their effectives so far in the Anglo-Italian offensive, according to a despatch from Rome to-day.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES, Oct. 29.—Bitter fighting is in progress in Mount Thory Wood, near Valenciennes. The Germans counter-attacked with heavy forces, and latest reports are that part of the wood is held by both sides.

ROOSEVELT ASKS VOTERS OF NATION TRANSFER CONTROL

Characterizes Wilson's Policy as Obscure and Wavering.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, answering President Wilson's appeal for the return of a Democratic majority in Congress, urges the voters of the nation, in an address here last night, to transfer control to Republican leadership. Such an outcome of the election, he declared, would assure our Allies that America is determined to speed up war and insist on unconditional surrender of the enemy and would serve notice on Germany and her vassal states that they would have to deal henceforth with the resolute and straightforward soul of the American people and not merely with the obscure purposes and wavering will of Mr. Wilson.

Declaring that half the leaders of the President's own party opposed him when he had committed himself to war measures, Mr. Roosevelt asserted that the heads of the Republican organization in Congress supported the administration when a declaration of war was needed when there was demand for defeat, when the army was sent overseas and when money was required by the taxation of by loans.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 29TH, 1918.

PETERBORO'S TASK.

Peterboro County knows what is expected of it in the Victory Loan campaign. $1,600,000 is the amount Peterboro will have to raise before we can hoist an honour flag as a symbol of our success. It is a lot of money, but there is no doubt among the members of the committee as to the success of the drive. Thamesville clinched an honour flag in thirty minutes by subscribing $48,000, and this spectacular feat, although undoubtedly carefully prepared in advance, is a happy omen for the general success of the Victory Loan campaign.

The Loan makes such a direct appeal, not only to the patriotism, but to the intelligence of the community, that it is hard to conceive of failure. The absolute necessity for raising the money, the high interest rate, the unquestionable surety of the investment, all combine to commend the loan to every citizen. There should be no hesitation but a spontaneous lending of the nation's wealth in a flood that will fill the country's coffers and help to sweep the German menace from the face of the earth.

This is no time for slackening our efforts. The foe is being beaten back from France and Belgium, and the Allies, instead of reducing their pressure, must increase it to the maximum to achieve final success. Canada's Victory Loan of 1918 means an increase in the pressure—an increase that will be felt everywhere in the war zone.

Peterboro must raise $1,600,000. That is the minimum, and we can do better than that.

Lend, lend, lend.

DAYLIGHT SAVING.

The argument advanced by the writer of the letter signed "Democracy" in last evening's Examiner that the "daylight saving scheme was inaugurated by Canadian manufacturers to get more work out of their employees," is an insult to public intelligence. "Demo racy" must know that the daylight savings measure was advocated by practically every daily newspaper in Canada, and that it has given great satisfaction in all urban communities. It is true that many farmers were dissatisfied with the system. They had made up their minds in advance that the daylight saving scheme would not be successful, and were determined to not even give it a trial, so stuck to the old time and thereby coused confusion to themselves. The Examiner believes that the people of the cities and towns of Canada have been delighted with the system during the past summer, and that if a vote were to be taken, it would show ninety per cent. of the people in urban centres to be in favour of daylight saving. The only fault that has been found with the system is that it was, perhaps, carried on too late in the autumn, many people thinking the end of September is late enough.

The charge that the daylight saving plan was fostered on the community by the manufacturers, is too ridiculous to be considered, and will deceive no one.

A SPLENDID RESPONSE

There is something inspiring in the manner in which the call for volunteer workers to help prepare the Oriental Hotel building for use as a temporary hospital has been answered. Scores of women from all ranks of life, many of whom could all spare the time from their home duties toiled all day yesterday, scrubbing floors, washing windows, busy with mop and scrubbing brush, cheerfully performing whatever duties were assigned them. And the women did not carry off all the honours, there were faithful male workers as well, city officials, clergymen, school teachers, all working eagerly and well.

The spirit demonstrated by these faithful volunteers shows that in danger and distress the people of Peterboro are determined to stand by each other. There was encouragement in the spectacle in the Oriental building yesterday. One got the feeling that bad though the situation is there are courageous souls and willing hands in Peterboro to fight the epidemic and that through the efforts of this noble band and the strenuous unsparing fight of the doctors, who have been working at top pressure for many days, snatching a few hours sleep when the oportunity arises, the worst of the influenza outbreak will soon have been passed and normal conditions restored.

WORDS AND DEEDS.

What They Say Differs From What They Do.

The following appeared in the London Globe under the heading, "Hun Words and Deeds":

"We see everywhere how our soldiers respect the sacred defenselessness of woman and child."—Prof. G. Roethe, in "German Reflections in Difficult Times."

"As they continued their advance, the Germans collected about 400 men, women and children (some of the women with babies in their arms) and drove them forward as a screen against the Belgian forces holding the outer ring of the Antwerp lines."—Appendix to the Report of the Bryce Committee.

"We are still childlike in our inmost feelings, innocent in our pleasures."—Freidrich Lange, in "The True German Spirit."

"Went on the loose and 'boozed' through the streets of Liege."—Diary of a German soldier, quoted in the Appendix to the Report of the Bryce Committee.

"We take refuge in our quite peculiar idealism, and dream, alas aloud! of our ideal mission for the saving of mankind." — Hans V. Wolzogen, in "Thoughts in Wartime."

The German Secretary of State for the colonies has admitted that from 1902 to 1913, 105,000 natives have been killed in expeditions against them.

"We thank our German army that it has kept spotless the shield of humanity and chivalry." — Prof. W. Kahl in "German Reflections in Difficult Times."

"While a number of wounded were being attended to in a hospital at Gomery, a patrol of the Forty-seventh German Infantry appeared and began a general massacre of the wounded and medical staff. The hospital full of wounded, was deliberately set on fire."—Germany's Violation of the Laws of War" (Bland).

"From all sides testimonies are flowing in as to the noble manner in which our troops conduct the war."—Pastor J. Rump.

"The brigade order is to shoot all Frenchmen who fall into our hands, wounded or not. No prisoners are to be made."—Diary of R. Brennefsen, One Hundred Twelfth German Regiment, prisoner in Great Britain.

"It is true that the breast of every soldier swelled with a noble pride at the thought that he was privileged to wear the German uniform, which history has made a garb of honor above all others."—"The German and the War," by K. Engelbrecht.

"Detached parties were to enter the streets, but actually the battalion marched in close order into the town, to break into the first houses and loot. Like a wild pack they broke loose, each on their own; officers set a good example by going on ahead. A night in a barracks with many drunk was the end of this day, which aroused in me a contempt I cannot describe."—Extract from the diary of Gaston Klein, a German private.

"The German soldiers alone are thoroughly disciplined, and have never so much as hurt a hair of a single innocent human being." — H. S. Chamberlain (the renegade) in "Treatise on War."

"My company is at Bouvignes. Our men behave like vandals; the sight of the slaughtered inhabitants defies all description. Not a house is left standing. We have dragged out of every corner all survivors, one after another — men, women and children, found in a burning cloister, and have shot them 'en masse."—Diary of a Saxon officer.

A Modern Chevalier

By ALVAH JORDAN GARTH

Dolph Waring, newspaper man, was really enjoying the companionship of a professional burglar. He had the full freedom of the police station, and at a hint from the desk sergeant he had gone down into the cellroom, looking for material for a special article for the columns of the daily journal he served.

Joe Ward, cracksman, that day held over to the grand jury, was glad to relieve the monotony of his incarceration by detailing his professional exploits, especially after Waring had given him a good cigar.

Joe recited a dozen instances of daring peril and criminal cleverness in which Waring discovered the basis for a first class "special." Then Joe uttered a prodigious sigh as he observed, "And to think of getting behind the bars all on account of an efficiency expert!"

"How was that?" inquired Waring.

"Well, you know business, even ours, is becoming modernized, when the jimmy with which we battered old iron boxes was superseded by the 'drag,' we adopted it because it did the work thoroughly, without noise, on the latest up-to-date safe. So, when a fellow we knew as Limpy Dan came to the gang with a proposition that looked progressive, we considered it.

"What was it?" propounded Waring interestedly.

"Well, Limpy has only one foot and couldn't run if the police were after him. He had ambitions in crooked ways, just the same. He comes to us to tell us that, as an efficiency expert in burglarious lines, he was ready to hire out as a pilot.

"You mean—?"

"Here was his scheme: Limpy is a slick, but simple-looking fellow and can hang around unsuspicioned where we'd be vagged on general principles. He was to be our advance agent, see? He'd go to a neighborhood and pick out hopeful prospects. Number one was a house where a young fellow named Ward Caverly lived. By prying around Limpy got stray peeps into the room where this Caverly slept. He had a chance of observing him, several nights in succession when he went to bed, removed from his bosom a package. 'Bet it's a diamond, or rich loot, anyway,' reported Limpy, 'for he sleeps with it under his pillow every night.' We laid for the young fellow, who put up a terrific fight which sent him to a hospital, but we got the package. What do you think was in it? A cheap little medallion with the picture of a girl."

From sheer disgust and indignation, Joe Ward had to consume several minutes before he could resume.

"Tip number two was another smart bit of this 'efficiency expert!' Rich man named John Hood lived all alone at Weedham, twenty miles from the city. Limpy knew he was rich, for he was the guardian of a stepdaughter with a fortune. Nosing around, Limpy had discovered an upper room with barred windows. Aha! why barred? To protect oodles of treasure, of course. I went out one night to look over the job. There was a light in the room—but so much the better, I would probably find the old Croesus counting his vast store of gold. I skinned up a lightning rod, got my eyes on a level with the window and could have choked with rage. The room had no safe nor vault, just a pretty girl sitting asleep in a chair. I slid to the ground. 'March!' said someone, and there was a weazened old coot with a gun. He had my tool kit in one hand. When he met an officer he handed me over for attempted burglary. I'd like to have that Limpy in this cell for a few minutes! Say, here's a souvenier of one of those exploits I've been telling you about," and Joe drew a little medallion from his pocket. "That's the big loot we got from Ward Caverly."

"Thanks," nodded Waring, but he lingered, for following his last remark Ward enunciated a strange addition: "Say, it's queer, but the girl I saw in that barred room was the original of that picture," and then, the quick conception of a romance and a mystery coming vividly into his thoughts, Waring probed for further details.

The young newspaper man was an idealist and a quick thinker.

Alice Doane, the stepdaughter of the man who had captured Joe Ward, was his fiancee. The mercenary Hood had opposed their marriage because he controlled the estate of his ward and had a friend he wished her to wed. He had given out that Alice was sojourning with a relative thousands of miles away.

"And all the time he has kept Alice a prisoner—the wretch!" burst forth Cavalry. "Oh, that I was well enough to forcibly wrest her from her prison place!"

"You would carry her offhand, eh?" smiled Waring.

"I would."

"Very well, you leave it to me to bring you two together."

And this was how Waring did it. A dark night, a ladder, a steel saw, an appearance at the window of the room that held the fair Alice, a rapid explanation, a descent, flight, the lovers reunited. Waring never left the happy pair until he had seen them wedded. Then he went his way—only a simple-minded newspaper man, but a true chevalier and a gentleman.

OLD WORLD BARBERS.

Their Prices Are Low and Methods In Some Cases Are Crude.

The barber shops of the United States and Canada are the finest in the world and charge the highest prices. Comparatively few cities of Europe use American chairs, and many of these run their barber shops in connection with men's furnishing stores.

In most European cities a hair cut and a shampoo cost 6 cents, and in parts of London a shave costs 4 cents. In some Italian cities 1 cent is charged for a shave and 2 cents for a hair cut, and in Turkey barbers take their entire pay in tips.

Many German barbers make wigs and switches while waiting for customers, and many French barbers do ladies' hairdressing. Austrian barbers are compelled to serve apprenticeships of four years on pay beginning at 41 cents a week and ending at $1.02 a week before they can own their shops.

Syrian barbers seat their customers in straight backed chairs before tiny wall mirrors and fix queer shaped pans about their throats. Then they rub on with their fingers lather made from cheap soap.

In India your barber calls at your house and shaves you every morning for $2 a month.

In China the barbers carry stools, small tubs, razors and scissors about the streets, stopping on the sidewalks to perform their work, just as scissors grinders do in America.—New York Sun.

Cool Days Turn Thoughts to Fall Apparel

School Openings Bring Back Vacationists.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—The opening of school marks the return to town of the majority of people. This is of course quite a ceremonious occasion for the children and even for the elder girls who are looking forward to entering high school, boarding school or college. There is so much to look forward to. So much planning and delightful imaginary things to dream about.

And their clothes are not the least important. These, in fact, come first. But why not? Every schoolgirl likes and enjoys appearing at her best. The shops have on display many new smart models that are just the thing for studious days. The utility coats are developed in tweeds of charming colours, and Scotch plaids are in evidence. Plaids are so youthful and are worn to the best advantage when a fresh rosy-cheeked Miss appears in a jaunty sports costume of this fabric.

Velvets for Dress Wear.

Then there are those ever-attractive skirts which are box- or side-pleated. Owing to the fact that this model affords unlimited comfort, it is a favourite in the wardrobe of all. When recreation hours are nigh, the most appealing thing that one thinks of is velvet. More than ever is this stuff being used because of the government request to conserve wool. Simplicity as usual marks the frock. At an opening of one of our well-known schools I saw a particularly nice frock worn by a light-haired blue-eyed girl of about twelve years. The dress was black velvet in one piece from shoulder to hem, with a panel at the front and back which extended about three-quarter ways down from the neckline. The sleeves were three-quarter length, and the cuffs, which turned up, were faced with robin's-egg-blue satin. I almost forgot the two little pockets that just perched out in the front panels; these, too, were faced with the satin.

This little girl was dressed in perfect taste, and although her hair was just as straight as can be imagined it was done in a very becoming fashion. The front part was combed back off her forehead and caught at the back with a little shell pin. The rest of the locks hung straight down to about her shoulders, trimmed in a nice clean-cut fashion, and I assure you that I was very glad of my own straight hair after looking and feasting my eyes on this charming little creature, so naive, yet so full of possibilities. For once the curly-haired cherubim seemed to fade in the background while this slight intelligent child was devidedly noticeable and admirable.

The Toronto Markets

TORONTO, October 29. — Live stock receipts are light, trade quiet. Prices for choice export cattle, $12 to $12.50; choice butcher, $9.50 to $10.50; choice cows, $8.75 to $9.25; feeding steers, $8.50 to $9; ewes, $12 to $14; hogs, $17.75; calves $16.25 to $17.00.

FUNERALS OF THREE NURSES IN LINDSAY

They Died on Sunday From the Effects of Pneumonia.

Lindsay witnessed the funerals yesterday of three nurses who had died of pneumonia within a few hours of each other on Sunday. They were Miss Mary Costello, Miss Risba Pratt of Petrolia, who was a nurse-in-training at the Ross Memorial Hospital, and Miss Margaret Meehan.

More Ways Than One to Play the Fiddle

(By United Press.)

LONDON, Oct. 8.—(By Mail.) — Frederick C. Holliday, Liverpool violinist, lost his right thumb in France, and it was feared that he would have to abandon the profession.

However, by means of a mechanical contrivance fixed to the bow, Holliday is able to play again. He has obtained his discharge from the army, and is about to resume his musical career.

WELL HE EARNED IT

(By United Press.)

LONDON, Oct. 3.— (By Mail.)— A Midland munition worker, who before the war earned only $12.50 a week entered a large city music store and purchased a piano for $400. On leaving the shop he noticed another instrument and inquired the price. The salesman replied that it was $150.

"Send that also with the other," was his comment. "It will do for my little girl to practice on."

Both instruments were paid for on the spot.

Despite the fact that nearly 300,000 women voters registered at the recent primary election in New York political leaders expressed disappointment at the small turnout of the fem-

THE EMERGENCY HOSPITAL WILL SOON BE IN SHAPE FOR RECEPTION OF INFLUENZA PATIENTS

Various Organizations Have Responded to the Call for Help—Twenty Hospital Beds Donated—Heating Plant Has Been Connected Up.

Mayor G. H. Duncan is gratified by the splendid response the different organizations and workers have made in rushing through the work of preparing Dr. C. H. Amy's emergency hospital, in the old Oriental hotel.

With the work done yesterday by the Daughters of the Empire, and scores of voluntary helpers, the ten rooms on the west side are to-day ready to receive patients directly bed clothing can be secured. However, Miss Reid does not expect to open the hospital for a couple of days yet.

Donated 20 Beds.

The Barnardo Home loaned twenty hospital beds, which have been set up in the different rooms. The old sitting room up-stairs has been converted into a ward of eight beds, while in the other rooms four and five beds have been made ready, and with the scrupulous cleanliness and general air of order the old hotel looks like an hospital of some years standing.

Furnace Connected.

Mr. C. Stapleton is particularly pleased with the work done by Mr. E. Hensley, who undertook the plumbing and heating of the building. Refusing all calls from regular customers, he had his gang of six men at work all day Sunday and Sunday night, and two on the job all last night getting up steam. Mr. Hensley said the furnace was in splendid condition, but as some of the heating apparatus has been taken out the work was complicated. On account of the removal of this, the quarters originally intended for the help have been shut off and the third floor on the west side is being opened up to-day by voluntary workers.

Postmen Assist.

When the posties had finished their routes yesterday afternoon several went over to the new hospital, and scrubbed the long halls and washed windows. Mr. Stapleton, who himself stayed with the job until after 11 o'clock, and turned up at 7.30 this morning, was enthusiastic over the work accomplished by the postmen.

Many Donations.

Practically every society and organization has done something in the way of helping out. The Rebeccas have volunteered to supply dishes, as have many other societies. A large number of hospital utensils and other supplies, arrived yesterday and this morning, but there is still need for more.

As soon as the hardwood flooring and boxes belonging to the Royal Theatre can be removed the windows on the east side of the new hospital will get their much-needed cleaning, and the outside appearance be much improved.

The Staff.

While the nursing staff has not as yet been completed by the organizer, Miss Alford, it will to a great extent be taken over by the St. John's Ambulance Class, of which Miss Bessie Reid is president. Already the four young ladies available, have had a great deal of experience by going out voluntarily to nurse influenza, and are in Miss Alford's opinion, quite capable of taking over the work.

'S THE RUSSIAN INFLUENCE ON OUR MUSIC INDELIBLE?

By many it has been taken for granted that our musical programmes would from now on contain a goodly proportion of Russian numbers. The tours of the Russian Symphony Orchestra, Russian pianists, the generous crop of Russian violinists, and talking machine records of Russian selections have all assisted very greatly in turning public attention to Russian music. It was expected therefore, that the Russian style would work its way into the compositions of present day writers.

Especially in the field of church music has the Russian influence been exerted. And yet a prominent organist is on record as being doubtful of the lasting influence of Russian style on church music. "The Russian school, the newest and most important of late church music developments," he says "has changed the thought of contemporary composition and the technic of choir singing. Now whether this change is indelible is argumentative. My own feeling is that the Russian church music is a passing phase, a phase that has already begun to wane. Possibly we have not exhausted Russian music. There is a great deal more of it than we have heard or know. But the keen edge of interest has been dulled. I find those of us who have done much for Russian music are scanning the heavens, Elijah-wise, for newer or different clouds. I am not trying to depreciate the Russian school, only it seems to me the orchid like aspects of this particular music do not fit the psychology of our Anglo Saxon church minds.

While the organist quoted cannot be said to be an unqualified champion of Russian music, he admits certain results it has accomplished for us. It has shown that a cappella singing is a greater art than the muddy, tiresome, organ accompaniment often written; that a tune you can whistle does not make church music; that certain great effects may be secured by disregarding harmony rules, writing fifths, singing in octaves and having two or three tonalities; also that it is possible to cluster basses and tenors, to double trebles, and to sing no end of repetitive notes.

THE NEW GLORY OF MUSIC

Some years ago the criticism directed against modern music was that it is marked by mediocrity, by attention to form rather than to meaning. Modern music lacked vitality and power. But with the coming of war and the awakening of a long dormant emotional life conditions have changed. Today the feeling is that from the war and the tremendous quickening it has given to all intellectual life will come a more powerful, more inspiring music.

How far will the musicians share in it? Who can say? But owing to our greater distance from the seat of war our young musicians, particularly those of creative power, have not been so intimately in touch with it as have the young men musicians of France, Belgium Great Britain, Italy and the Central Powers. Let us hope that we shall share richly in the new glory of music.

EVEN MUSIC IS DRAGGED INTO GERMAN PROPAGANDA

It seems fitting that after Germany's typically "generous" offer to supply music, and lots of it, for the people in neutral countries, she should herself receive a "treat." The private orchestra of the Sultan of Turkey is reported to have made a journey to Berlin to give a series of concerts there for the benifit of war charities. This orchestra has been trained by a Turkish musician who studied in Berlin and is said to specialize in German music together with some Turkish national airs arranged for orchestra by an Austrian who lives in Constantinople.

These concerts may be intended as something of a compensation for the expenditure of twenty-four million marks ($6,000,000) which "Le Courrier Musical" affirms the German Government has spent for musical propaganda during the first years of the war. This paper says the Krupps are now pouring funds for that purpose into Switzerland; that Holland, Sweden and Spain are receiving offers of orchestras virtuosi, of artists of every sort from beyond the Rhyne, duly furnished with programs, materials and complimentary tickets.

"Le Courrier Musical" feels there is a danger in France's doing nothing to "industrialize" beyond its frontier its own national art. It may be that the people of these neutral lands will not be as much influenced by their Kultur-dispensing visitors as the German authorities think.

ODDS AND ENDS.

BE A BOOSTER.

I'd rather be a BOOSTER,
The smallest one in town,
Than be the biggest knocker
And try to tear it down.
I'd rather be a BOOSTER,
And with the boosters stand,
Than be a lonesome knocker,
A cumbering the land.
I'd rather be a BOOSTER,
And only boost a mite,
Than be a knocker knocking
At everything in sight.
I'd rather be a BOOSTER,
And wear a pleasant smile,
Than be a grouchy knocker,
Complaining all the while.
I'd rather be a BOOSTER,
With purpose good and true,
Than sit around a-knocking—
Now, sincerely, wouldn't you?

Protect Your Town.

Protect your own town and thereby show that you are in favour of protection. If protection is good for the nation it is good for the town. As townspeople we should favour our town above every other as the growth and development of it is what will enhance the value of all property both in and about it. Then buy your drygoods, groceries, hardware, furniture, etc., at home; have printing, your blacksmithing, your shoe-making done at home; patronize home in every instance that you can. The success of our merchants and mechanics means new business houses and residences, additional demands for labour of various kinds. To the farmer a first-class town affords a better market for his grain, a better trading point, and such a town is bound to increase the value of his land. Unquestionably "in union there is strength." Let us protect our town.

It does not cost very much to own a home in our town. Lots splendidly located and of ample size can be purchased for from $200 to $500 while close building lots sell at from $600 to $1,000. Building materials as reasonable here as at other points. Able architects and contractors are ready to satisfy every demand. Hence to own a home is within the range of possibility, no matter how meagre the salary or limited the means. If a man is honest, upright and displays a willingness to help himself, there are people here, many who will give him whatever help is needed, so long as it be within the bounds of reason.

The latest invention to hang in the family dining room is the gum board. It is a neat little circular board, plain, or decorated, fastened to the wall. The name of each of the family is painted on the circumference, and marks the spot where the gum is left until wanted. This saves carrying the gum to bed and getting it in one's hair or swallowing it in the night. It is obvious that the gum board supplies a long felt want, and he who invented the new fad will have the best wishes of the young ladies.

The poor editor was dying; but when the doctor placed his ear to the patient's heart and muttered sadly, "Poor fellow, circulation almost gone," the editor raised himself and gasped: "'Tis false, we have the largest circulation of any paper in the country!" then sank back upon his pillow, with a triumphant smile upon his face. He was consistent to the end—lying about his circulation.

A young woman said she was born to be a farmer's wife because she engaged in milking when an infant, and took to cradling early. Later she often cut up and shocked her parents and filled her crib. At an early age she learned to sew, and she had cultivated her acquaintance with a young agriculturist and as soon as she placed her affections she intended to "make hay while the sun was shining." This was too much for an impressible tiller of the soil, so he gathered her up in his arms and garnered her.

There are events occurring in every community which, if reported in a local paper, would create a commotion little dreamed of. What to report and what not to report often perplexes the editor. He is often justly accused of cowardice and favouritism, when all the time he is looking toward the good reputation of the town where his lot is cast. The local editor from necessity almost constantly finds himself between two fires, and which-ever way he turns he is sure to be unjustly treated. This is one of the pleasures of the newspaper business.

For a good everyday household angel, give us a woman who laughs. Home is not a battlefield, nor life one long unending row. A trick of always seeing the bright side, or, if the thing has no bright side, of shining up the dark one, is a very important faculty and one of the things no woman should be born without. We are not all born with the sunshine in our hearts, as the Irish prettily phrase it; but we can cultivate a cheerful sense of humour if we only try.

Everyone is interested in an item of local news. If you know of any local happening that is not generally known communicate the fact to this office.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Peterboro Soldier Covered Position With Machine Gun

Particulars Concerning Death of Private Harry Boyler.

Mr. George Boyler has received the following letter in connection with the death in action of his son Pte. Harry Boyler, formerly of the 93rd Battalion band.

France, Sept. 16.

Dear Sir,—It is very difficult for me to commence this letter to the father of one of the most gallant boys in my company.

Henry was with me through the most severe part of the fighting when we broke through the Drocourt-Queant line, the last defence of the Hun and he came particularly to my notice when his platoon was practically wiped out. His platoon officer and sergeant severely wounded and the remainder practically demoralized by the intense enemy fire, Henry took his Lewis gun and got it into play on the enemy's position and this helped considerably in covering the advance of the remnant of the platoon.

PTE. HARRY BOYLER

On the following day the position my company held came under a heavy bombardment and when I was informed that among other casualties your son had been killed it caused me great sorrow. How much more, therefore, will you his father, feel his loss.

You have reason to be proud, Mr. Boyler of having such a brave great-hearted son. His behaviour under fire was simply splendid and he was still smiling at the last.

His last resting place is on the edge of a little wood near the village of Eagincourt where his comrades laid him and it seems fit that he should sleep on ground that he so courageously had helped to wrest from the dastardly Hun.

In closing allow me to extend to you and his other loved ones, my deepest sympathy.

Sincerely
A. H. COLLINS, Capt.
4th Canadian Battalion.

Food Supply in Lille Area Reaches Starvation Point

Energetic Measures Needed by Relief Commission to Prevent Distress During the Coming Winter, Washington Hears.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29. — Food supplies for the civilian population of the Lille region of France recently evacuated by the Germans are at an extremely low stage and only measures by the Commission for Relief in Belgium will prevent much distress during the coming winter.

Despatches received to-day at the offices of the Commission here said the present supply of food in the region cannot possibly last more than two weeks. All communication systems were destroyed by the retreating Germans and motor lorries must be depended upon to bring up the needed supplies. Much sickness also is reported in the Lille region and conditions there were described as even worse than in the adjacent Belgian territory.

to connect the rail heads of big wide-gauged railways with the front. Supplies come surprisingly near the front on the big railways From their stopping places auto trucks and narrow gauges carry stuff to fighting range.

Ordinary roads often are crowded and in rainy weather are hard to make speed over. The little narrow-gauge trains run all the time to relieve traffic, doing most of the work at night. They are quickly repaired when blown up, and are extended in few hours.

Following the recent advance of the doughboys across No Man's land, the railway engineers soon had their tracks laid and puffing little engines dragged chains of cars loaded with necessary supplies to the infantry and artillery.

Once across No Man's Land, the engineers were able to hook onto railroads left by the fleeing Germans, and the Americans had a fairly extensive temporary system already laid out for them. They used captured German engines and cars, too, temporarily. But the loche rolling stock did not compare with the cars marked "U S A" seed Boorl sap uTF t Eth lteaiw a

A great many of the railway engineers are former railroad men who have come into the army. Their knowledge of railroading and their familiarity with speedy construction and operation of railroads learned in "the States" made them old hands at the trnsportation end of the army.

Liquor Prescriptions on the Increase

Large Number Issued Locally During the Present Month.

The number of liquor prescriptions issued during October by local physicians is nearly double of the preceding month, the increase being due to the fact that doctors who never issued prescriptions before are now giving them to people afflicted with the "flu." Some doctors before the epidemic, refused to give more than four or five orders a day, but now they are issuing the coveted papers according to the needs of their patients. There is no maximum set by the Ontario License Commission, the number of orders which a doctor may give is governed entirely by common sense, that number naturally being greatly increased during an epidemic like the present.

Food Board Flashes

"It has been estimated by the Millinery Chamber of Commerce that the expenditure for women's headgear in the United States is more than $250,000,000 a year. This would average $5 per capita for women and girls of all ages."

This huge amount spent on hats would pay for nearly thirty times the quantities of beef, bacon, butter, eggs condensed milk and cheese shipped from Canada to the Allies last year. Thrift could be made to pay for the war.

167 DEATHS IN TWO DAYS

MONTREAL, Oct. 28—Dr. S. Boucher, City Medical Officer, states that the figures of the influenza epidemic show a decrease, with total deaths on Saturday 94. On Sunday deaths reported were only 73, although returns are regarded as incomplete. Cases reported yesterday were only 19 which is certainly much below the fact. Total cases since October 1 to date, 14,631, with 2,425 deaths.

Little Railways Speed Up Battles

By FRANK J. TAYLOR
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Oct. 3. (By Mail—The American railway engineers played an important role in the battle of St. Mihiel sector They didn't get out and take Germans, but they made it possible for others to do so.

All up and down the American front there is a network of narrow-gauged railways, running to every point along the front and connecting the fighters with their bases in the rear.

The Americans have developed railway building along the front to a high degree of efficiency. They can lay a track through a wood or across a field in almost no time, and soon little engines specially built for the front are chugging along dragging strings of cars loaded with shells, food and other things the doughboys need.

The little trains look like toys, they are so small, but they do the work of full grown railway outfits. They carry enormous loads and wind along through fields, woods, roads and villages with great speed. There isn't any block system to keep trains from meeting along the way, but someway genius of these American railway engineers keeps lots of trains going all the time with seldom any congestion.

Switches and sidings help keep roads clear. These are frequent as the healthy toot of the little American locomotives. The toot is modeled after that of full grown Baldwin, and is a sound which delights the doughboys. Americans never have liked the frantic squeak they put on French locomotives instead of a whistle.

Government is Getting Control of C.N.R. Stock

Only One Outside Shareholder Left —Holds Five Shares.

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Oct. 29. — The government will shortly have acquired all of the minority stock of the Canadian Northern Railway. In fact it would appear that at a very early date there will be but two shareholders in the company, namely, the government itself and an individual in San Francisco, who holds five shares, and who declines to part with them.

After kissing a girl for the first time, a young man always regrets the opportunities he has wasted.

AMERICANS TOO.

(By United Press.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—Porto Rico is developing some husky young athletes at its big training camp at San Juan, the Commission on Training Camp Activities reports.

Baseball, football and boxing form a part of camp life, as at the big cantonments in the states. While American sports are new to Porto Ricans, they are learning them as quickly as they are the science of modern warfare, the commission says.

SPANISH INFLUENZA

This epidemic is now prevalent throughout Ontario, and in some localities is getting worse. Every precaution should be taken to prevent the spread of this dreaded disease. Keep your room well ventilated, eat no more nor less than what is required, as it attacks a great many people who suffer from indigestion. Wash the hands before eating, and every member of the house should have their own towels. Keep the mouth, throat and nose free from germs by using PYROLL as a spray and mouthwash two or three times a day.

PYROLL is not a Patent Medicine, the formula is on the bottle. Doctors, Dentists and Druggists recommend it as a preventative of La Grippe and Spanish Influenza. 3d-08

An Independent State Has Been Formed in Hungary

Constitution Was Amended and Military Authorities Placed Under Control of Civil Government.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 29.—An independent and anti-dynastic state has been formed in Hungary under the leadership of Count Michael Karolyi in agreement with the Czechs and South Slavonians, according to Vienna reports received by the "Politiken." In a speech at Budapest, Karolyi declared he had presented his programme to Emperor Charles, who refused to accept it. Karolyi thereupon put into effect his plan for an independent state.

Count Michael Karolyi is president of the Hungarian Independent party, and has long been an opponent of the Government party of Count Tisza. He has been in favour of Hungarian independence, and on October 20 submitted a motion in the Hungarian House of Lords for disunion of Hungary from Austria. In addition to being anti-German, Count Karolyi has appealed to Austria-Hungary to make peace since December, 1915. On several occasions he has demanded in the Hungarian Parliament that Hungary make peace. Last February Count Michael was accused of high treason by his cousin. The Hungarian Ministry has never taken action on the charges against him. Shortly before the outbreak of war Count Karolyi was lecturing in America. He sailed for Europe late in July and was detained at Bordeaux for several months, finally being allowed to return home.

PALMER COULDN'T RAISE HAND TO HEAD

Every Muscle in Body Ached With Rheumatism—Like New Man After Taking Tanlac.

"I have lived in Portland for thirty years and there are just lots of people here who know that Tanlac has made a new man of me," said J. H. Palmer, the well-known transfer and baggage man, residing at 266 Knott street, Portland, Ore., recently.

"I have been a sufferer from rheumatism twenty-five years," continued Mr. Palmer, "and reached the point where I never expected to get well, or even any better. I spent thousands of dollars trying to get relief, but gradually got worse. Every muscle in my body seemed to be drawn up, every joint stiff, and I could not move without suffering agony. When I walked instead of lifting my feet, I would just have to drag them along, and if my life had depended on it I could not have raised by hands high enough to touch the back of my head. I was laid up for more than two years at one time. After sitting down for a while I couldn't get up without holding onto something, and after I did get on my feet it would take me several minutes to straighten myself up. During the past year or two my condition became very much worse. My whole system seemed to be run-down. My kidneys bothered me nearly all the time, my back hurt me, and at times I would almost scream from pain.

"I also suffered from indigestion. My stomach would bloat up after eating and my food would sour and add more to my misery. I would lay awake more than half the night rubbing my arms and legs trying to get easy so I could get a little rest. I would get awfully blue and despondent over my condition, and yet, could see no way out of my suffering.

"The testimonials of people right here in Portland, some of whom I know personally, caused me to try Tanlac. Well, I am now seventy years old and I just want to say that I have never seen anything like it. Before I finished by first bottle I was eating twice as much as before and felt no bad effects from it. I am now on my fourth bottle, and the rheumatism has just about all left me. Why, my legs are just as limber as if I had never had a touch of rheumatism. I don't suffer any more from constipation and headache and have gained back all my energy and strength and several pounds in weight, besides. Numbers of my friends, who know what Tanlac has done for me, are now taking it with fine results. Yes, sir, Tanlac has done everything for me I could wish, far more than I expected it could do, and I would be willing to go before a notary and make an affidavit as to the truth of this statement."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by B. Pringle & Son.

Red Cross Campaign Requires $5,000 to Reach Objective

The Money is to be Had for the Asking and Canvassers Are Busy Again.

The Red Cross campaign that was upset last week, is again under way to get all the uncollected cards and to see all those whom it was unable to see last week. There never was a finer response to any fund collection than to the present Red Cross campaign. Practically everyone is doing as well as last year and some are increasing their subscriptions. There are no objections, no arguments, but everyone gives the fund their hearty support. Subscriptions can still be left at headquarters if you are afraid you have been overlooked. The committee is very anxious to get more money than was raised last year, as it is all needed. The service the Red Cross gives is wonderful—as one subscriber said, five dollar value for every dollar subscribed.

Farm Work is Well Advanced

A farmer stated this morning that he never had a better crop of potatoes than this year. He had used a special seed from Nova Scotia in one part of his field, and from one bag harvested twenty-two bags. He had twice manured the ground, which had grown oats last year, and as a result has a fine crop ready for the market at prices that are entirely in the producer's favour.

Farm work is progressing steadily The corn crop was exceptionally heavy; silos are bulging and many farmers have surplus stocks of corn, for which they have no ensilage capacity. The pasturage is excellent, but until recently the weather has been too cool. However, with a continuance of the present sunshine and mildness, November may be the dairy month that is so much desired.

The plowing is well advanced, and in fact the conditions throughout the country are highly satisfactory.

VICTORY LOAN TOTALS YESTERDAY

Results Ahead of Last Year's Campaign.

TORONTO, Oct. 29.—As hoped for and confidentially expected by the Victory Loan Committee of 1918, the total subscriptions from the various parts of the Dominion for the first day of this year's campaign exceeded those for the first day of the Victory Loan campaign of 1917 by several million dollars.

Only four Provincial units, British Columbia, Saskatchewan, Ontario, and New Brunswick, have been able to send in their totals for yesterday, and they amount in all to $16,410,000. Nine Provincial units, the whole of Canada, for the first day of the last campaign, raised only $13,583,000.

Lakefield Soldier Dies of Wounds in London Hospital

Lakefield Happenings—Visitors to the Village—Boxes for the Boys Overseas.

LAKEFIELD, Oct. 29.—Mr. and Mrs. Richard Graham, of Sanford, Manitoba, have received news of the death of their son, Pte. Joseph Delbert Graham. Pte. Graham died in a London hospital of gunshot wounds, received October 9th. He left Winnipeg last spring, and after seven months' training in England, he was sent to France, and was only there a short time when he received his fatal wound. He was formerly a resident of Lakefield, and last winter spent three months here with his father and sister. The deceased soldier was only 22 years of age, and was a fine specimen of Canadian manhood. His many friends and relatives here sincerely regret his death.

Christmas Shower.

The A.Y.P.A. of St. John's Church will hold their annual Christmas shower for the soldier members of the A.Y.P.A., and also for the men of St. John's Church on active service on November 6th in the Sunday School-room. As there is a prospect that this will be the last year that we will have the opportunity of contributing to this cause, it is hoped that as many as possible will contribute. Gifts of useful articles and money are asked for.

Comfort Club.

The Soldiers' Comfort Club are supplying wool to be knit for the Lakefield boys overseas on the understanding that each church will knit for their own boys. This means that volunteer knitters are asked for. The following are the depots from which wool can be procured:

Anglican church—Miss Griffin.
Roman Catholic—Miss Kennedy.
Presbyterian— Mrs. Roland Johnson.
Methodist—Mrs. Spence.
Baptist—Mrs. (Rev.) Davies.
All socks are to be in by Nov. 7th.

Personals.

Mr. A. E. Kennedy was in Peterboro on Friday.

Dr. Gibson and Mr. A. J. Kidd left on Friday to join the party of hunters in the Parry Sound District.

Mr. S. Clysdale was a visitor to Peterboro on Friday.

Mr. Walter Stocker of Peterboro, was in the village on business last week.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Bickell spent Friday in Peterboro.

Mr. Matt. McWilliams and son of Toronto, are week-end guests of Mr. J. H. McWilliams.

Miss Garvey was a visitor to Peterborough on Saturday.

Miss Margery Galvin has returned home from a visit to friends in Warkworth and Hastings.

Mrs. F. G. Lowe, of Toronto, was the guest of Mrs. C. A. Gordon for a few days last week.

The marriage of Miss Ethel McIlmoyl, of Ottawa, formerly of Lakefield, to Mr. Leonard Allen, of Ottawa, is announced.

Sunday passed very quietly in Lakefield. It was the second churchless Sunday we have had.

Miss S. Walton of Rochester, N.Y., is the guest of her sister, Mrs. F. J. Burgess.

Mr. J. M. Simpson was in Peterborough on Saturday.

Miss E. M. Arnberg, of Toronto and Mr. Edward Arnberg, of Bobcaygeon, are guests of Mrs. C. A. Gordon.

Mr. I. Jenkinson was in Peterborough on Saturday.

Mrs. Marling motored into Peterborough on Saturday.

Mr. Wm. Davis spent Saturday in Peterborough.

MUST CARRY WIRELESS

EVERY AMERICAN VESSEL REQUIRED TO CARRY COMPETENT OPERATORS.

Every ocean steamer that leaves an American port is required by law to have a wireless telegraph apparatus and operators. An Act of Congress, passed in 1910, made it unlawful for an ocean going steamer carrying passengers to leave or attempt to leave any port of the United States without being equipped with an efficient apparatus for radio communication, in good working order in charge of a person skilled in the use of such apparatus. After the Titanic disaster, in 1912, this Act was amended by providing that "the radio equipment must be in charge of two or more persons skilled in the use of such apparatus, one or the other of whom shall be on duty at all times while the vessel is being navigated."

The up-to-date tailor-made girl will not wear as well as the old-fashioned home-made one.

CAILLAUX TRIAL COMMENCED TO-DAY.

Special to the Examiner:

PARIS, Oct. 29.—Sitting as a High Court, the French Senate to-day began its sittings for the trial of ex-Premier Caillaux, Deputy Louis Tallot and Paul Comby. The accused persons were not present, and the proceedings are only preliminary. They are charged with attempting to bring about a separate peace between France and Germany in 1915.

The man to-day without a victory Bond is like a man without a country. The government must be backed by our Dollars in no uncertain manner in this momentous hour. The fighting must be forced to a successful conclusion and the sinews of Victory are the millions which we must loan to our government. Every Dollar you lend means a more vigorous prosecution of the great offensive and a quicker termination of the war, with our flag waving gloriously for humanity at the end.

LEND that our arms may force a decisive victory. LEND that the Kaiser may meet his finish the sooner.
LEND that our boys may know we are with them to the limit.

Particulars Concerning Death of Bombardier Herbert S. Dixon

Death Was Instantaneous—Letter From a Chum.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Dixon, of 784 George street, have recently received a letter from France giving some particulars regarding the death of their son, Bombardier Herbert Chesterfield Dixon, of the 60th Battery, C.F.A., B.E.F., who was killed in action on the 17th of September last in France, between Arras and Cambrai, the letter being as follows:

France, Sept. 23rd, 1918.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Dixon,— No doubt you have already received official word of the death of your son Herbert, but as one of his closest chums during the past ten months or so, I thought you would like to hear from me. In relation to his death there is a little consolation in the fact that he died instantaneously unlike three others of the boys who have since died from most frightful wounds, having suffered untold and unimaginable agony.

BOMBARDIER H. C. DIXON.

I worked for nearly an hour carrying out wounded on that tragic day before one of the boys told me about "Dix," as I called him. It knocked me out for several hours, and I lost my nerve for awhile. I really could not realize that my closest friend was gone, and I still find it hard to do so as we were together so much. I was at the funeral services, which were held at a military cemetery, and later I myself planted a large white cross at the head of his grave.

"Dix" was the most popular boy in the Battery, none could resist the charm of his bright cheerful disposition, always ready with wit and humour under most trying circumstances and hardships. He was always a willing worker, a leader amongst us and cool when under shell fire and greatest danger. Truly I cannot praise him enough. I have never enjoyed anybody's comradeship so much. The Battery itself showed its appreciation of his admirable qualities by promotion just the day before his death having made him a bombardier. All the boys are as one man in wishing me to try and convey to you their deepest and sincerest sympathy, but I am afraid I have been unable to do so, for I was hoping that we were going out for a rest where I could get away by myself at a table with pen and ink, but instead we are going into action again, and I am making the best of these few moments in the trench with my knees as a desk and with these materials.

In concluding, I send my sincerest sympathy with the request that if ever I can be of service to you I wish you would kindly let me know.

Yours with deepest sympathy,
Gnr. C. H. Carslake.

Mr. Asa Huycke's New Song Grows Popular

Mr. Asa Huycke's new waltz song, "As She Sang to the Bright Silvery Moon" has delighted music lovers and won the approval of critics who usually maintain a feeling that is none too kindly to present-day popular productions. In his latest composition Mr. Huycke has written both words and music, combining them in a most pleasing and natural effect. The melody is well sustained and connected and without the strained, strange flavour that many of the "jazz-smiths" and slaves of syncopation employ in their never-ending flow of "hits." "As She Sang to the Bright Silvery Moon" is one of those unusual pieces that is tuneful from the first to the last bar with a refrain that should be frequently heard when the public has become familiar with it. Already the sale has been large and there is every prospect that Mr. Huycke with his latest offering will set up a new record surpassing the sales of other compositions that introduced his name and talent to the music world.

FEDERAL COUNCIL APPROVES BILL

(Special to The Examiner.)

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 29 — The Federal Council has approved the bill amending the German constitution as passed by the Reichstag, according to a Berlin despatch received here today.

The Reichstag on Saturday amended the constitution by placing military authorities under the control of civil government. The measure was passed by a large majority. The retirement of General Ludendorff has been reported as having been due to the passage of the measure by the Reichstag.

The mean man always thinks of himself first. It would be well if he also did so last and all the time, because he would never think anything good about anyone else anyway.

Youngest Son of Canon Cornish is Victim of Grippe

Dies After an Illness of a Week Despite All Efforts to Save Him.

The death occurred in Regina last week of Alfred Cole Cornish, the sixteen-year-old son of Rev. and Mrs. Canon Cornish, of Grace church rectory, Regina. His death, which took place at the Grey Nuns' hospital followed an attack of influenza, pneumonia developing. He is the second student of the Regina collegiate institute to succumb to the disease within a few days. He is the younger of two sons of Canon Cornish.

Canon Cornish is one of the best-known clergymen of the Anglican church in the west. He was stationed at Wolseley, where Alfred was born sixteen years ago. He was later rector of the Anglican church at Yorkton, moving to Regina a few months ago, to succeed Rev. E. C. Earp as rector of Grace church.

Alfred was taken ill a week ago last Sunday, and although everything that medical skill and nursing could do, he passed away on Monday, Oct. 21st. The family are particularly grateful to the family doctor and the sisters at the Grey Nuns' hospital for their attention during his illness.

BOWMANVILLE BONUSING THE CAN CO., FOR $50,000

Bowmanville is putting a by-law before the ratepayers to authorize the issue of $50,000 worth of debentures for the purpose of granting a bonus to a company to be formed, called the Canadian Can Co., Ltd., which promises to employ 50 working employees the first five years and eventually 100 employees. The company is to be exempted from local taxation with the exception of school taxes.

Correspondence Concerning the Canadian General Electric Co.'s Case of Alleged Descrimination

Peterboro Plant Was Beginning to Suffer Through Lack of Orders—Less Than a Thousand Men Employed—Public Meeting to be Held on Friday Evening.

In connection with the public meeting that is to be held on Friday evening next on the market square to protest against an alleged case of discrimination in favour of the Canada Cement Company, the appended correspondence between the officials of the Canadian General Electric Company and the powers that be at Ottawa will throw some light on the situation. The first letter is addressed to Senator Frederic Nicholls, President of the Company.

Peterborough, Oct. 4, 1918.

General Superintendent
President

I take this opportunity of advising you that we are getting very slack in every Department. In our general electric business we are very slack indeed; also in the machine shop, and the meter, wire and induction motor departments have far less work than we should have to keep the organization together. Perhaps you will be good enough to tell me what are the prospects for future orders so that I can exercise my own judgment in regard to economizing in organization if necessary.

Yours truly,
(Signed) E. G. PATTERSON,
General Superintendent.

October 16, 1918.

Right Hon. Sir George E. Foster, K. C.M.G., Minister of Trade and Commerce, Ottawa, Ontario.

Dear Sir George: I am informed that by Order-in-Council, or by some other method, the Canada Cement Company has been permitted to place a very large order for electrical machinery in the United States for free importation and I take this opportunity of lodging a protest from this Company against such action upon the part of the Government. At a time when we are endeavouring to correct the balance of trade, business should be conserved to this country, and as a matter of fact it is inconceivable that an industry such as ours should be penalized for the benefit of another.

It is a fact that our works at Peterborough are lacking work and at the present time are only employing about nine hundred, as against a normal employment of about twenty-five hundred, and yet we are asked to look complacently upon the action of the Government in permitting machinery to be imported from the United States that would afford employment of our men for some time to come.

The manufacturer has been subjected to war profits tax and every other kind of tax, and no other class of the community has been more generous in subscribing for war loan bonds than the manufacturers of this country, and I can assure you that such action on the part of the Government has a most depressing effect on Canadian aspirations and initiative.

Many other concerns have received orders for munitions from the United States and have purchased their equipment in Canada; and this Company itself has purchased large quantities of machinery in Canada, although same is to be used for manufacturing munitions for the United States Government. I do not understand why one concern is favoured at the expense of others, but before proceeding any further I will await advice from you.

Yours faithfully,
(Signed) FREDERIC NICHOLLS.
President.

Toronto, October 21st, 1918.

President
E. G. Patterson, Esq.,
General Superintendent,
Peterborough.

I have your letter of the 4th inst., and naturally regret that our Peterborough Works, which we have kept well employed for the last quarter of a century, are so slack in every department that our organization runs the chance of being disrupted. It is regrettable that owing to war conditions comparatively little work is offering at the present time, and it is with great regret that I have to advise you, however, that a very large amount of electrical work has been, in my judgment, most unwisely permitted to be imported from the United States free of duty, thereby taking the bread out of the mouths of our Canadian workpeople and prejudicing the balance of trade against us.

The Government have been insistent that nothing should be purchased in the United States that could be purchased here, and they placed embargoes against a wide variety of commodities and products, and yet notwithstanding this they have privately by Order-in-Council permitted certain favoured industries to import into Canada their requirements of electrical and other machinery free of duty.

I enclose copy of a letter that I wrote last week to the Acting Premier, Sir George Foster, but as yet have received no reply.

Yours truly,
(Signed) FREDERIC NICHOLLS.
President.

Peterborough, Oct. 22nd, '18.

The Prime Minister of Canada,
Ottawa, Ontario.

Rt. Hon. Sir:—It is stated by the Canadian General Electric Company here, and in Toronto, that your government has permitted the Canada Cement Company to import free of duty, electrical equipment that could and should have been bought in Canada, or if in the U. S. then as against the duty. Will you be good enough, Sir, to inform me if this is correct, or otherwise. I enclose copies of correspondence, however, to me of the General Manager of the Company here. I am, Sir,

Yours truly,
(Signed) J. H. BURNHAM.

Mr. J. H. Burnham M.P., who furnished The Examiner with the following letter and enclosures from Sir Robert Borden says that evidently the Prime Minister has not looked into the real situation. Sir George Foster chairman of the War Trade Board which Board has all to do with such matters told Mr. Burnham and Mr. Patterson that it having been ascertained by The Canada Cement Co., that such a contract could be made and that it meant employment for a large number of hands thrown out of employment by the falling off of British orders, the Order-in-Council complained of was passed. It was not at the request of the U. S. Government apparently but just an arrangement made by The Canada Cement Co., through the War Trade Board of which Senator Nicholls says Mr. Jones is managing director while at the same time he is vice-chairman of the War Trade Board. The result is that concerns like the C.G.E. which paid duty in large sums for machinery imported are unable to compete and its employers are thrown out of employment. To accede to the request of the U.S. Government which would make the output and pocket the profits is one thing but this affair is entirely different. The contract apparently was sought out by the vice-chairman of the War Trade Board or his co-partners or approved by him and Senator Nicholls says it enures to the profit of The Canada Cement Co., of which Mr. Jones is managing director. This may be good business but is it fair?

If the contract was an ordinary business one and not one in no way Concerning Canada then the proper course has not been followed. It would not take long if under one pretence and another American manufacturers were allowed in free, for American manufacturers to put Canadian manufacturers out of business and close up the hum and industry of the rapidly growing business world in Canada. The Americans are too strong for us and the same reason that prompts us to resist the invasion of city departmental stores moves us to resist the invasion of foreign manufacturers.

Ottawa, Ont.,
26th October, 1918

Dear Mr. Burnham,

The Minister of Customs informs me that there is no Order in Council or other authority under which electrical machinery could be imported by the Canada Cement Company free of duty for their own use. In July last at the request of the United States Government permission was given for the importation of machinery which should be the property of that Government and should be used for the production of munitions and other equipment for military and naval purposes for the use of their armed forces. It is possible that some electrical machinery may have been imported as the property of the United States Government under this Order in Council, and as to this I am asking the Ministers of Customs to secure a report. Such machinery should be used for not other purpose except the fulfilment of the United States contracts. Copy of Mr. Sifton's letter is enclosed for your information.

Yours faithfully,
R. L. BORDEN.

J. H. Burnham, Esq., M.P.,
Peterborough, Ont.,

Ottawa, October 24, 1918

My dear Sir Robert,—

Enclosed please find the communication from Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., with a copy of the Order in Council which is, I believe, the only one under which the Cement Company can be receiving any machinery. No order has been made allowing them to bring in machinery for their own use but it is quite possible that an arrangement has been made between them and the United States Government by which this machinry may be imported in accordance with the terms of the enclosed Order, the machinery remaining the property of the United States Government.

Yours very truly,
(Sgd) ARTHUR L. SIFTON

Sir Robert Borden,
Prime Minister,
Ottawa.

11-1760

Certified Extract from the Minutes of a meeting of the Treasury Board held on the 11th July, 1918, approved by His Royal Highness the Governor General in Council on the 16th July, 1918.

PRIVY COUNCIL
CANADA

CUSTOMS—The Board recommend that authority be granted permitting imported machinery and plant, the property of the United States Government, to be entered for warehouse and use without payment of duty in the manufacture of munitions and other equipment for military and naval purposes for exportation, for the United States Government, conditional on exportation of the machinery and plant upon completion of the contracts for the munitions and equipment within two years from date of entry for warehouse.

From the papers submitted to the Board it appears that the British Government now enjoys similar privileges to those here in proposed.

RODOLPHE BOUDREAU,
Clerk of the Privy Council.

The Honourable
The Minister of Customs and Inland Revenue.

We do not know why, but the fact remains that most fat women are good cooks.

Women are all right for the Red Cross, but will never make soldiers according to Lieutenant Colonel Maria Leona Bothkarova, commander of the famous Russian Battalion of Death.

Advancing Army Needs Supplies

(By United Press.)

Washington, Oct 29. (By Mail.)—The final strain of victory will mean for Americans at home a measure of conservation and self-denial far greater than anything yet indicated. The liberation of Northern France and Belgium, the crumbling of Eastern wing of the Central Powers and the advance of allied troops into German territory will hit America, as the great materials-production nation of the allies, in a manner that will bring the war straight home and with a seriousness that will reach each citizen.

Food first, then industry, will feel this. Northern France and Belgium are subsisting on starvation rations now, supplied by the United States, mainly. The liberation of these peoples means they once again will have enough to eat. It has been impossible to send them enough, in the past, for the Germans would take it from them. Bulgaria crumbled, mainly because of the food situation, and it is not ulikely the allies will endeavor to respond in a measure to the plea of famine that is likely to arise from the Bulgars.

To move the army forward on the heels of the enemy's retreat, will require more equipment, more steel rails and more of nearly everything that American industry supplies, and there will be a hurried, insistent demand for these things. The final strain also, will call for more men, and a branch of the army which has recently been reorganized and strengthened seems likely to loom in importance—the motor transport corps.

A quick retreat from Belgium cannot be followed with sufficient railroad lines, and communications will have to be kept up for months by means of the motor transport, until the railroad men can extend lines sufficiently to meet the new movements.

In the food supply situation, there is encouragement in the fact that the time required for movement of foodstuffs to Belgium will be shortened by about six days. Present shipments for Belgian relief are routed to Rotterdam, and are obliged to travel in the three mile neural zone north of Scotland. This course is about six days longer than shipments to Ostend or other lower Channel ports would be.

Food administration officials estimate that this saving in shipping probably would be balanced by the increase in food cargoes for Belgium. The policy of pooling war necessities which recently has been made public in the notice of pooling agreements concerning pig tin, and nitrate, for their more efficient distribution, naturally will lessen the burden upon all of the nations fighting Germany, with the exception of America, which will feel an increased burden when the bigger demands caused by evacuation of larger areas by the Germans is effected.

Moreover, the control of these war necessities by a central allied organization, will make estimates on our own conservation accurate, and will be the means of fixing deadlines which can not be overstepped.

The Food administration says that there is no occasion for Americans to suffer from lack of food, provided they will adhere strictly to food programs to be announced soon. Chair. Baruch of the war industries board is not so cheerful about the demands for curtailment of industries.

"General Pershing's orders or steel are staggering," he said, "and what Gen. Pershing wants, we've got to give him."

The expected evacuation of French and Belgian territory obviously will increase these orders.

For the first time in the history of Leland Stanford University women graduates outnumbered the men in the 1918 class.

Final Peace Terms May be Submitted This Week

Terms Will Include the Surrender of the Krupp Works and Heligoland —War News From All Fronts.

WEDNESDAY MORNING BULLETINS

Wednesday Morning Bulletins:

LONDON, Oct. 30.— It is stated that the Versailles conference have agreed on an armistice and final peace terms, which will probably be submitted jointly this week, and will likely include, besides demobilization of German armies, occupation of fortified Rhine towns, Krupp Works and Heligoland, evacuation of Alsace-Lorraine and demobilization of the High Seas fleet.

At a Rapid Rate.

ROME, Oct. 30.—The Allies are advancing at a rapid rate all along the Italian front. They have captured important heights, thousands of prisoners and numerous guns.

Regained Monthoney.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—British have regained Monthoney. Fierce fighting is still going on between the Scheldt and Rhondelle rivers.

French Capture Guise.

PARIS, Oct. 30. —In the advance north of Laon, 850 prisoners were taken. Debeney's army entered Guise. Fifth Army attacks on eight mile front in Herpy sector.

Tuesday Evening Bulletins:

Thousand Prisoners Taken.

ROME, Oct. 29. — War Office announced to-day that a battle which began on the Piave river Sunday by Italian and Allied troops still continues victoriously. One thousand prisoners and much war material has been taken.

Beaverbrook Resigns.

LONDON, Oct. 29.—Baron Beaverbrooke, head of the Propaganda Dept. of the British government, has resigned.

Hungary is Independent.

BASEL, Oct. 29.—The Radical Socialist Party, after a conference at Budapest, decided on a separate and national autonomy for Hungary and the abandonment of German alliance, together with other reforms.

Peterboro Will Have to Pay Higher Prices for Coal Supplies

Increase in Wages Awarded to the Hard Coal Miners and an Advance in the Price of Coal is to be One Result—City Has a Supply of Coal for Sale.

Among the mass of printed matter circulated it is difficult to pick out the wheat from the chaff. One day we have the statement that the shortage will be most pronounced. The day following, (as on the 28th) that the situation is well in hand and that the mines are delivering more coal than ever before, and that all fears of a limited output can be set aside. Probably the truth is in between.

Canada, it is stated, will be allowed a larger amount than at first stated, because the production of coal from the mines promised to be larger Let us hope that such outlook will be filled and with good hard coal at that.

USING PEA COAL

Many people are asking why they are required to accept in the deliveries of coal at their houses a proportion of pea coal. Because the dealer must, in ordering nut size agree to take a portion of the order in pea size. Probably in the proportion of one car of pea to two or three of nut. The breakers, or appliances, that smash up and reduce the coal from the mine to the domestic sizes, supply all sizes at once. Even smaller than pea, known in the trade as "buckwheat". Pea coal mixed with nut forms an almost ideal fuel for the kitchen range. More of it than ever before is on the market, due to the fact that the sizes larger are being diverted to the munition factories where soft coal cannot be used in the processes.

REASSURING NEWS

Possibly some reassuring news as to the hard coal output may be due to the activity of the soft coal men to push into use the better forms of soft —smokeless soft coal, to replace hard coal in domestic use. If a market could be established for soft coal, and it came into favor the hard coal sales would be, discounted for domestic use, once people grew used to handling soft coal in furnaces and heaters. Already several heating systems in this city have been changed from hard to soft coal, and the users express satisfaction. We may see the Nova Scotia soft coals, laid down, as a Government measure, at the wharf at Montreal, freight free to Ontario domestic users. Freight from Montreal to destination to be paid by consumer. Also the North West coals laid down at Fort Henry and head of the lakes.

HIGHER PRICES

A warning note comes from Scranton, Penn., the hub of the hard coal district. The advice to the City Coal Committee is couched as follows:

"The Government, (U.S.) have just notified the miners that they have awarded an increase in wages to take effect from the 15th of October, and that they are also advancing the price of coal accordingly. We were today advised by the operators that we would have to agree in writing that we would give them a rebate for all coal shipped after to-day, (Oct. 24), of the amount the government advances prices. That is you would have to agree to pay us later for the cars shipped to-day the amount per gross ton that the United States Government advances the prices."

This, if correct, would indicate a further advance in the cost of coal to the consumer. The fuel controller, at Ottawa, has fixed a price to the consumer that the dealer may charge, of $2.50 per ton, over the cost of the coal on the track. If coal is, by the above statement, made one dollar dearer, then that amount is clamped on the coal at the other end and makes the price on the track one dollar dearer. Freight rates have been seriously advanced, despite the Government control of the lines. So in the end the consumer has to foot the bill, as we are dependent on the States for our hard coal. We can only submit to prices for something we do not grow, dig or manufacture ourselves.

CITY HAS COAL

Deliveries are being made from the City Fuel Yard. This delivery is hampered by the difficulty of getting teams suitably equipped for the work. Many team drivers and owners of horses are laid up with the prevailing epidemic. Things will not get back to normal in all occupations until the sickness is suppressed or runs its course. Shops and factories are fairly crippled, and coal deliveries are equally hampered.

EVERYBODY SUPPLIED

It is felt that by the middle of November no houses in this city will be without coal. Enough to carry on with, and a further supply is expected in sight. The concession made by the local Fuel Commissioners, who are handling a very vexatious duty, that where large coal is in the house a moderate amount of the smaller sizes may be procured and where small sizes are in the bin something of the larger, or furnace sizes can be had, will relieve a situation that was onerous and tended to provoke friction. And it will be well to recollect that these men are performing a duty that will be for them a thankless work, sure to be criticized, found fault with and recriminated, because the wishes of everyone cannot be at once met. Growing out of the experience at Ottawa, in this city, in other cities, additional regulations may be promulgated, and backed with authority that may serve to make a better distribution in the time of need.

ONE IN EVERY HOME

This window card is given to every purchaser of a Victory Bond with the request that it be hung in the window at least for the duration of the campaign.

In every home in Canada a Victory Bond! That is the Victory Loan objective this year.

Last year Canada made a War Loan record.

Aiming at one bond to every 20 of the population Canada responded by taking one for every ten, 9.6 to be exact.

Now that we all have learned to invest in bonds.

—now that we know how greatly Canada benefits from Victory Loans.

—now that our wonderful fighting men and our noble allies have brought Victory almost within our grasp.

—it is almost certain that one in every five of our people will bring forward their savings and lend them freely to Canada.

That will mean an average of one Victory Bond for every home in Canada.

One in every home!

Display your card in your window. Persuade your neighbour to do the same.

If you do this and you, and You and YOU—if we are all skimping, working, saving with the one end in view, to win the war—Canada's Victory Loan 1918 must meet with overwhelming success.

Issued by Canada Victory Loan Committee in co-operation with the Minister of Finance of the Dominion of Canada.

GRAIN MARKET

What may be the effect on the grain markets of an early peace is still a matter of debate among dealers, some contending that in any case the foreign demands will be such as to warrant high prices for some time to come. In the meantime the speculative market continues to cat on the assumption that peace will inevitably mean an immediate lowering of prices. The Austrian peace note yesterday gave a further impetus to the downward movement yesterday. Cash grains are holding firm, the crop movement being very slow. Among the late fall crops there seems to be as yet very little enquiry. No quotations are given by the Board of Trade committee on buckwheat nor peas. Rye is quoted nominally at $1.75.

Manitoba wheat—In store, Fort William, nominal (not including 2 1-2c. tax); No. 1 northern, $2.24 1-2; No. 2 northern, $22 1½; No. 3 northern, $2.17 1-2; No. 4 wheat, $2.11 1-2.

Manitoba oats—No. 2 C.W., 85 1-2c., in store, Fort William; No. 3, 82 1-2c.; extra No. 1 feed, 82 1-2c.; No. 2 feed, 80 1-2c.

American corn—Not quoted.

Ontario wheat—No. 1 winter, $2.14 to $2.22; No. 2 winter, $2.11 to $2.19; No. 3 winter, $2.07 to $2.15; No. 1 spring, $2.09 to $2.17; No. 2 spring, $2.06 to $2.14; No. 3 spring, $2.02 to $2.10, f.o.b, shipping points, according to freight.

Ontario oats—No. 2 white, new crop, 75c. to 78c.; No. 3, 74c. to 77c., according to freight outside.

Barley—Malting, new crop, $1.02 to $1.07.

Peas—No. 2 nominal.

Buckwheat—Nominal.

Rye—No. 2, nominal.

Ontario Flour — War quality, $10.75, Toronto-Montreal, $10.75, new bags.

Manitoba flour—War quality, $11.65, old crop, Toronto.

Millfeed—Car lots, delivered Montreal; shorts, $42.25; bran, $37.25; feed flour, not quoted; middlings not quoted.

Hay—Baled, track, Toronto, car lots—No. 2, $22 to $23; No. 2 mixed, $20 to $21.50 per ton; straw, car lots, $9.50 to $10.50.

BRITISH HOUSE VOTES MONEY FOR REGISTRATION — MAJORITY OF VOTERS ARE FIGHTING MEN.

LONODN, Oct. 30.—The House of Commons this week voted $3,750,000 to meet the expenses connected with the registrtion for the general elections, which will cover about twenty million voters, including about eight million women. The great majority are soldiers and sailors now on active service. Political circles, it is alleged, have heard rumors of a surprise contest to be made in November.

THE WIFE

BY JANE PHELPS

BRIAN SULKS BECAUSE RUTH'S SALARY IS RAISED.

CHAPTER XXV.

When Mr. Mandel told Ruth she was to have forty dollars a week she could hardly believe in her good fortune. To have so much, and after working so short a time! But she hid her surpise and thanked M. Mandel.

"I shall do my best," she said, in response to a remark he had made, "It will be easy now that I know I am appreciated." (.

"I am delighted with your work. As soon as you get a little further knowledge of business methods and detail, you will more than fill Miss candee's shoes. Your taste and your originality delight me. But in all business there is a certain amount of detail which must be thoroughly grasped before one can become truly expert."

"I realize that, Mr. Mandel, and I shall try to learn as quickly as possible. It is my first business venture, you know."

"Yes, and because it is the first, I am astonished at your grasp. Now about this house of Cary's at Newport. What is your idea?" he changed the subject and it was not mentioned again.

But all day Ruth kept thinking how glad Brian would be, and that she could look for a more attractive place to live.

Brian reached home soon after she did. Dinner was all ready, so Ruth waited until she would be seated at the table before she broke her news, such wonderful news.

Mrs. Crawford had happened to get exactly the dinner Brian liked. A delicately browned steak, baked potatoes, crackling in their scrubbed skins and a thick creamy rice pudding. A simple dinner enough, but Brian's taste was simple.

"Gee, but this looks good!" he exclaimed as they sat down.

"Smells good, too," Ruth returned, her face wreathed in smiles. She was glad Brian was in such good humor. Perhaps after she had told her good news, and they had finished dinner, they would go out somewhere and celebrate. There were several good shows he had said he would like to see.

"I've got some good news for you, Brian," she could wait no longer.

"You've decided to behave yourself and stay at home where you belong?" he asked, his mouth full of steak.

"No—nothing like that! Oh, Brian! it is wonderful! I have only been there a month, and what do you think happened to-day? They raised my salary," she went on, not waiting for an answer, "not only raised it, but doubled it. I am to have forty dollars a week now. Just think what we can do!—why, Brian—aren't you—pleased?" the scowl on his face had quelled her enthusiasm, although she didn't understand it.

"Pleased? No! the place for a woman is in her own home," and pushing his plate away, his dinner half finished, he went into the little bedroom and closed the door.

Ruth sat looking at him, absolutely stunned. She had thought he would be so pleased. What could it be?

Her lip quivered, her eyes filled, and she too pushed her plate away.

Suddenly she realized that the very thing which had so delighted her—the raise—had been unwelcome to Brian. That it was more than he earned, and so hurt his pride.

Ruth dried her eyes and, leaning her elbows on the table, her chin in her cupped hands, she tried to think what she could do, and what she should say to Brian.

"Such a foolish boy!" she muttered with a half smile. Yet in spite of the smile, she felt a resentment toward Brian. He would rather she washed dishes and did other uncongenial work for nothing, than to earn money enough to hire that work done, and give them something extra for other things that they couldn't possibly afford unless she earned it.

It was the only possible solution of Brian's actions. Should she follow him into the other room and coax him back to good nature, or should she let him fight out alone? She decided on the latter course. From what Mr. Mandel had said, she would be entitled to anothe raise as soon as she had mastered the detail of the business; and if she soothed and petted Brian out of his sulks this time, she would have it to do all over again when her next raise came.

Ruth had entire faith in her own ability, as far as the work she had undertaken was concerned. Her whole heart was in it, and she had no intention of giving up so promising a career in a profession she had loved ever since her childhood. She smiled as she thought it was about time to hear from her aunt—who also would object to what she, Ruth, was doing. But her objections would be simply on the ground that it was unladylike for her niece to do work of any sort in a shop. She really was proud of Ruth's ability—in which she differed from Brian, who, because of his indifference to the subject, thought little of her talent.

"Dessert is on the table, Brian!" Ruth called as Mrs. Clayborne brought in the rice pudding. Then she hid a smile as the door opened and Brian came slowly in, a sulky look on his face ,and again seated himself at the table, but without speaking.

Paper Controller About to Order Cutting Off of Unpaid Subscriptions.

At a public hearing in Ottawa last week in connection with paper conservation, the Paper Controller for Canada intimated that regulations about to be issued would include one to the effect that:

Publishers of daily newspapers must cease sending their newspapers to subscribers three months in arrears unless subscriptions be definitely renewed and all arrears fully paid.

The reason for this regulation of the Paper Controller is that it is the practice of some publishers to send their newspaper until ordered stopped, and in cases of removal from that city very often the paper is continued at a loss, in which case there is virtual loss of paper. It is to prevent paper waste that the new regulation has been decided upon.

The manufacture of paper consumes labor, wood, coal, chemicals and transporrtation facilities, and every ton of paper saved means just so much more labor, raw materials, chemicals, fuel and transportation available for urgent war needs. For these reasons the Government insists that paper shall be saved, and proposes that only those who pay for their publications shall receive them.

Under these regulations The Examiner will have no choice in the matter of dealing with subscriptions in arrears for over three months.

You need The Examiner, and we want to continue sending it to you. So, if your subscription is in arrears please pay up at once to prevent a discontinuance of your subscription, in compliance with the ruling of the News Print Commissioner.

Javelle Water.

Wherever water is used in preparing bleaches it should be soft. The alkali in hard water affects all chemical substances. Javelle water is a standard preparation for bleaching white things and removing spots and stains, but it must not touch colored surfaces. To make it, dissolve half a pound of washing soda in a pint of boiling water and mix it with a quarter pound of chloride of lime dissolved in a quart of boiling water. Stir well, let settle, pour off the clear liquid and keep closely corked in a dark place.

It Wasn't Annie.

Auntie felt called upon to chide Annie for getting wet so often. One day mother and auntie were sitting by the dining table talking of Annie's still being out when it was beginning to rain.

Just then they heard the kitchen door open softly.

"Who has wet feet now?" called auntie.

An ominous stillnes for the space of three seconds, then a gruff voice replied:

"The iceman."

A Portrait.

When he can't get front seats at the theatre he growls about the box office discrimination; when he can he decides not to take them after all—for the show can't be a good one, or they would have been gone long ago. We all know the complete pessimist. He is almost as depressing as the professional optimist.

Not Too Bad.

"Both my husband and I had to go to a hospital on the day we were married and submit to operations for appendicitis."

"What an unfortunate experience!"

"Oh, it might have been worse. We would probably have spent the money on a honeymoon trip anyhow."

Quite a Success.

Wife of the Professor — Charles, here is a telegram—an explosion in your laboratory and the place wrecked.

Professor—Thank goodness! Then that experiment was a success after all.

Progression.

"But sometimes it's right to tell a white lie, isn't it?"

"Perhaps. But I notice that when a man gets that idea once it isn't long till he becomes color blind."

PLANT INTELLIGENCE.

Maurice Maeterlinck Justifies Belief In Their Wisdom.

Gather, if you will, from the side of the path, in the very first tuft that you see, a blade of any grass, and you will find at work a little independent, untiring, unexpected intelligence. Here are two poor little creeping plants that you have seen a thousand times on your walks, for they are found everywhere, even in the tiniest crannies into which a bit of dust has been blown. They are two varieties of wild lucern, two bad weeds in the most modest sense of the word.

One bears a red blossom, the other a yellow crest the size of a pea. When you see them among other plants, you would hardly think that they, long before the illustrious geometrician and physician of Syracuse had discovered and tried to apply, not to the raising of liquids, but to aviation, the astonishing properties of the power of Archimedes. They place their seeds in light spiral envelopes, with three or four turns, admirably constructed, when figuring upon their falling and being picked up by the wind, to be whirled a long distance in the air.

One of these, the yellow one, has even improved upon the apparatus of the red one, by furnishing the edges of the spiral with a double row of points, with the plain intention of attaching itself to any passer-by, by the clothing of humans, or the hair and wool of animals. It is clear that it hopes to enjoy the advantages of the aeronaut—that is to scatter its seeds by aid of the sheep, rabbits, etc., thus going even further than those taken up by the air.

The most touching part of all this great effort is that it is useless. The poor red and yellow lucerns have deceived themselves. Their remarkable power will do them no good. They cannot act unless they fall from a certain distance, from the height of a tall tree; but dropping amid the grass, they fail to germinate. Here we have a curious instance of the errors, disappointments, experiments and little mishaps, occurring so often in nature, for we need study very little to know that nature never makes a mistake.

It is not only in the seed, or the blossom, but in the whole plant, twigs, leaves, roots, that we may find, if we will turn our attention to their humble work for a while, real traces of calculating and lively intelligence.

Just recollect the magnificent efforts toward the light of those branches turned the other way, or the ingenious and courageous efforts made by trees when in danger.

Among the plants which offer the most striking proofs of initiative, plants which we can really call animated or sensitive claim the right to a detailed study. Let me but call to mind the delicate right of the sensitive plants, the modest mimosa, known to all of us. Other plants capable of spontaneous movements are less well known, notably the hedysarum gyrans, or waving fenugreek, which moves in a most surprising manner.

This little plant, originating in Bengal, but often cultivated in our gardens, does a kind of perpetual complicated dance in honor of light. —Maurice Maeterlinck.

Personality and Character.

There is a difference between "personality" and "character." Personality is the larger thing and includes character. By personality is meant the mysterious entity going to make up one's being or nature. It is equivalent to self consciousness, or individualized being. Character, on the other hand, strictly defined, means the attributes of the individual, as the "character" for intelligence, judgment, moral rectitude, and so forth. In a word personality is the more metaphysical, character more ethical.

PUBLIC IS WARNED Against Taking Substitutes for Nuxated Iron

Physicians Below Say That Ordinary Metallic Iron Preparations Cannot Possibly Give The Same STRENGTH, POWER AND ENDURANCE As Organic Iron—Nuxated Iron

United States Judge Atkinson Gives Opinion

Careful investigation by physicians among druggists and patients has revealed the fact that there are thousands of people taking iron who do not distinguish between organic iron and metallic iron, and that such persons often fail to obtain the vital energy, strength and endurance which they seek, simply because they have taken the wrong form of iron.

Therefore, physicians mentioned below, advise those who feel the need of a strength and blood builder to go to their family doctors and obtain a prescription calling for organic iron—Nuxated Iron—and present this to their druggist so that there may be no question about obtaining the proper article. But if they do not wish to go to the trouble of getting a prescription for Nuxated Iron then be sure to look on the label and see that the words NUXATED IRON are printed thereon—not Nux and Iron nor any other form of iron, but Nuxated Iron.

The remarkable results produced by Nuxated Iron and its widespread sale (it being estimated that over three million people annually are to-day using it), has led to the offering of numerous substitutes, and these physicians say that health officials and doctors everywhere should caution the public against accepting substitutes in medicines and they especially warn against accepting substitutes for Nuxated Iron, which, instead of being organic iron may be nothing more than a metallic iron compound which may in some cases produce more harm than good. The widespread publication of the above information has been suggested by Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and the Westchester County Hospital; Dr. Ferdinand King, New York Physician and Medical Author and others, so that the public may be informed on this subject and protected from the use of metallic iron under the delusion that it is Nuxated Iron or at least something as good as Nuxated Iron.

It is surprising how many people suffer from iron deficiency and do not know it. If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength and see how much you have gained.

Manufacturers' Note—Nuxated Iron, which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians is not a secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists. Unlike the older inorganic iron products it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed in this city by all good druggists.

It has restored my appetite and my vitality. I feel that I have dropped off the burden of months of toil in the few weeks that I have been following the very simple directions for the use of Nuxated Iron.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Ace of the Air

By GENEVIEVE ULMAR

A parvenue and tuft hunter, it was quite natural that "Judge" Hiram Sillingsby should be delighted to have an introduction to Lieut. Norman Montague. It was at his club that one of its members brought the acquaintanceship about. It soon grew into intimacy, for the judge was effusive in courting a military lion, so believed, and the shrewd "lieutenant" was making a business of breaking in wherever pleasure and profit promised.

"Lieutenant of what?" a suspicious fellow club member asked of the sponsor of "the hero from the front."

"Oh, not in this war, he says," explained the other. "He was a lieutenant in the English army. Then he became interested in aeronautics and offered his services to the French army. He's done his bit famously, I understand."

"How is that?" propounded the skeptic.

"He's an Ace of the Air."

"Ah, indeed?"

"Yes, you know that they so designate an aviator who has brought down five enemy machines."

"Which this lieutenant of yours did?"

"Fourteen of them."

"Tell you, judge," responded the other, "you know our plant has made a number of airplane motors. Well, in a conversation with your lieutenant, I mentioned some points in air navigation as applying to our motor. He showed ignorance of the first principles of motor construction. That made me suspicious, for there are a lot of fake war heroes these days."

"Oh, that's easily explained," the champion of the doughty lieutenant declared. "I am a crack automobilist, but I wouldn't know the exhaust from the manifold. Same way with Montague. It isn't mechanical details with him. It's nerve and proficiency at the wheels and levers."

Lieutenant Montague was generally received as a distinguished personage. Mr. Sillingsby introduced him at his home. Miss Hortense Sillingsby, husband hunting, began to wonder if he was not a desirable party and helped exploit him in a social way.

"Oh, somewhere in France. You know we are restricted as to exact latitude and longitude," the clever "ace of the air" would say evasively, when cornered as to location of some of the scenes of valor and hairbreadth escape he described. "The commander of our corps insisted on my leaving the front after the time I brought down four airplanes in one skirmish for the enemy had set a price on my head. That was the time a shot just grazed me and but for my medal would have ended me. See," and he would exhibit the medal in question. "That shot sheared off my engraved name clean as a whistle."

The Sillingsbys gave a reception in honor of Lieutenant Montague. Some very good people attended the function and among them were the Ashleys, and that was a cause of intense gratification to Miss Sillingsby.

Hortense had always entertained a sentiment of dislike and resentment towards that old and respected family. The Ashleys were not of the newly rich. The Ashleys had only moderate means, but were of blue blood in the truest sense of the word. They had entertained guests of national distinction and always courteously included the Sillingsbys in their functions.

Lieutenant Montague had exhibited his prize medal as usual and Aida Ashley viewed it as it was passed around. It was a week later that she received a visit from a cousin who lived in another town. Quite incidentally Aida mentioned the lieutenant and the medal, and general details concerning him. Her cousin was interested and there was an enigmatical expression on his face at the recital.

A few days later this same cousin called, this time having with him a companion in uniform. The latter had a face that at once interested Aida. He was apparently a convalescent, and, the cousin informed Aida, was home from active service in the army abroad on a furlough.

It was later in the day that this young man and Aida's cousin called upon Lieutenant Montague at his hotel. The latter changed color as he recognized the convalescent.

"I have called for my property, James Martin," spoke his caller, a tinge of sternness and menace in his tones, "including the medal. I will give you twenty-four hours to disappear."

The false lieutenant acted like a whipped cur. He, indeed, vanished that same night, after passing worthless checks on his friends to a large amount. He had robbed Walter Newcombe, the real "ace of the air," when the latter was supposed to be dying in a hospital in France, and was exploiting the medal and the past valiant deeds of Newcombe. Martin had been a speculator in news on the battle front and driven thence for selling the same to the enemy.

Walter Newcombe was modest, not desirous of publicity, but a sharp reporter got hold of the case and the Sillingsbys were humiliated by the exposure.

So it came about that there was a social function at the Ashley home that far outshone that of the Sillingsbys. Hortense was invited but did not come, and also made it convenient to hide her chagrin at a distance when the brilliant wedding of Aida and the real "Ace of the Air" took place.

Unrenewable Patent.

A lawyer who makes a specialty of patent cases was once engaged in a case before a country justice.

"Who are you anyway?" demanded the justice.

"Well," replied the lawyer, "I'm an attorney."

"P'raps you are, but I never heard one talk like you do. What kind of a one are you?"

"I'm a patent attorney."

The magistrate rubbed his chin in thought. "Well, all I've got to say it," he said slowly, "that when the patent expires I don't believe you can ever get it renewed again."

How Much He Thought About Her.

They were on their way to the theatre, and she was tremendously happy. She felt that the words she longed to hear would be spoken that night, and the idea made her almost dizzy with delight.

"Mr. Sampson," she said softly, "why do you wear that bit of string upon your finger?"

"Oh," replied Mr. Sampson, taking it off, "that was to remind me of my engagement with you to-night."

It wasn't much, but it was enough to take away the delightful dizziness. —London Chronicle.

Balaam's Sword.

"Here, sir," said the antique dealer, displaying a huge sword to a clerical-looking collector, "ever see anything more interesting than that? That's Balaam's sword."

"But, my good man, that cannot be," said the dominie, "Balaam never had a sword. He only wished for one."

"Quite right, sir," said the dealer. "This is the one he wished for!"

So It Does.

An Irishman was asked how many legs a horse has. "Eight," he replied; "one at each corner and two on each side."

"Don't you think that a foolish answer?" he was asked.

The Irishman replied with wisdom when he said, "A fool question deserves a fool answer."—London Answers.

Pie Plates.

The housekeeper who bakes pies and then puts them in rows on the shelf or in the pantry for future use should not use a tin pie plate. No matter how clean the plate has been scoured before using the tin will be likely to rust and there will be rust spots on the pie itself. Instead, use earthenware pie plates.

Steel, Wood and an Embargo

Business men know something of the troubles that beset the path of those who need steel; but not all of them know that the situation is not getting easier.

The United States Government, for instance, has embargoed the use of steel for pulleys except upon war orders.

But an interesting development has come out of this embargo.

Men who previously were quite honest in their convictions regarding the great efficiency of a metal pulley have discovered that a Dodge Wood-Split Pulley will not only do all that a metal pulley ever did, but it will do it better and for a less cost.

They have discovered that the surface of a Dodge Wood-Split Pulley provides greater adhesion, hence there is less belt slippage, and a corresponding saving of power. They have found the Dodge Wood-Split Pulley lighter and better balanced; consequently, there is less weight friction. They have proved that the Dodge Wood-Split Pulley may be run at higher speeds than metal pulleys without danger of bursting.

And, most interesting of all, they have learned that they can get Dodge Wood-Split Pulleys when they order them. We carry large stocks at our factory and branches, and ship all sizes from 4-inch diameters up to 6-feet diameters on the day orders are received.

ONE DOMINION FRICTION SURFACE BELT OUTLASTS FOUR OTHER BELTS

ST. MAURICE PAPER CO., LIMITED
528-536 BOARD OF TRADE BUILDING
MONTREAL
REPLY TO THREE RIVERS, QUE.

August 22rd, 1918.

The Canadian Consolidated Rubber Co., Limited,
Rubber Building,
Montreal, Canada.

Gentlemen:

In July, 1915, we installed one 150 H. P. Motor to drive two 8 ft. x 30 ft. Barking Drums and five Conveyors.

On this drive from the date of installation up to the spring of 1917, about 21 months, we used the belts of four different manufacturers all of which failed completely.

In the spring of 1917, we equipped this drive with an 8 ply 16" Dominion Friction Surface Belt, which has operated to date, the machines and conveyors mentioned above, without the slightest trouble or the loss of one minute. This belt looks good for many more months of service as it shows practically no wear, or injury from the heavy load it has to carry.

We wish to say further that the technical advice which you have given us in connection with belting throughout our plant has been of great value to us.

We cannot commend too highly the products and service of the Dominion Rubber System.

Very truly yours,
ST. MAURICE PAPER CO., Limited.

Maintained Their Honor.

A deputy in the Italian Parliament lost his shirt in a sleeping compartment while on a railway journey. He wrote an indignant letter to the directors of the line, in which he said, "It is shameful that the railway servants, for whom so much has been done by members of Parliament, should dare to appropriate the belongings of passengers." A few days after this protest he received a letter signed by 200 railway employes, in which was inclosed a postal order for $1, which, the letter said, was the result of a small collection and which the railway men hoped would enable him to buy another shirt.

Her Tongue.

They were talking of figures of speech.

"Have you ever noticed," said one, "how fond people are of vegetable metaphors when they are dealing with a woman? Her cheeks are 'roses,' her lips are 'cherry,' her hands are always 'lily' hands, her mouth is a 'rosebud,' her complexion is 'like a peach,' and her breath is 'fragrant as honeysuckle'."

"You've forgotten one," said the cynic.

"What's that?"

"Her tongue. It is a 'scarlet runner'."

Putting Them at Ease.

Precedence is not the only puzzle in official and social circles in any city, but to say the right thing at the right time is equally necessary.

"To make mistakes in speech is suicidal," said a state department official recently. "Let it not be as in the case of Mrs. Brody, who gave a party, and when all the guests were in the parlor she entered with a beaming smile and said:

"'Do make yourselves at home, ladies. I'm at home myself, and I wish you all were.'"

Tricking the Hens.

Chinamen have a way of tricking hens so that they assist in the hatching of fish. Fish eggs are carefully placed in an eggshell, which is then sealed and placed under an unsuspecting hen. In a few days the spawn is warmed into life, and the contents of the shell are then cast into a shallow pool, where the sunshine completes the work.

Jollying Him.

"Don't tell me there is nothing in fortune telling," exclaimed the fiancee. "I consulted one to-day, and she described you to a dot."

"What did she say?" inquired the fiancé.

"She said you had thoughtful eyes, a firm mouth and a noble brow."

The Fish-shop Man.

Lord Reading said at a luncheon in New York:

"This war is making England a more democratic country. There was a lot of snobbishness in England, a lot of social distinctions that already seem as silly as—well, as silly as the fish-shop man.

"Two soldiers, one rainy night in Flanders, lay side by side in a shell hole. A flare lit up their faces and the first soldier said respectfully:

"'Excuse me, sir, but didn't you useter keep a fried fish shop in the Old Kent road?'

"'I did, mate,' said the second soldier, in an affable, condescending voice. 'Why?'

"'Well, I useter run a whelk-barrer there.'

"'What!' said the second soldier, 'are you the bloke as had that whelk barrer? Well, I'm blowed! Bill me, if this war don't 'ave level some of us down.'"

GAS IN THE STOMACH IS DANGEROUS

Recommends the Daily Use of Magnesia To Overcome Troubles, Caused by Fermenting Food and Acid Indigestion.

Gas and wind in the stomach accompanied by that full bloated feeling after eating are almost certain evidences of the presence of excessive hydrochloric acid in the stomach, creating so-called "acid indigestion."

Acid stomachs are dangerous because too much acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach often leading to gastritis accompanied by serious stomach ulcers. Food ferments and sours, causing the distressing gas which distends the stomach and hampers the normal functions of the vital internal organs, often affecting the heart.

It is the worst of folly to neglect such a serious condition or to treat with ordinary digestive aids which have no neutralizing effect on the stomach acids. Instead, get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This will drive the gas, wind and bloat right out of the body, sweeten the stomach, neutralize the excess acid and prevent its formation, and there is no ache or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and the best form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

HOW HAIR GROWS.

Silvery Color Due to More or Less Air—Explanation of Colors.

The attempt to find an illuminating account of the factors which may modify or determine the growth of hair will usually be a vain one. The older writers, who did not always hesitate to make dogmatic statements when they were required to produce a finished account sometimes discussed the subject with considerable freedom. Not so the modern scientific author, who realizes that every sentence from his pen is likely to be subjected to the scrutiny and criticism of someone who has studied the topic at first hand. The general descriptions of the processes of growth have been satisfactory. Facts concerning these processes are permanent acquisitions of physiology, but they do not commonly rise to the level of practical problems. Why does or does not the hair grow in certain regions in certain individuals? What are the conditions contributory to growth? How are the natural changes in color brought about and what determines them?

Experimental studies in this field cannot readily be conducted on man. Certain facts are of course matter of common observation. The beard grows anew after shaving, and the tonsorial practice is believed to stimulate the growth of the hair. Precisely why it does is not clear. The beard is also said to grow more rapidly in summer.

If the pigment which produces the natural color of the hair is lacking, the hairs present a gray or white appearance. The silvery color may further be due to the presence of more or less air in the hair. To account for the blanching of the hair—the familiar accompaniment of old age and a phenomenon which frequently begins long before middle life is fairly concluded—various views have been set forth at different times. The silvery gray appearance which is seen in aging persons is probably characterized to some extent by the occurrence of large number of air cavities, and not by the destruction of the pigment. Hair pigment can be destroyed only by the most vigorous treatment. Dry hairs contain more air, and therefore will appear somewhat lighter in color than moist ones; but black hair may be dried to the utmost without becoming white, and the hair of mummies dried through the centuries still show their pigment precisely as do fresh hairs.

The explanation of the familiar coloring changes of the hair is probably to be found, not in a destruction of pigment already present, not on any bleaching of hairs already formed, but rather in a complete renewal of the hair. Pigmented hairs fall out and are replaced by unpigmented or white ones. The appearance of gray or white hair is therefore attributed to the formation of a new hair coat, rather than by the alteration of the old one. Completely pigmented hairs never turn gray; they fall out. It is, nevertheless, observed that the process of pigment formation may cease during the development of a hair. In that event the tip will remain pigmented though the base appears white.

How are we to harmonize these statements with the many published records of hair having turned white suddenly as the presumable consequence of fright or other profound emotion? A careful study of the reputed instances has invariably shown that they were mythical.

Everything Is Up.

The use of the word "up" as applied to railway destinations reminds a correspondent of the Manchester Guardian of some observations by a Swiss friend. "When I go back to my country," she said, "I shall certainly tell the Swiss people a new way to speak English. I shall tell them that they must use 'up' to everything. Everything is up. I am knocked up in the morning. I make up, I get up, I button up my dress. Why 'up'? I button it down. Then I eat up my breakfast, I drink up my coffee, and then somebody washes up the pots and cleans up the house. I pick up my umbrella and go out of the house, and when I see a friend in front I catch her up. How can I catch her up? It is ridiculous! It is all up. You lie up when you are ill, and you save up for a rainy day. Your English language is very funny. My employer put his head in at my office the other day and said, 'I want you to stop to-night.' So I got up and put my cloak on. When he saw me he got quite worked up. He said, 'Why have you got your cloak on?' I told you to stop,' I said, 'I have stopped.' Why was he angry? I look into the dictionary, and 'stop' means 'leave off,' and he meant me to go on."—Family Herald.

Try Making Your Own Cough Remedy

You can save about $2, and have a better remedy than the ready-made kind. Easily done.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth), pour it into a 16-oz. bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is 16 ounces of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made, and saves easily $2. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break up severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.
